Garden Club festival

The Cohasset Garden Club is planning a Standard Flower Show — "Fall Festival of Arts and Flowers," Sept. 21 from 1 to 7 p.m.

It will be held in the Unitarian Parish House and in the second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common.

Tickets for the Flower Show are $5 per person and may be picked up through Mrs. F. Allen Weisenfluh, 60 Summer St., 383-0691.

Mrs. James B. Grinnell is the General Chairman, assisted by Mr. Frederick L. Good, Jr. and Mrs. Robert L. Littlehale, Jr.

The Cohasset Garden Club is a member of the Garden Club of America and the Massachusetts Federation of Garden Clubs.

Daniels will teach piano

Students are invited to enroll in piano lessons from Priscilla Daniels of Cohasset.

She stresses the importance of music theory, harmony and rhythm study, as the ABC's of piano background, and she incorporates these essentials as part of every weekly lesson.

Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, magna cum laude, with over 25 years experience in teaching.

She has recently played at The Parker House in Boston, The Whiton House, Hugo's and is currently playing at the new Harrington's Restaurant in Cohasset.

While encouraging students to compose and to perform for one another, she strives to communicate an appreciation of the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

Gracious Lady Routes

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) and Charles English, owner of the Gracious Lady commuter boat, have announced September 1 as the target date for the beginning of ground transportation service to and from the Hingham-Boston commuter boat. The Gracious Lady, which carries 149 passengers, commutes daily between the Hingham Shipyard on Route 3A and Rowe's Wharf in Boston.

Murray said that as of Wednesday, September 1, commuters may catch a South Shore Bus which will travel on Route 3A from Marshfield to Hingham and will make the following stops:

--junction of Routes 3A and 139;
--Marshfield Fairgrounds;
--Casa Berini Restaurant;
--Route 3A and Summer Street;
--Route 3A and Old Oaken Bucket plant;
--Scituate Police Station;
--Stop and Shop parking lot;
--Cohasset Winter Gardens;
--Station Street parking lot,
--and the Hingham Shipyard.

The buses will leave Marshfield (the 3A-139 stop) at 6:10 a.m., 7:15 a.m. and 8:40 a.m., make the stops listed above and arrive at the shipyard to meet the 7 a.m., 8:05 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. boat departures. These will arrive at Rowe's Wharf, Boston, at 7:30 a.m., 8:35 a.m. and 10:10 a.m. respectively. Upon arrival in Boston, a double decker bus will transport commuters from Rowe's Wharf and make the following stops:

--State Street and Congress Street;
--Government Center (Court Street and Cambridge Street);
--Bowdoin and Derne;
--Joy and Beacon;
--Arlington and St. James;
--Dartmouth and Huntington (in back of the Prudential Center).

The bus will return commuters to the 4:20 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. boats, leaving the Pru at 3:45 p.m. and 4:55 p.m. for the respective departures, making the same stops.

Commuters should calculate the arrival time of the bus to their stop from the approximate length of time it is from the point of origination.

The fare for the Marshfield-Hingham Shipyard bus ranges from 50 cents (minimum) to $1 (maximum) each way. The fare for the Rowe's Wharf-Prudential bus is 50 cents each way.

Contributors to 'Singles' supplement wanted

Single men and women who would like to contribute to the upcoming supplement, "Single on the South Shore" Oct. 12, are invited to submit their ideas or reflections through one of the following ways:

— A Single Perspective, a short essay (one-page double-spaced typed) on any aspect of the single style.

— A Single Circumstance, a short anecdote, or brief commentary on the nunaces of singleness.

— A Single Moment, tantamount to a wee observation of singleness.

At the request of the contributor names will not accompany articles. Should a byline be preferred, it will naturally be included.

People who have suggestions, comments, anticipations about the content of the supplement are equally welcome to forward them.

Nomination deadline

The Department of Elder Affairs will extend the Aug. 19 deadline for acceptance of nomination petitions from Silver-Haired Legislature candidates to Wednesday, Sept. 7, 5 p.m.

Papers must be filed at the Department of Elder Affairs office, 38 Chauncy St., Boston. "While there are over 200 candidates already running in the September 21 election, we have heard from several individuals who have just returned from summer holidays and become aware of it," Richard H. Rowland, Secretary of Elder Affairs, explained. "Since the Department is committed to encouraging increased participation in the program, we agreed to extend the deadline."

Twenty-five signatures are necessary in order for a candidate's name to be printed on the ballot. Write-in votes will also be counted.

Many faceted education system set for 'go'

Schools ready

By Theresa Sullivan

Getting ready for the school year requires planning and meetings. Sometimes it requires a little imagination and unusualness too.

Osgood School

This is what the principal of Osgood School, John Creamer said last week when he was asked about the upcoming year: "You'd never guess what I'm doing now. I'm coloring letters.

"I'm trying to put up a sign at the beginning of school. We want to create an atmosphere that's exciting."

Creamer put down his crayons to talk about some of the areas uppermost in his mind as opening day appoached.

Computers came to mind. "Getting the kids to know how to use the keyboard is important," he said. "We try to make the computer available."

Although he would like students to become comfortable with a computer, he said he does not want the computer to interfere with the child's usual classwork.

"The teachers monitor it," he said. "It's an enrichment activity."

He said the health education program "needs to be given a greater degree of devotion." He said reading, and arithmetic are important, but social studies and science are essential to giving students a "broad kind of experience."

Creamer included health education as part of that

Cohasset-Scituate rivalry

By Cindi Bondi

There will be a new "The Game" this high school sports year.

Scituate and Cohasset will officially establish a rivalry when Scituate joins the South Shore League this fall.

Scituate High School Athletic Director Paul Svensen said, "Actually we have reunited 1965's Old Colony League members: Scituate, Cohasset, E. Bridgewater, Norwell, Hull, Hanover, Rockland and Duxbury in the South Shore League, which additionally includes Abington, Holbrook, Middleboro and Whitman-Hanson."

Cohasset High School Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said, "Cohasset is partially responsible for Scituate joining the South Shore League. We welcome Scituate. They have been excellent competitors when we have scrimmaged them in the past three years."

Scituate and Cohasset have had a taste of rivalry. Last year the Cohasset boys golf team came in fourth right behind Scituate at third in the state semi-finals. Two years ago Scituate was the only team to break Cohasset hockey team's 18 game winning streak.

In addition, Scituate and Cohasset's girls soccer teams proved to be evenly matched. "The victories go back and forth between them and the games seem close," said Chatterton.

Chatterton thinks the new South Shore League will be beneficial to Cohasset because it is broken into two divisions. "We could not bang heads with Middleboro,

PSO veterans

By Moira McCarthy

No longer a rookie organization in Cohasset, the Parent School Organization is coming back smarter and stronger in their second year of existence.

"Our intention has been each year to focus on a few goals that we can achieve, reach them, and then set more goals," PSO president Sue McNamara of Fair Oaks Lane said.

But judging by the layout of what has been and it to be done by the PSO, they don't just set a few goals.

The PSO is structured into 11 sub-committees, dealing with everything from publicity, to METCO, to arts enrichment.

Each sub-committee sets up their own list of priorities and goals for the school year.

In September, after the ruckus of the first week back has calmed, the sub-committees assigned to each of the schools will meet with the principals and teachers, "to help decide exactly how parents can provide the best support to the school." She pointed out the providing of room mothers, organization of open house, organization of meetings with school parents, and programs of early childhood education as goals the primary level schools' sub-committees had set.

"Each school operate with a lttle independence," she said.

At the junior and senior high school level, the PSO's prime interest shifts to the organization of social events.

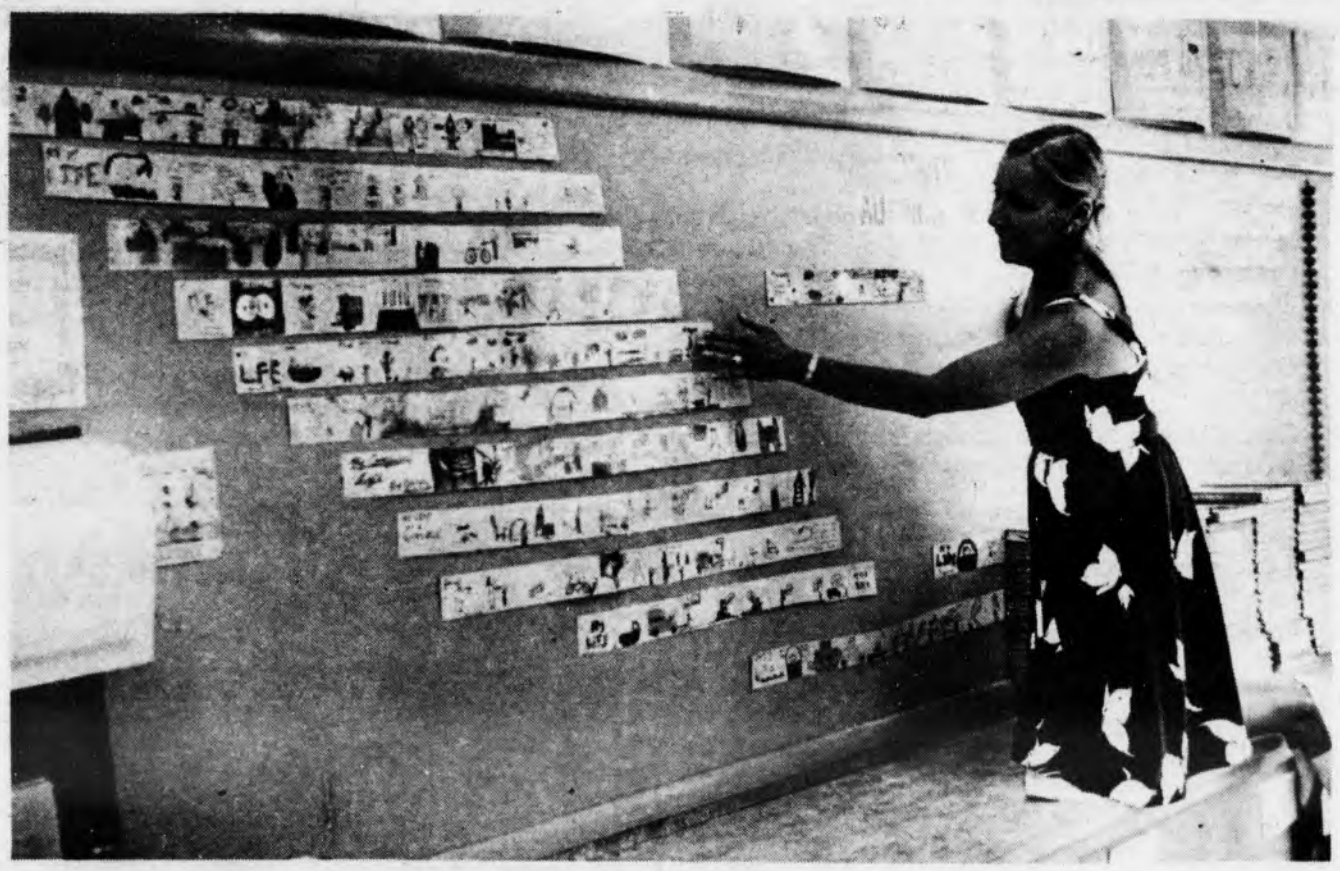
They have organized a back to school dance for the juniors, and are planning on coordinating special graduation activities for the seniors.

Also in the making are plans for the fifth grade outdoor education school, and a special orientation for parents of sixth graders who will be going up to the high school next year.

And as McNamara pointed out, that's just a bit of the "few goals" the committee is working hard on.

The METCO sub-committee, headed by Judy Bronstein of Sohier Street, works mostly to coordinate the host families (who function as a type of daytime guardians for the students) with the students and their families.

This year, they're planning a "getting to know you" type of pot luck supper, where the families will meet.



"It's important to realize that not every METCO town provides host families. METCO thinks what Cohasset is doing is invaluable to the program."

The host families come in handy when a child wants to participate in extra-curricular activities that would keep them in town after school hours, she said.

"And it works both ways. The METCO students stay over down here, and the Cohasset students very often go to Dorchester or Roxbury and visit the METCO student's home. So it provides education from both sides."

This year, the METCO program is still in need of eight host families. Anyone interested should contact Bronstein.

Sewer fine increase to $2,000 a day

By Patricia Anne Walsh

There has been some new developments in the sewer system fight with the state this week.

State Assistant Attorney General upped the fine for Cohasset from $1,000 to $2,000.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson replied to the state, arguing in the town's behalf and state and federal environmental officials met with the Sewer Commission chairman to discuss alternative approaches to building a large, new central sewer plant.

The discussion was frank, thorough, unemotional and logical.

The state documents request the court to order the town to pay a civil penalty of $2,000 per day from April 11, 1983 until the date the town either accepts the grant offer or appropriates funds to meet the obligations.

Rogers further asks the court to order the town to accept the state grant and proceed with the development of the new central plant within 48 hours of an order or to appropriate funds within 30 days.

She adds the town has failed to submit an environmental notification form to the state and concluded

Cohasset's week . . .

Corner Meat closing

The Corner Meat Shops, Inc., an area meat, vegetable and grocery store chain, will close its doors this week in Marshfield, Cohasset, Assinippi and Hingham.

Current owner Dave Richardson of Marshfield said he is negotiating with a new owner and some of the stores may reopen under new ownership next week.

Richardson said he is closing the stores because "not enough profitable business was running through the larger stores."

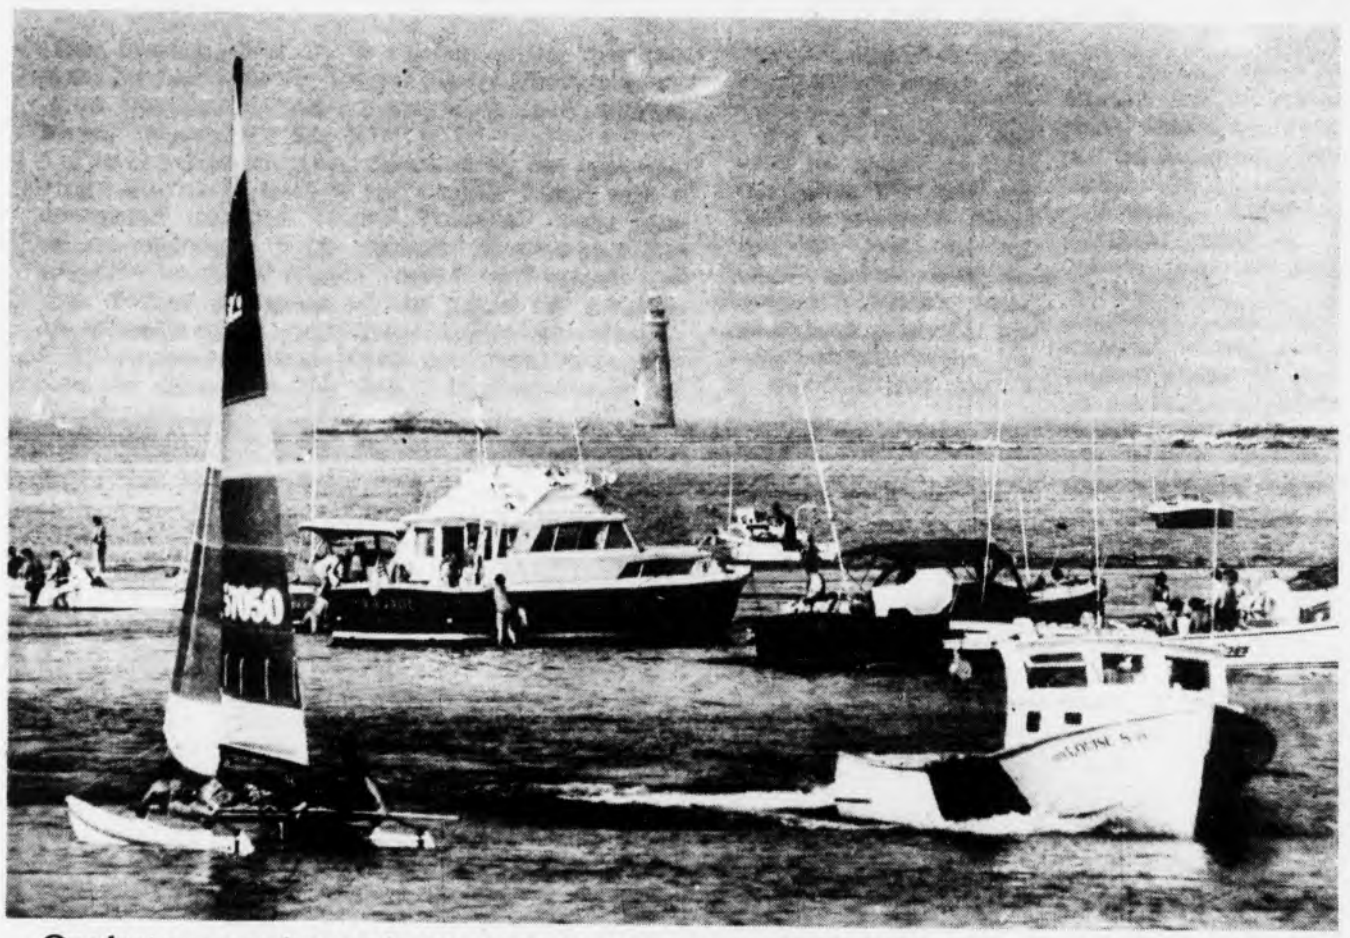
The Cohasset and Marshfield stores may close earlier this week if all the merchandise is sold. Those stores are now running a 25 percent discount sale. Richardson expects Assinippi and Hingham will maintain normal business hours this week.

The status of the company employees is still uncertain. Some, said Richardson, may be staying when some of the stores reopen next week and others will be looking for new jobs.

Cohasset Cushing Plaza Management Director Joseph Quinn was surprised by the decision to close the Cohasset store since it recently opened this year. He was pleased with the manner the store operated.

Quinn is already discussing plans for new tenants with several food and non-food operators. He said it will be hard to predict when a new owner will be found for the Corner Meat location.

In new plaza developments, Landry's Book Parlour, owned by Robert Landry of Scituate will open in mid-October next to Mister Donut.



Dr. T.V, specializing in radios and televisions are planning a Grand Opening for Sept. 12.

New publication date

Mariner Newspapers is expanding its South Shore coverage to include Pembroke. The Pembroke Mariner will make her maiden voyage Sept. 21 and will be published Wednesday. This necessitates the Cohasset Mariner to change its publication date from Wednesday to Thursday with a press deadline of Wednesday afternoon. This will begin Sept. 21 and also the deadline for community copy will be advanced to Tuesday at 5 p.m. at our local dropspots, Cohasset Colonial Drug and Hennessey's News. This also means Tuesday night committee meetings will also be covered by our reporters. For the average Cohasset reader, your newspaper will arrive in the mail or sold on various newsstands Thursday. The classified ad deadline of Monday at noon remains the same.

Tammaro trial set

A Superior Court judge has set Oct. 12 as the trial date for John Tammaro, charged with the shooting death of Leslie Ann Haynes of Cohasset. Tammaro, 21, is accused of shooting Haynes five times in the head with a .22 caliber gun. Tammaro has been held without bail since his arraignment Dec. 31.

Hazardous material meeting

The Hazardous Material Advisory Committee will meet Thursday, Sept. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Water Dept on King Street. Topics to be discussed include implementation of the hazardous material inventory, educational meeting on groundwater and waste oil disposal list.

Saved from tragedy

The ill-fated Flight 007, the Korean Air Lines plane destroyed by Russian missile fire, last week could have had a Cohasset victim.

Christopher McNabb, 19, of 53 Pond Street was slated to be a passenger aboard the Korean airplane when he decided he didnt' want to fly alone.

Instead, he chose a Scituate companion, Corina Larkin, and went on board a Tokyo-bound Northwest Orient flight originating from St. Louis.

Clipper Travel of North Scituate made all the arrangements to get Chris on the same plane. In addition, a low-rate excursion fare played a part in the decision.

Chris is a sophomore at Colorado College and will be doing a year's study in Hong Kong as part of the Yale Asian-studies program. He is a pre-medical student and plans to learn Chinese.

Chris graduated from Cohasset High School and was co-captain of the cross country team.

A paraphrased quote from Chris's father, John K. McNabb of Scituate regarding a forced landing. And knowing Chris, I knew he'd be angry that he wasn't on it. He's that kind of kid. He'd love the excitement.

Call firefighter alarm

Some residents have inquired why the town-wide call firefighter alarm was not sounded, especially during the Nardo fire Aug. 19. Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said the alarm is shutoff after 7 or 8 p.m. because the residents in the fire station area including elderly citizens complained about the noise. Lanza said call firefighters have portable radios in their homes or in their cars. Fire Chief Martin Dooley was not available for comment on the matter.

MDA, a big success

The Cohasset Permanent Firefighters, Local 2804 would like to thank the people of Cohasset who kindly donated $1300 for Muscular Dystrophy Association. The firefighters would like to give a special thanks to Dan Shea, manager of Stop and Shop, Joe Laugelle, Cohasset Landfill Superintendentand all of the firefighters who gave their off duty time to make this year's drive so successful. The firefighters hope to see the same contributors next year. Jay Fiori and Randall Rosano presented the check to Channel 5 Monday morning.

South Shore: Meet "THE CENTER" — "THE CENTER": Meet the South Shore

In the last few decades, we have become a nation of specialists. Lawyers represent us in court, accountants fill out our tax returns, stockbrokers handle investments, insurance agents provide protection for home and life.

The problem with this arrangement is that invariably it is not coordinated. It takes a central advisor who can guide us through an ever-changing economy and maze of tax laws. A person who can help us understand the many options created by the emergence of the financial supermarkets.

Our staff at The Center for Financial Planning has a nucleus of such advisors, with each specially trained to help you create and maintain wealth.

Unlike many financial organizations, we don't get you started then leave you to fend for yourself. As part of our on-going effort we'll send you our Client Advisory Newsletter. We'll let you know what's happening to oil and gas prices, whether we think real estate is a good buy, and which money market fund looks right for you. We'll even advise you of must-read articles and publications.

"The Center" wants you for a client.

In fact, we're so confident in our ability to help, our initial consultation with you is on us. You pay nothing.

Our name in reality embodies our philosophy. A truly viable financial plan must have a central figure. So it's not by accident that we call ourselves "The Center". Like everything else we do, we planned it that way.

AN INVITATION

If you're a South Shore investor and would like to know more about our services, we will be holding a financial planning seminar in Braintree, Wednesday, September 14th and 21st at 7:00 pm. All inquiries should be directed to Charles Stockbridge, Vice President.

PSO strong, veteran school support group

More goals are being set and met by the special needs sub-committee, headed by Norma Grassey of Ledge Way.

The special needs policy, McNamara said, is to serve the needs specifically of the special needs students, but also to provide handicap awareness to other students and parents.

"I'm happy this is a part of the total organization. We have an outstanding program here. The special needs students are as much a part of the system as the gifted students are. I feel that is essential to a good school system."

This year, the PSO hopes to coordinate a handicap awareness program into the health program directed by Michael Gill.

They'd also like to implement a vocational training and life skills program for the special needs students.

And at the same time, they're keeping tabs on the special needs legislation at he Statehouse.

"We'd like to include more parental involvement, so they're all aware of the legislation."

The volunteer committee works to coordinate all the volunteers from every sub-committee in every school. This is headed by Joanne Chittick of South Main Street.

"They coordinate all the volunteers in all the school, so if a parent is interested in volunteering, but doesn't know specifically what they wantto do, call. We're interested in any form of help. A parent with a specific talent or skill that they'd like to share for any amount of time, even just an hour, we're interested."

She added that because many high school students feel embarrassed having thier parents around, and because the need for volunteers is less in the high school, most of the volunteers work in the lower levels.

The publicity sub-committee, headed by Cindy Chase of Hobart Lane, has already accomplished a lot this school year.

For one thing, they'e mailing out a complete school calendar that McNamara said is "the best thing we've ever done. If a new resident needs to know anything about the schools, they can find it on this calendar."

Indeed, the calendar lists all sporting events, phone numbers, teachers names, administrators, coaches, special dates, PSO directors, community service organizations, and much, much more. "If anyone every needs to know sadmething about the schools, all they have to do is look there."

Publicity will also continue with their weekly school news column in the Mariner, and plan to broaden its content to include more about the primary grades. They'll also be sending bulletins with the school menus for the primary grades.

One project that the PSO is working on as a singular body is implementing the Great Book program in the schools.

"This method teaches a method of inquiry in literature. The teachers ask the students to think creatively about what they are reading. It provides a forum to dicuss ideas and interpratations. There are not right and wrong answers in the Great Book program."

The program lists a special book list for each grade, and tends to get students reading books they wouldn't normally read. They are not all classics.

The PSO is now looking for parents, and teachers, interested in training to become a Great Books discussion leader.

The training session is Oct. 4 and 5 from 4:30 to 9 in Quincy.

However, if more than 24 Cohasset people express an interest, then Great Books will hold a seminar to train leaders right in Cohasset. There is a $35 fee for anyone who takes the seminar.

Another project worked on as a whole is the new telephone chain created this year.

Last year, McNamara noticed that there was a lot of confusion on days when school was cancelled. Many mothers work, and children would be left along because parents just didn't know school was cancelled.

So a telephone chain was created. One calls another, who in turn calls another, until every parent has been reached and notified. McNamara hopes this clears up that confusion.

But the main goal of the group is set in simple focus: to provide a service of communication between parents and students.

The PSO will hold open meetings mothly, on the second Thursday of the month at 8 p.m. in Room 107 of the high school. The first of those meetings will be on September 8.

They will also hold bi-annual general membership meetings. Any parent with a student in Cohasset schools is automatically a member. The first bi-annual meeting is on Tuesday evening, October 4.

Besides general discussion, this meeting will feature a program on creativity, and how to foster creativity through a curriculum.

"We hope to be able to illustrate how this can be implemented in the schools."

"Everything we do translates into the school system. We don't just have programs, they really do something.

"We want to continue the excellent job begun last year of coordinating parents support for schools, and increased awareness of what's going on in the schools.

"We have a small and excellent school system, and as parents are more aware of what it offers, and ways they can support it, it will only get better.

"The public schools in the last ten years have been asked to do everything. From raising the children, to feeding them, the school does it all. That, coupled with the fiscal restraints of Prop. 2½, has put a tremendous strain on the schools. We want to provide some essential support to eliminate this strain.

"In the past year, publicity has been saying that America public schools are in disgrace. I don't think that's true. I feel we can be proud of our system, and even prouder that we have helped."

Public concerned over EEE

The recent outbreak of Eastern Equine Encephalitis is causing concern, not only among horse owners, but with recent human infection, the public is alarmed.

The Plymouth County Extension Service has set up clinics for vaccinating horses against EEE, said Charles Simmons, dairy and livestock specialist.

EEE is carried by mosquitoes and affects both horses and humans. Horses should be removed from pasture during outbreaks and housed in barns with screened windows and doors.

Humans should curtail outdoor activities in wet areas and in the evening. The use of repellents and the wearing of light-colored clothing, long-sleeved shirts and trousers or slacks, is less attractive to mosquitoes.

For a complete fact sheet on EEE prepared by entomologists, Mark Buffone, State Reclamation Board and Joseph Barile of University of Massachusetts Suburban Experiment Station of Waltham, please call or write to Plymouth County Extension Service, High Street, P.O. Box 658, Hanson, 02341.

State increases sewer fine to $2,000 a day the town is in contempt of court for failure to comply with an earlier state agreement in 1980.

She cited some environmental violations which included unlawful discharge of pollutants from the town's sewage treatment facility into James Brook and Cohasset Harbor since 1977.

Rogers said the A.G.'s office is willing to extend the deadline for completed construction until Jan. 15, 1987 but the town "now proposes to abandon the facilities plan submitted in 1980."

She called the alternative approaches and repairs to septic systems, "neither technological, legally nor administratively feasible and would cause continued harm to the environment."

Rogers said most of the repairs are in violation of the state environmental code and are not feasible for the town's soil conditions.

She concluded "The requirements of the federal and state Clean Waters Act cannot be outweighed simply to accommodate Cohasset's wish to avoid tax increases and preclude growth."

Henderson's response

Henderson cited the 1980 agreement which said, "within 14 days of the receipt of a demand from the Attorney General, the defendant shall pay to the general fund of the state in the amount of $1,000 dollars for each day of noncompliance..."

Henderson said a specific paragraph says after a factual determination by the state that the defendant is in noncompliance the plaintiff (state) must notify the defendant in writing of the determination and specifying the grounds which it was made.

He said the town received notice Aug. 18. and the town has complied with the earlier state agreement.

The town originally requested the state grant in 1980 but the state did not respond for over two years.

In April of 1983, 35 months after the town originally filed the grant, the state submitted a grant offer despite the completion of state and federal environmental reviews.

"Under the circumstances the town felt justified in delaying acceptance of the grant pending a determination there was a reasonable probablility the project was environmentally sound." To date, no finding has been made.

Henderson said the decisions made at the last two town meetings "was made in the best of faith and with no intention of avoiding the responsibilities of this community under the appropriate environmental statutes."

The town has worked with "the greatest speed" to interview engineers and caused alternative facilities plans and applications to be submitted to the state.

The state has not responded to the alternative plans.

Henderson filed with the Superior Court a motion for modification and requested the state to agree to continue to negotiate in good faith or the town should be allowed to have the motion for modification considered by the court before the contempt action is filed.

State meeting

Attending from Cohasset besides DeSantis were Sewer Commissioners Edward Guild and Joseph Guinn, Planning Board member Daniel Cotton, Water Commissioner Peter Pratt. Advisory Board member Fred Koed, Acting Selectmen Chairman Clifford Mitman, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza, Henderson and Ward Engineers.

Also attending were representatives from state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, State Sen. Alan McKinnon, Congressman Gerry Studds and U.S. Senator Paul Tsongas.

DeSantis argued the state should spend $86,000 for a full study of innovative and alternative methods for handling the sewage problems of the entire town.

By doing this, DeSantis said, the state and federal governments would save millions of dollars, the problems of the entire town and not just a portion would be addressed, the time frame would be shorter and it would be more affordable for town finances.

State officials said they are concerned that repairs to the septic systems on water reservoirs would not get environmental variances; connecting to the Hull sewer plant would be precluded by Hull's present inflow and infiltration problems and the expansion of the current sewer plant would not be feasible because of wetlands encroachment.

Thomas Cloughtery of DEQE said he already visited Cohasset and could not understand why homes on Forest Avenue were allowed to be built three years ago.

Anthony DePalma of EPA suggested Cohasset spend $86,000 for complete plans and specifications for the town and be reimbursed later.

"We no longer have any Step 1 and 2 funding. Moreover your plans have already been funded for six years (for a new central plant) and we are under pressure to close out old grants," DePalma said.

Brian Jeans of DEQE agreed to make an on site inspection in Cohasset and consult with Ward engineers.

DeSantis said he was pleased with the meeting because it had finally taken place after arrangements had been planned since May. He still feels state and federal funds should be spent on the sewage problems of Boston Harbor rather than forcing an expensive sewer system on Cohasset.

The court suit has not been set for a hearing, he said.

DeSantis told officials Cohasset has already spent about $6,000 repairing salt water leaks and there was a warrant article for the Sept. 20 town meeting to purchase water saving devices.

DeSantis said the commission could reduce the flows of the current plant from as much as 105,000 gallons per day to 70,000 gallons per day. He said these high flows were caused by the booming economy and resulting high restaurant flows this summer.

Prevention pay element of health education

By Theresa Sullivan

Prevention.

The primary philosophy behind Cohasset's health education program is prevention.

Whether it's teaching children apples are better for them than cup cakes, or teaching children what drugs do to their bodies, health education's purpose is to expose them to all the information available.

Mike Gill, health coordinator, said teaching youths about health at a young age can help prevent problems which tend to develop in the teenage years.

"When you've got a kid with drug problems, most of the time you can go back to his youth," he said.

He said teenagers who drink alcohol or smoke cigarettes often do it to fit in. He tells his students to "try to develop your own uniqueness. Not everyone is going to be an acedemic star or a football star."

Low self-esteem is frequently the cause of a drinking or drug problem, he said. "We discuss peer pressure." The pressure to be like others is not necessarily spoken, he said. "If other people are doing things, the pressure is there," Gill said.

The health education program encompasses a wide range of health issues, he said. "I think that kids will understand better if they know about things.

"We have a program to teach kids about people with disabilities," Gill said.

This year Gill is teaching a course called "Marriage and Family Living" for the first time. Only seniors may take the course and parental consent is required.

"The course deals with dating, personal relationships, marriage, sexuality, parenthood and the family. We will cover managing resources, setting up budgets, and it will also discuss changing commitments, separation and divorce," he said.

"We'll talk about dating, love versus infatuation, marriage alternatives, cohabitation and pre-marital sex," Gill said. He said it is important for teenagers to be informed on these subjects. "Health ed.and Sex ed. has been taught in public schools for years—by the kids. Kids teach other kids in school, and they are teaching incorrect information.

"They're going to learn one way or the other. They're not learning the right information," from their friends, he said.

Gill said in a health education class, the students should not know the teacher's personal view on a subject. He has a rule he tells his students at the onset of every course. It is: "I never ask you and you never ask me."

"I try to encourage them not to use 'I.' By listening to others, it gives them a chance to strengthen their own values," he said.

"I have a problem with teaching morals in the classroom." Gill said telling a student this is right and that is wrong does not teach them how to make decisions. He said it is better to teach them how to make well-thought-out decisions.

"I try to get the kids to really examine and weigh out their decisions." He said they take an issue, like smoking cigarettes, and write the pros and cons on the blackboard.

"Everybody values their bodies differently. As long as they understand and know the possible consequences—I don't think that most kids understand the consequences," he said.

Students receive mixed messages from the media and from society. For example, they are told not to drink, but the best commercials on TV are the beer commercials, he said.

Through health ed., "by the time they're in the seventh grade, they learn that alcohol can be used in a non-harmful way, but it can be the most dangerous drug in America," Gill said.

"I encourage the home to keep an active part (in the children's health education). I tell kids to bring their familiy into making decisions," he said.

Marriage and Family Living is an academic course. "It involves outside research, discussion, examination of thoughts and values," Gill said. "By listening to others, it gives them a chance to strengthen their own values.

"And it's designed to prepare students for the future. I think it's very important they learn how to take care of their bodies."

Cohasset is in the process of setting up a child abuse and sexual assault program as part of health education.

"It's important so that kids will understand that if you spill your milk and get whipped and locked in a closet, that's not normal.

"It's important for a kid to know if your father is touching you in such a way that makes you uncomfortable, you should tell somebody," Gill said. This program opens up a line of communication and gives them different people they could speak to."

He said child abuse is more common than most people realize. Cohasset is one of the first school systems to try to address this issue, he said.

"Cohasset has been great because we've had tremendous community and school administration support," he said. The Cohasset Community Health Education Advisory Committee has been instrumental in the entire health education program, he said.

This fall will mark the beginning of the health education program's fourth year. Gill spent his first year in Cohasset developing the program and has taught health to students in the junior high and high school for the past two years.

He is currently putting together a topic for his doctoral thesis, which will deal with nutrition and how it relates to children.

Private school enrollment steady

Despite the shaky economy of the past five years, private school enrollment among Cohasset students has not shown significant change since the 1978-79 school year.

During the 1978-79 school year, 112 students attended private schools and 1,721 students attended Cohasset public schools that year.

In 1979-80, 115 attended private schools and 1,622 attended public schools. In 1980-81, 120 attended private schools and 1,541 attended public schools.

In 1981-82, 133 attended private schools and 1,469 attended public schools. In 1982-83, 97 attended private schools and 1,399 attended public schools.

Supt. Eugene Crowell said he'd only be able to guess the reason for the private school enrollment declining by 36 students in 1982-83.

The public school enrollment declined by 70 between 1981-82 and 1982-83.

The year before, between 1980-81 and 1981-82, public school enrollment declined by 72, while the private school enrollment increased by 13 students.

Crowell said he is beginning to see a slight increase in the number of children registering for Kindergarten. He said this reflects a national trend. Women who had postponed having families are having children, he said.

Enrollments will continue to decline, Crowell said, until the primary level schools are filled with the children who are now ages zero to five.

Life for Amy Urmson in Switzerland - addictive

By Moira McCarthy

Even at the mention of Geneva, Switzerland, Amy Urmson gets a twinkle in her eye.

The food, (especially the chocolate), the tiny streets, the mountains, the people, and the special freedom of the city where Amy spent her senior year as an AFS student, all wooed her into a love afair with a city she vows to return to soon.

After returning from her year abroad, a year that she says "has altered her entire life," Amy spoke of the life in Switzerland, as it compares to the life she leads in Cohasset.

The big worry of most AFS students, adapting to a different language, was no problem for Amy.

She had five years of French under her belt from Cohasset schools, but her host family spoke a type of Swiss-German. At first, they helped her out by speaking a little of the English the knew, yet they still spoke their own language among themselves. But Amy quickly caught on.

"By the end of the year, they couldn't talk behind my back anymore!" she joked. "One of the most exciting days of my trip was when I woke up and realized I had just dreamt in French. I ran around the house telling everyone, but they all just looked at me funny!"

As soon as Amy adapted to the language, which wasn't long after her arrival last August, she began to travel the streets and cities of Switzerland.

And that, she said, is a lot easier than getting around in Cohasset.

"They have public transportation that runs everywhere. I never needed a ride anywhere. If you want to go to the store, or to town, you just hop on a bus. And you can take trains to anywhere in the country."

The train ride from one side of the country to the other is ony four hours long, and that gives you an idea of how small Switzerland is.

"There are no superhighways there. There's one called a superhighway, and it's about the size of 3A. They just have tiny, tiny streets winding through the city and country."

She spent many an afternoon just walking those streets for hours, observing everything.

"Everyone walks everywhere over there. No one walks that much in the U.S.A. Kids don't even get their license until they're 18, too."

Amy saw the country from a special perspective as well, since her host father is a licensed pilot.

"He took me in planes over the countryside, and over the Swiss and Italian alps. It seemed so funny to skip from country to country like that."

She also spent time skiing in the city of every skiers' dreams: Zurmont.

"It was unbelievable. Almost all the skiing was above the treeline. And when I woke up every morning, I looked out the window and saw the Matahorn."

When she wasn't soaking in the scenery, Amy spent her time taking part in the activities of other teens her age.

For them, school is very different than it is in the USA. No one is required to attend school after ninth grade, and get there really aren't any teens that drop out and just loaf around.

"The school system is set up so that by the time you are in ninth grade, you know what you want to do with your life. So at that time, you chose whether you'll go on in school, or go into an apprenticeship. Everyone does something."

Amy chose to go to a part of the High School that concentrated in Art and Music.

So besides the normal biology, English, math, and history classes that students take, she was required to take music theory, choir, and music history. The school paid for her private piano lessons as well.

"It was a lot like college. You have different schedules on different days, instead of going the same times as we do here. And it was a lot more difficult too. The foreign students joke that going to school in the USA is like a vacation, and I can see why.

"There is more work done in class, and less homework assigned. But, even though you don't have homework, you're expected to understand what's going on in class. It's a very independent type of teaching."

And after school activities are different as well.

There are no extra-curricular activities, as there are here in the USA. If someone wants to play a sport, then they can play on neighborhood teams. And school doesn't get out until five.

"After school, we usually went to a cafe, got something to drink, and just talked."

And when she says something to drink, she means a hot chocolate, aor some tea.

"The teens over there just don't drink. Maybe it's because it's legal, and they've always have wine with their dinner. They just don't get a thrill out of it."

Musically, the Swiss teens listen to a lot of American music, "but it's all about two years behind. I remember hearing songs that were hits and saying, 'hey, that's an old one.' They listen to a lot of French singers too."

And the Swiss teens don't seem as hung up on expensive clothing as Americans do.

"They are much more casually dressed. I don't think I dressed up more than once. And my pink monogrammed sweater just didn't go over there."

She also said the teens over there seem to be better trusted by their parents.

"Maybe it's because of all the independence. I've never felt more free and independent that when I was there. Maybe it's because it was a big city, or maybe it was because of the accessable public transportation.

"You could walk through that city all alone at midnight, and you didn't worry, nor did anyone worry about you. It was that safe."

Holidays were celebrated a little differently as well. Christmas was simpler, and very beautiful.

"They had real candles on the tree, so the sent me upstairs and them surprised me by lighting them all. It wa beautiful."

And although they exchanged gifts, they gave less gifts with more thought than many Americans. It was a day she'll long remember, she said.

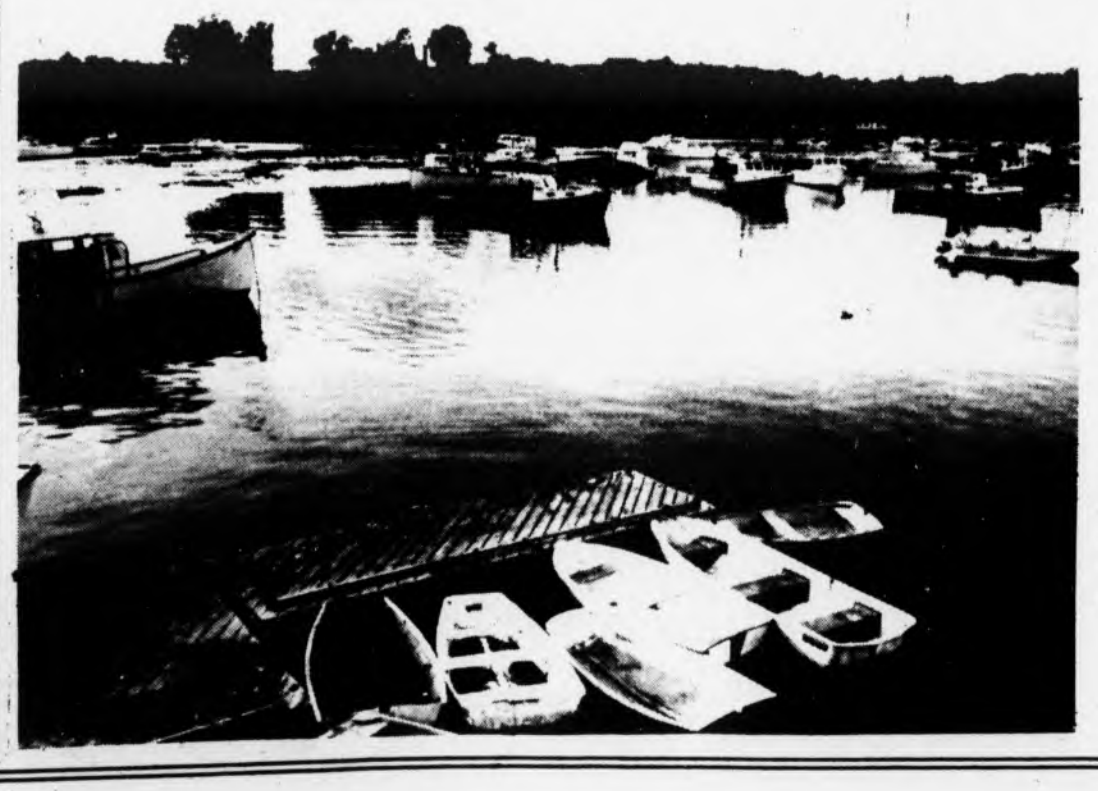
Amy in no way felt like a guest in the home of her host family.

"They became my family. I laughed and cried with them, just the same as I do here.

"When I'm out in Cohasset now, I'll mention something about my sister, and some one will say, 'you don't have a sister.' But I do. I have a sister, and I have two sets of parents. Because they truly are my family."

Amy keeps in touch with her Swiss sister, and hopes to see her again soon.

And so, as you can imagine, it was hard to leave. What did Amy bring back as a memory of her trip?



"Chocolate, chocolate, and more chocolate! When you think of Switzerland that's what you think of. And I had so much junk, I had to ship all my shoes back early. My mother though I was crazy, shipping my shoes back, and carrying my letters and books in a suitcase. But you can't throw away your letters, can you?"

After she spends four years majoring in languages at Wheaton, she hopes to return to Switzerland to live for at least a while.

"It's addictive. I loved it so much. I can't wait to get back again. It's my second home."

background, saying he would "encourage health education two periods a week." Currently, health is taught once a week.

He said the school system is sensitive to situations children are faced with such as divorce. Although there are no formal counseling programs for children in the schools, "there is a real responsiveness to this," Creamer said.

He sited the health education program introducing youngsters to child abuse, and what it means, as "an ambitious thing at the primary level. Cohasset is one of the only schools to have done it (implimented such a program) at the primary level."

Deer Hill School

Deer Hill School Principal Ken Ekberg said he does not foresee any marked changes in the coming year.

"We have not had any major curricular changes," he said. "The school goals are worked out with the teachers. We plan on maintaining a high level of achievement."

He said Deer Hill began a program last year in which the students were required to work on the computer one hour a week. "We have a three-year continuum." The intention of the program is that the youngsters become computer literate after three years, he said.

Jr. Sr. High School

Richard Streeter, junior and senior high school principal, cited the revised attendence policy as the most obvious change.

The attendence policy recently adopted by the school committee will be presented to students in an assembly at the beginning of the year. Also, a copy has been mailed to every household, Streeter said.

The school office is going on line, or on the computer, for the first time this year. Although it will take time to program the computer, eventually the school will be equiped to keep records which had to be done externally in the past, he said.

"We'll be able to do our attendence, report cards and (possibly) our supply inventory," he said.

Regardless of which school they go to, Cohasset students are being exposed to computers. That may seem intimidating to adults, but Creamer said he suspects adults are more afraid of computers than children are.

Supt. Eugene Crowell cited three goals for the coming year.

"My first goal would be to professionally impliment the goals of the school committee," he said.

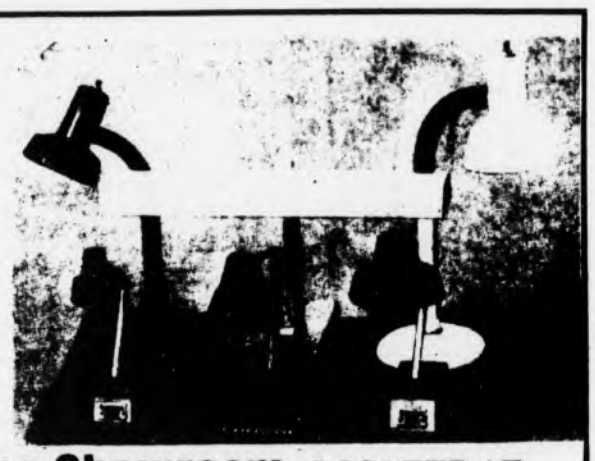
He said he would like to work toward "the continued improvement of educational quality." There is a state-wide trend to make education "more vigorous," he said.

As part of this tightening up, Crowell said he supports the new attendence policy.

His third goal is the Curriculum Update Program, a humanities program for students in Grades Nine through 12.

Under CUP, when the English department is studying the literature of a particular era, the history department will be studying the culture and government of the same era.

He said he and the school committee will continue to face the problems of declining enrollment and "live within the constraints of (Proposition) 2½."



The imput of the parents and students becomes more important as the budget becomes tighter, Crowell said.

☐Roy Perry, one of Great Britain's foremost landscape artists will make his American debut in a showing entitled, "Coastal Images." One of his paintings include "The Mill, Cohasset." The opening will be celebrated with a champagne reception for Mr. Perry Friday, Oct. 7 between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. at The John Stobart Gallery, 124 Lewis Wharf, Boston. The exhibition will be open to the general public starting at noon Saturday, Oct. 8.

"Coastal Images" is a series of 40 original watercolor and acrylic paintings as well as several black and white drawings, based upon Perry's sojourns throughout New England, including Kennebunkport, Maine, Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, The Chappaquiddick Bridge and Gloucester. Roy Perry's style combines a careful control of tone and color with a mood and atmosphere which has earned him the R.I. Medal in Great Britain for the best watercolor of the year.

Roy Perry's work is included in various distinguished collections including that of H.R.H. The Duke of Edinburgh, H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, and the Prime Minister, Mrs. Margaret Thatcher. A member of the prestigious Royal Institute of Painters in Watercolours, Perry's paintings are also in demand by various regiments of the British Army and official paintings have been commissioned by the Parachute Regiment, The Royal Artillery, The Royal Marines and the Gurkhas. Six of his Falklands works hang in the Fleet Air Arm Museum's permanent collection and many large industrial companies have commissioned paintings from Perry. These include Total Oil, British Steel Corporation, Occidental Oil, The Thomson Organization and Hoovers.

☐State Registrar Alan Mackey has announced the appointment of Paula Mary Golden to the position of Deputy Registrar of Motor Vehicles.

Her husband, William Brownell, is a Cohasset native. Mrs. Golden is the first women in the history of the agency to be appointed Deputy Registrar.

A graduate of Wellesly College and New England School of Law, cum laude, Mrs. Golden is an attorney formely associated with the South Shore law firm Rivkind, Baker & Golden. Prior to her service at the Registry of Motor Vehicles, Mrs. Golden had been an adjunct professor and administrator at New England School of Law.

As Deputy Registrar, Mrs. Golden will be responsible for Driver Licensing, Registry Review and Appeals, Legislative Services, and the Legal Affairs Department. She will also serve as Chief Legal Counsel to the Registrar. The Goldens live in Weymouth with their two children, Bethany and Brigham.

☐Joan Appel of Cohasset won second place for "The Pond" in the print division of the Duxbury Art Association Midsummer 1983 Art and Craft Show.

☐John McNabb, Jr., of 53 Pond Street, has been appointed to the position of Assistant Legislative Liaison for the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

McNabb, 27, currently is a member and Secretary of the Town Government Structure Committee in Cohasset. He is a former Student Representative to the Cohasset School Committee.

From 1982-1983, McNabb was Associate Campaign Director and Public Relations Specialist for a $1 million capital fundraising campaign for a hospital in Pennsylvania.

His previous experience includes editing a weekly newspaper in Skowhegan, Maine, and serving as a reporter in Cohasset, Hull and Scituate. McNabb is a former Mariner reporter.

McNabb has been active in several local political campaigns, and was a delegate to the 1981 and 1983 Massachusetts Democratic State Issues Conventions. He is a member of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

He is a 1978 graduate of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, and a 1974 graduate of Cohasset High School, where he was President of the Student Council.

☐After his appearance with the juggler on stage recently, it was decided that "Skinny" Laugelle is a natural for the performing arts. He even made talking into a carrot (which he thought was a microphone) look good! He should be hearing from Hollywood any day now...

☐It is inspiring to see how our town can rally around those who need help, both financially and emotionally — the Nardo family being a prime example. Many have made contributions to them on both counts. The Rotary Club certainly set the pace by offering to help them, and the American Legion donated $1,000 to the family. Although nothing can ever replace their loss, it must be a comfort to know that so many people care.

☐Chris Mahoney has really made a name for himself at Holy Cross! Chris, a freshman, has made the varsity soccer team, the same team that is picked 10th in New England.

☐Happy birthday to Connie Parker, whose birthday was Sept. 2. It should be mentioned that it seems that for every birthday that Connie celebrates, she undertakes another project to better the town! Her "pet project" is the Historical House, and what results she has accomplished! Happy birthday to a fine lady.

☐Fred Pipenbrink had a great time at the Class of 1938 reunion. He reported that everyone was pleased by the turnout, and that the memories were abundant! The reunion was held at the Legion, in the upstairs function room. It was a standing-room-only crowd, with a lot of laughs and a lot of promises to hold another real soon...

☐Happy birthday to Bob Magner, who will be celebrating it in an enviable manner. Bob and his wife, Jean, are heading for Ireland for a few weeks, with another couple that has been several times before. Bob and Jean are guaranteed to see every sight there is and are most excited. Hope to have a full report upon their return.

☐Had a phone call from Larry Fone the other day, who reports he is going back to the "grey flannel suit set." After running a successful business in downtown Cohasset for many years, he's back to the designing business. Good luck in your new venture, Larry.

☐You can tell from a glance the soccer-football players after last week's "double sessions!" They all have that "stepping on eggshells" walk, a result of a lot of hard work. Here's hoping for winning seasons for all C.H.S. teams.

☐Ellen DiGirolamo and Kristen Wilkin are thrilled about the Bottle Bill and are putting it to good use. With the money they get for the returns they are planning a trip to Florida, and have saved a good amount towards same. These people are a good example of putting the bill to work, and hope they have a super time for all of their efforts.

☐Roy MacDonald reports that his son, Roy, Jr., and family came for their annual summer visit last week and that a great time was had by all. Roy is one of the many guys who grew up in Cohasset and doesn't feel as if his year is complete without a trip to the "hometown." It gives Roy, Sr., a chance to see his grandchildren again, so everybody's happy.

☐With Labor Day behind us, and school about to begin, I'd like to wish mothers a happy vacation (about to begin) and here's to a grand fall, with lots of super weather for us to enjoy our outdoor activities! Won't it be nice...

☐Don't forget to keep me informed with the news. If you have it, share it!

Stromberg and Cooper kick off arts Sept 23

Three ambitious arts projects are planned for Cohasset's schools this year due to joint efforts of the schools and the Parent School Organization (PSO).

Artist-in-residence programs are planned for the elementary levels, and this year for the first time, the junior high school.

An application for a theatre arts program has been submitted to the Cultural Resources Program by the eighth grades and the Just Around The Corner Company. The collaborative project will expand the range of oral and written expression for eighth graders; introduce them to the elements of drama and teach them how to relate them to narrative writing.

They will also develop scenes and create a play based on written stories drawn from community interviews emphasizing the immigrant experience.

At the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, programs will be submitted to the Artists-In-Residence Program of the Institute for the Arts, managed by the Cultural Education Collaborative. Both organizations are funded by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities. The Osgood residence will focus on creative movement and at Deer Hill, video production. Application deadlines are in October.

The elementary schools have both had a poet and the Just Around The Corner theatre group in residence over the past two years.

Both the residency programs, which utilize artists as teachers and mentors, and the eighth grade program which introduces theatre arts and provides collaborative material for the theatre company, as they wish to expand their audiences to the junior high, integrate the various artistic skills into the curriculum.

Partial funding will be provided by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities. A portion of state block grant funds were earmarked by the school administration for these projects. The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council awarded the junior high program $200.

"Stromberg and Cooper" are well known throughout New England for their creative and entertaining shows. They are described this way: "Through comedy, pathos, a touch of original music and enthusiastic audience participation, Stromberg and Cooper explore the world of mime, unlock the imagination and rekindle the often forgotten art of pretending."

The 90-minute performance is appropriate for the very young as well as the adults in the family. Sponsored by the Arts Enrichment Committee of the PSO, tickets will be sold in advance by board members, or by calling 383-0572. They will also be available at the door.

"ARE WE KILLING THE ARTS?"

In keeping with the PSO's support and endorsement of arts and cultural projects in the schools, the Program Committee is planning a unique and important program for Tuesday, Oct. 4 to be held in the new study hall of the high school.

"Are We Killing the Arts in the 80's?" What Impact in the 90's? will explore the often asked question, 'Why arts?' Penny Dunning of the Whole Brain Corporation of Cambridge will discuss the theory of brain dominance, and by using audience exercises, show how the creative and linear sides of the brain work

Bart O'Connor, Assistant Superintendent of Attleboro Schools, will discuss Attleboro's experiences with arts integration in education, and how they've involved the community.

The PSO Arts Enrichment Committee will explore additional ways in which arts can enhance curriculum at any level in the schools this year. Teachers are encouraged to forward any ideas and requests to the committee.

Parents are also needed to work on the committee. They may contact Karin Bartow, chairman, at 383-0572.

Caring for education

We have tried to publish an all-around "Back to School" issue with a perspective towards the arts, the sports, and the "what's new" of the public school system.

From reading the reports there seems to be a feeling of excitement in the air, a sense of community spirit and that is good.

The comments by Principal Jack Creamer regarding the coordination of health education and computers and the continued motivation by Health Education Director Mike Gill leave a sense that Cohasset schools are "onward and upward" despite the spring cries of budget crunch and "no more money."

We firmly believe that it's not money that makes the quality of education but the people themselves, people like Jack Creamer and Mike Gill and off course the Parent School Organization.

In comparison to other communities, Cohasset is rich to have a unified PSO which knows what its priorities are and where its goals should be directed.

It makes the work of the School Dept. and School Committee that much easier.

We wish K-12 students good luck as they begin the school year and also one thought. No matter how hard the homework is, graduating from Cohasset schools means the student had a chance at a quality education.

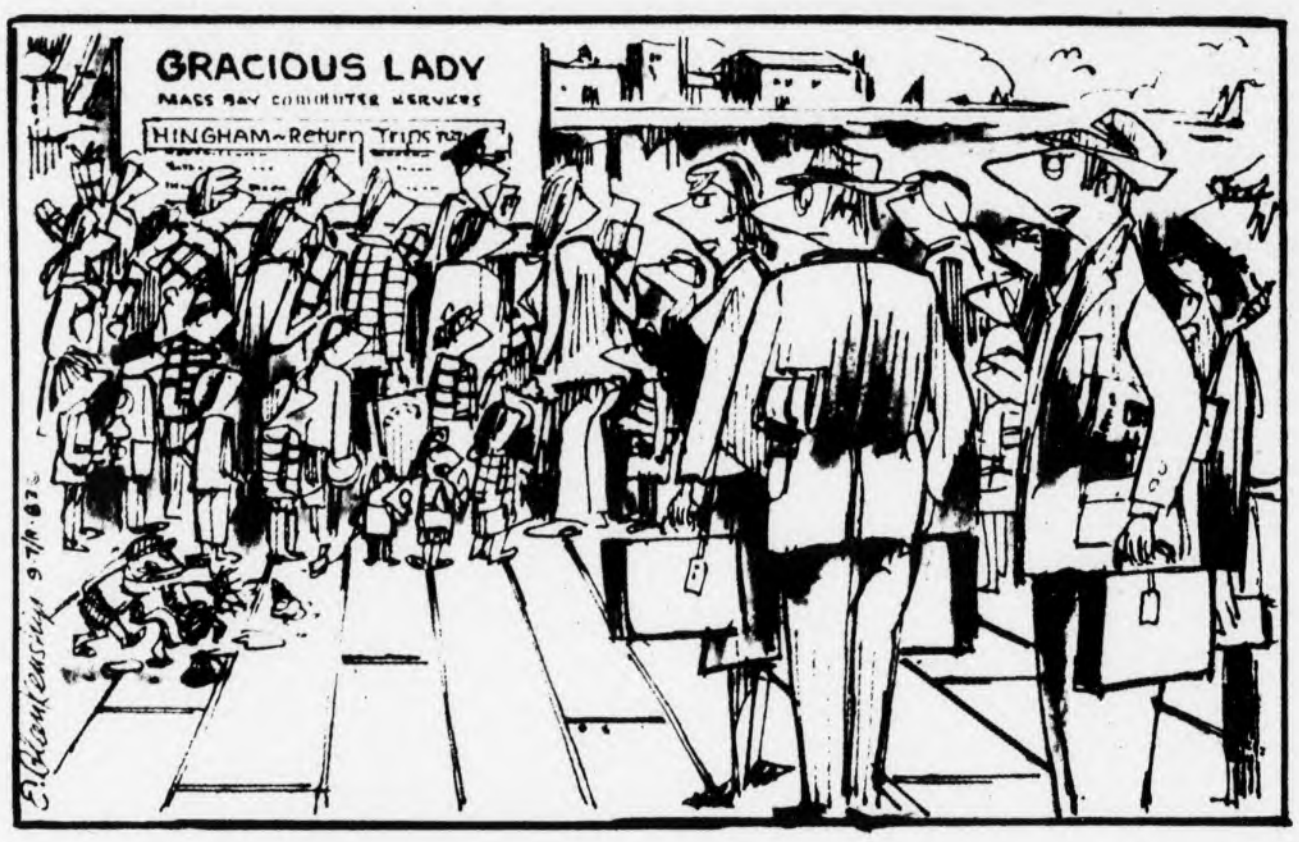
The reason is: people care in Cohasset.

Season of safe driving

Vacation is over. The fleet of yellow buses cranked up this morning and carried hundreds of Cohasset students back to the classroom.

While vacation is enjoyable, most kids are more than ready to return to a schedule and reunions with friends they haven't seen for the summer. Their anticipation sometimes overcomes good sense about bike-riding and crossing streets.

The onus, then, is on us, the motorists, to use extra caution not only in school zones but on all the streets in town. Many students do ride bikes to school and are not always as safety-conscious as they should be.



School zones are posted for 20 m.p.h. and the police are always out in force to insure that motorists comply. You may not see the policeman but, if you're speeding, you can be sure he'll see you.

Motorists should also be aware that they must stop for school buses flashing red lights. Children cross in front of the bus and have been hit before by motorists passing buses.

The American Automobile Association says that nearly a million children will be returning to school across the state this week. They have begun their annual "School's Open — Drive Carefully" campaign and have free bumper stickers available to drive the message home.

Caroline J. Hymoff, manager of safety services for the association, says "young children are highly unpredictable, so drivers have to be extra alert. Your ability to stop quickly could save the life of a child."

Tidy house can be lonely too

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon smiled.

"When the kids go back to school Wednesday, this house is going to be so easy to keep clean and neat.

"Tanya, Jay and Sharon have their own place in Weymouth now, so Tanya won't be leaving her things around the house.

"Breida and Skipper will be off to high school, and Pat will be at UMass. Keeping the place neat will be duck soup."

"That's nice," I told him, as I picked up a pair of his socks that his dog had brought into the living room.

"What do you plan to do with all your spare time?"

He pondered. "The possibilities are unlimited. For one thing, I'll work out regularly and get into superb physical shape.

"I'll be able to get around and see more people. There will be endless opportunities to expand my horizons.

"Breida!" he shouted. "Bring me the cigarettes from my bureau."

I emptied his ashtray. "What particular horizon-expanding device do you favor?"

"I thought about writing a column for the Mariner," he replied. "What do you think of 'The Dragon Speaks?' "

"Sounds interesting. What do you plan to write about?"

"Things that bug me. There's a great deal wrong with the world, and so long as I have the time, I think I have an obligation to point them out."

"Like what? I mean," I shuddered, "will you be writing about anyone I might know?"

He smiled ominously. "Could be. For example, you've been quick to tell your readers that you clean up after my dog and empty my ashtray. They might also be interested in learning how long it took me to straighten out your desk when you finished writing last week's 'Around Town.'

"You don't hesitate to tell them that we leave the soap dish in the bathroom looking yucky, but you never mention that you have five books in the bathroom, eight on the back of our bed, four in the kitchen, and one in the living room."

"So I like to be able to find reading material wherever I am," I said defensively.

"Sure, but they're all face down and open and you never finish any of them."

"If I did I'd be out of reading material. What else are you going to write about?" I continued hastily.

"Lot of things. People who push ahead of me in the supermarket. Drivers who tailgate. Kids," he scowled, "who take 45 minute showers. Wives who interrupt when I'm talking. Certain family members who monopolize the telephone.

"And then, I think I'll write about the most serious problem of all."

"And what, O Wise One, is that?"

"I think," he said seriously, "that I'm going to be very, very lonely."

Thanks to Firemen's Benefit Assoc. & citizens

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to the Cohasset Fireman's Benefit Association, Inc. and the citizens of the Town of Cohasset.

My wife and I wish to thank all of the members of the Cohasset Fireman's Benefit Association, Inc. for honoring us with a celebration at the Lothrop House Aug. 21. We wish at this time to thank them and say that we sincerely appreciate your efforts and confidence in honoring us by such an occasion.

A special thanks must go to Jean Salvadore for all her hard work and efforts to make our party the success that it was. A thank you too to all the ladies who worked so diligently on the treats. To Mary Bennock who did an excellent job on the cakes, a special thanks for a beautiful work of art. They were delicious.

To Rich Silvia of Nautical Reproductions for the excellent work on our beautiful gift, we thank you very much. It is a gift that we will treasure for many years to come.

Letters

To Mrs. Parker of the Lothrop House, we thank you for opening up the museum for our event and for your kindness and generosity to our daughter.

Last, but certainly not least, a very heartfelt thanks to all the citizens and our new friends from Cohasset who took the time from their day to honor us with their presence, well wishes and praises of "keep up the good work" — we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. The turnout was fantastic and we must note at this time, that we truly appreciate all the support and backing that was generated and demonstrated to us. To each and every one of you, we thank you for a day we will long remember.

Town Issues Survey

It's time again for the Mariner survey which asks the readers for their opinions about issues affecting town residents.

This survey will run for two weeks and results will be published in the Sept. 14 edition.

1. Do you approve of the new attendance regulations for Cohasset Jr.-Sr. students? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
2. Should the executive secretary have the authority to supervise town departments such as police and fire? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
3. Do you approve of the management policies of Fire Chief Martin Dooley? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
4. Should firefighters be required to monitor an after-midnight watch at the station? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
5. Should the town renegotiate the "past practices" clause in the firemen's contract? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
6. Should the Cox estate be turned into corporate offices? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
7. Should the town buy the Cox estate? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
8. Should Cohasset encourage low-income housing? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
9. Should a private company run the ambulance service? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
10. Should Congressman Gerry Studds run again for re-election? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
11. Should Cohasset teachers get merit raises? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
12. Should Hugo's Lighthouse be permitted to use the Govt. Island upper parking lot? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.
13. Should the town establish a Public Safety Commissioner instead of paying a police and fire chief? ___ yes ___ no ___ no opinion.

Sewer Commission rescinds TM article

The Sewer Commissioners also rescinded their vote to place an article in the warrant for the Sept. 20 Special Town Meeting to draw up plans and specifications to repair, modify or expand the present sewer plant.

Earlier, commissioners voted 2-1 (Gwinn opposed) to insert an article requesting the town to transfer $86,600 of unexpended money from the April Town Meeting for the "preparation of alternative and innovative facilities plans for waste water management for the entire town as proposed in the Ward Engineering Associates preliminary study dated June 6, 1983."

DeSantis said this article was only "insurance" in case his meeting with EPA and DEQE officials in Boston Sept. 1, fails. The commissioners voted to request the EPA intervene in their behalf at this meeting.

A tender comfort from a 'friend'

Letters

To the Editor:

This poem is an offering to Vincent and Eileen Nardo.

It was intended for printing in the Cohasset Mariner, in the hope it would be of some comfort to the family and relatives of the Nardo children.

"THE GIFT"

(Written for Andrea, Amy and Andrew Nardo)

You came and stayed just long enough
For Life to brush a caressing hand
Across your cheeks.
You were the greatest Gift.

When the time was over
For enjoying the gift
It was taken quickly,
An unexpected sword thrust through the heart.

By echoes of your tears
And shouts and laughter,
Two people offered up their pain.

Blessed are they that mourn;
For they shall be comforted.

Fortunate little ones
Born to those who knew enough
Not to grasp, but to hold easily;
Who could trade agony for love, in His name.

No, they will not pack up and send away
Your cribs, your little clothes, your toys,
To hide from their grief.
They are far too courageous for that.

Came the Disciples unto Jesus, saying
Who is the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven?
And Jesus called a little child unto Him
And set him in the midst of them, and said
Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted,
And become as little children
Ye shall not enter into the kingdom of Heaven.

They will save them all
For your new brothers and sisters,
Not to replace you
But to renew their love for you.

Because of you
They will do the most difficult thing of all:
They will continue.
They will commit themselves to Life.

Fortunate parents to have had you,
To have known you
And love you so much,
They could let you go.

Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones,
For I say unto you, That in Heaven
Their angels do always behold
The face of my Father which is in heaven.

'Gracious Ladies' on the horizon?

By Moira McCarthy

There may be three more 'Gracious Lady' type boats servicing the South Shore if the state is able to obtain federal money to fund their construction.

"We have asked the state to sponsor us in a federal grant to fund the building of three new commuter boats to service the South Shore," Charles English, owner and president of Massachusetts Bay Commuter Services, said.

"There is money available for it in the transportation budget in Washington. (Transportation Secretary-Fred) Salvucci's office is in the process of finding out exactly how to get the grant now."

The state would need $2.5 million to construct the three boats. English pointed out the boats would be desperately needed when expressway re-construction begins.

Right now, the 'Gracious Lady' services up to 1000 commuters a day. In fact, English said, even their 9:30 shuttle has been full and they've had to turn people away.

With the addition of three boats, the commuter service would run with a boat departing Hingham every 20 minutes, much in the way an airline shuttle runs.

And one boat would always be kept in maintenence, in case of an accident such as the one experienced on the 'Gracious Lady's' maiden voyage.

English did not know when the grant decision would be made, but he said he hopes it to be very soon.

For the time being, the company has expanded its service by adding bus routes from Marshfield to Hingham along Route 3A, with stops in Scituate and Cohasset, as well as bus route through Boston, starting at Rowe's Wharf (where the boat docks) and making stops all the way in to the Prudential Center.

The buses on the South Shore were contracted to South Shore Buses, and the Boston route was contracted to the Double Decker Company, whose red double decker buses are quite visible in Boston.

"The only thing I'm getting uneasy about is that here we are, not able to carry all our customers now, so what in God's name will we do with all the bus additions?" English said.

But he did come up with an answer. All buses will be in constant radio contact with the boat, so if a boat is filled, the bus will drive all its passengers into Boston.

"This way we know everyone will be accommodated."

The buses will begin running September 1, or Labor Day at the latest, pending their receiving the proper permits.

South Shore Art Center offers selection of tours

Tour Christmas in New York City, paint the island of Bermuda, view the fall colors of the Berkshires or explore the old and new of Mexico.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, offers a selection of tours designed to offer a good cross section of personal free time meshed with planned activities and tours by knowledgeable guides.

The Berkshires fall foliage trip for Oct. 22 and Oct. 23 will cost $125 to $144 depending on the type of accommodation.

The two-day art and theater trip to New York for Dec. 10 and Dec. 11 ranges from $172 to $204. Nine days to Mexico City and Merida is planned for Jan. 6 through Jan. 15, 1984, and the price is $839 for a double, $795 for a triple and $119 additional for a single supplement. "Paint Bermuda" with Virginia Avery comes Jan. 17 to Jan. 23. The price is $574 for a triple and $625 for a double.

All trip prices include a tax deductible donation to the South Shore Art Center. Complete detailed information on the Virginia Avery trip will be available Thursday evening Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. at the center.

E. Michael Jones of the Bermuda Department of Tourism will be at the informational meeting.

Registration and a deposit must be in to Cohasset Travel Service by Sept. 20.

Information on the other trips will be available at the Center's fall class open house, Sunday, Sept. 18 from 4 to 6 p.m.

Registration and deposit for these trips must be in by the end of September to Cerel's Travel in Natick.

The motor coach tour through the Berkshires includes stops at the Clark Art Museum. The museum is noted for its collection of Italian, French Impressionist and Barbizon School works and its English and American and silver and sculpture. At the Bennington Museum, one can view a collection of Grandma Moses' works, regional Revolutionary War items, rare glass and Bennington Pottery.

The tour will also include Chesterwood, the estate of sculptor Daniel Chester French; and the Great Barrington Pottery with its authentic Japanese Tea House and gardens. Accommodations have been arranged at the Ramada Inn in Bennington.

On the New York City tour, free time will allow visitors to view the famous Christmas windows of Saks Fifth Avenue, Lord and Taylor and Macy's.

Highlights of the trip include tickets to Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs;" a visit to the Metropolitan Museum of Art to view its Christmas tree display; a stop at the new Fulton Market at South Street Seaport; brunch at Sardi's; and dinner at the Spindletop Restaurant.

Guests will spend the night at the European style Windsor Harley Hotel near Carnegie Hall.

The New York tour also offers for an additional fee a three-hour personalized SoHo art tour. The tour will include history and background of the development of SoHo and visits to three galleries and an artist's studio.

After the New Year, join primitive art expert Dr. Russell Doucette, retired professor of art at Mass. College of Art, on an exploration of Mexico City and the Mayan wonders of the Yucatan.

The group will spend five nights in Mexico City at the Hotel Del Prado. Highlights of the days in Mexico City include a sightseeing tour of the city, a trip to the Museum of Archeology to see its collection of pre-Columbian art and tours to the Quetzalcoastl Temple, Temple of Teotihuacan, Pyramids of the Sun and Moon and the Shrine of Guadelupe.

At Merida, the group will stay at the Hotel Merida Mission. A half day will be spend touring this city known as the colonial capital of the Yucatan and recognized for its fascinating Temple of the Dwarf, the Nunnery Quadrangle and the Palace of the Governors.

Dr. Doucette will also take the group to Chicken Itza to view its ruins and to the mysterious Mayan City of Uxmal.

Dr. Doucette will be available at the center's fall open house to answer questions regarding the Mexican trip.

"Paint Bermuda" with South Shore artist Virginia Avery combines fun with improvising a skill. Mornings will be spent with painting instruction and demonstrations and afternoons spent painting at pre-selected sites. One day will be left for selecting a site to capture on canvas.

Open to all level artists and non-artists, the trip will allow participants to improve their artistic skills while enjoying the beauty of the island.

The group will stay at Bermuda's beach resort, the Reefs. Following a day of painting, participants will come together for afternoon tea and critiques of their works.

Each trip is designed to accommodate a limited number of travelers so early registration is important. The Berkshires foliage and the New York City trips will have convenient pickup locations along the South Shore.

For more information, call the center at 383-9548.

108 readers byte off celebration

An apple party in honor of the 108 participants in "Byte into a Good Book" climaxed a successful summer reading program at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The program involved students from kindergarten through grade 12 with 64 youngsters reading 20 or more books for a total of over 2,000 books.

This annual program encourages children to explore the world through books, to pursue new interests through reading and to estabilsh a life-long habit of reading.

This year the program took on a new twist with a computer available in the children's room for readers to record the books they had read.

Each participant produced a print-out of their reading accomplishments. Children as well as parents enjoyed the opportunity to work with the computer which for some was a new experience. For others it reinforced computer skills learned in the classroom.

The computer was loaned to the library by the Cohasset School Dept.

The program was written by Bill Langmaid, a Cohasset High School junior. Assisting him were Wayne Thomas, a high school senior, and Arthur Meacham, a seventh grader.

As part of the apple party festivities, each child made an apple-print as a party souvenir under the direction of Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman. Mrs. Koopman-Wyman is well known to Cohasset youngsters as a former art teacher in the schools. Apple games including "Pin the worm on the apple," invented by nine year old Amy Crafts just for the party, provided party fun.

The highlight of the afternoon was home-made caramel apples made by Jill Crafts of the Friends of the Library, and her mother, Mrs. Hope Seeley.

Reading certificates of accomplishment will be awarded in the elementary schools in September to the following participants.

They are:

Also, Sara Corbett, Kate deLima, Dan DeMichele, Marnie DeMichele, Wesley DeSantis, Alison Doherty, Michael Equi, Nathan Fiore, Colleen Fitzsimmons, Tara Gallagher, Colleen Geary, Bobby Gentile, Priscilla Goff, Becky Golden, Nicole Greco, Jillian Green, Nicole Haefner, Shona Hislop, Johanna Horn, Jessica Jenkins, Rebecca Kirk, Sarah Kirk, Allison Kornet, Bonnie Krueger, Julie Larrabee, David Leahy, Matthew Lombardy and Jimmy Long.

Also, Kay Long, Maureen Long, Tommy Long, Erin McAllister, Brendan McCarthy, Sean McCarthy, Gerald McNabb, Nick Manganaro, John Maynard, Martha Maynard, Victoria Maynard, Marc Mercurio, Corinna Minnar, Aimee Mitchell, Ellen Mitchell, Jonathan Mitchell, Billy Murphy, Denise Murphy, Courtney Norton, Heather Norton, Chris O'Connor, Eileen O'Connor, Erin O'Connor, Kate O'Connor, Pam Parker, Sarah Parker, Ann Philippon, Chris Pope, Kara Pope, Julienne Quemere, Sophie Redfield, Allen Reid, Matthew Reid, Michael Riley, Tina Rousseau, Mark St. Onge, Courtney Schultz, Doug Schultz, Gregory Schultz, Caitlin Shannon, Henrietta Shannon, Megan Staunton, Teri Stover, Erin Sutherland, Amie Theriault, Scott Theriault, Jeff Thomas, Sarah Thompson, Dean Volungis, Tara Volungis, Erik Waal and Alison Welz.

Move to halt pets use in lab tests

Five Norfolk County residents, including one Cohasset resident, are participating in a statewide campaign that may lead to a ballot question on the use of lost or abandoned pets in laboratory experimentation.

They are Cheryl Tracy of Norfolk, Althea Griffin of Weymouth, Ann Albanese of Quincy, Mary Jane Schwartz of Cohasset, and Silvia Vitale of Brookline.

The campaign is being organized by Protect Our Pets (ProPets), a coalition sponsored by the New England Anti-Vivisection Society and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"Protect Our Pets" filed an initiative petition Aug. 3 with the Attorney General which would repeal the Massachusetts pound seizure law and make it illegal to use any dog or cat obtained from a dog officer, minicipal pound, or animal shelter for experimental purposes.

Under the law, several thousand lost, stray or abandoned pets are seized by research laboratories every year.

ProPets must gather at least 61,000 signatures of registered Massachusetts voters between Sept. 21 and Nov. 23 in order to have the petition presented to the 1984 Legislature. If the Legislature fails to adopt the petition, ProPets will gather at least 10,000 additional signatures to place the issue on the November 1984 ballot.

The Norfolk County coordinators are seeking volunteers to help with the signature drive. Volunteers should call Tracy evenings at 528-2217 in Norfolk. More information about the campaign may be obtained by writing "Protect Our Pets," Suite 508, 10 Tower Office Park, Woburn, MA 01801.

Target Industries denied preferential treatment

Assistant Town Counsel John Slater has ruled Target Industries should have obtained a special permit before beginning paving.

The Building Department did not give a company preferential treatment because two of the firm's trustees are Cohasset residents.

This was confirmed by Building Inspector Robert Dennis.

Dennis had written to town counsel following the grading and paving of an area adjacent to Pleasant Street which Dennis determined was within the Flood Plain and Watershed Protection District of the town.

Slater said the mandate of the Zoning Bylaw "is ambiguous" and provides "No land shall be filled, excavated, or otherwise changed in grade, except pursuant to a special permit therefore issued by the Board of Appeals."

Slater added, "As with any violation of the Zoning Bylaw, you have available to you the remedies provided within that Bylaw and the applicable statutes. If, however, Target Industries is able to obtain a special permit from the Board of Appeals, it would then seem that the necessity for further enforcement action would be obviated."

Dennis said if Target receives a permit for the application, he will not require the paving already completed be removed.

Mary Roy, one of the owners of "Cohasset by the Sea Motel" complained to Dennis the town was giving Target Industries preferential treatment by not requiring a special permit hearing.

Assessors records show Cohasset residents Roger Porter and Michael Abbruzzese are Target Industry trustees.

Dennis said he did not give the company a permit to "grade and pave" the old railroad bed adjacent to Target Industries on Pleasant Street.

This property runs back of the Log and Line Restaurant and a small building owned by Joseph Rosano. Dennis added a small portion of land owned by Target was paved Aug. 3.

Dennis determined some of the land lies within the flood plain and is subject to the Wetlands Protection Act. He said a special permit application should have been made and has written to town counsel for advice.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said selectmen voted to allow Target Industries to pave the railroad bed but it was assumed the company would comply with other permit requirements. A June 10 letter set several conditions but did not remind Target of other permit requirements.

The letter listed the following conditions. They are:

Grading and hot top should be done in accordance with the specifications of the Highway Surveyor.

There should be a lane open at all times for fire apparatus to use the railroad bed as an access route.

Vehicles parked on the fire land will be subject to towing.

The town reserves the right to remove the pavement and make cuts for municipal purposes.

The company should call Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield before beginning the work.

Although the letter mentions rights reserved by the town it did not say the town reserves ownership of the railroad bed which the town purchased for over $100,000 from the Old Colony Railroad several years ago.

The building which houses the Log and Line was formerly the town railroad station. Boston bound commuters stepped out the back door onto a narrow platform and on to the trains.

Dennis recently issued a cease and desist order to the Roy family who purchased a lot to provide for valet parking, the other side of Target Industries on Pleasant Street. Dennis issued the order because work was begun on the lot without a special permit.

Sports Center indoor soccer programs

The South Shore Sports Center will offer a complete range of indoor soccer programs beginning Sept. 15 on its new Astro-Turf and dasher board playing field, the only facility of its kind in New England.

"There is a program for everyone, all ages, all abilities," said Director Ben Brewster, Boston College and New England's Soccer Coach of the Year. "Our first year of successful programs will be expanded.

Two hundred teams from Boston, Wellesley, as well as North and South Shore towns competed in league play which begins Sept. 15. 'Mini-clinics' on Tuesdays and Thursdays will feature firm, instructional games for youth players, for youths four to eight years-old.

Tuesday night is Ladies Night and Wednesday night is open soccer play. Holiday tournaments during Columbus Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas are scheduled.

Brewster, a former pro player with the New England Teamen and Boston Minutemen, described the center's newest program. "A youth development program titled 'Soccer 2000' will mix 20 minutes of quality instruction with 40 minutes of supervised play."

In addition to organized programs, the center and its staff are available for practice times, special clinics, soccer parties, coaching and referee courses. A soccer film library is available to participating clubs.

Tennis, aerobics and YMCA sponsored programs are also offered at the multi-use recreation facility. Family, individual, junior and corporate memberships are available.

For details about these programs, call 740-1105.

Vehicle check at Cohasset Heights reveals diverse loads

By Patricia Anne Walsh

What is being checked at the Cohasset Heights Dump?

Here are some observations after a tour of the private landfill.

Commercial Motor Vehicle Investigator, Robert Burns, stood at the foot of Crocker Lane, the road leading to Cohasset Heights Limited Dump recently.

He was checking trucks for registration numbers, plates, type of truck, and places their loads originated.

Crocker Lane on Rte. 3A is unmarked, except for a sign pointed to the State Department of Public Works Garage at the top of the hill.

Cohasset Heights Ltd. Dump occupies the land on the back of the hill, out of sight.

From 7 a.m. until just before 1 p.m., Burns logged 18 10-wheel dump trucks delivering their loads. Within 10 minutes after Burns' departure three more 10-wheelers entered. Burns acknowledged these are expensive rigs and may be in radio contact.

The carriers were marked Auburndale, Suburban Disposal, Barry Bros., Commercial Residential, Industrial and Municipal, SCA, Golden Key Disposal, and BFI.

The trucks were all roll tops or packers, with their loads not visible except for one truck which had a "Pepsi" and other cartons poking out the rear.

Their diverse loads reportedly originated from Hoods Milk in Charlestown; Commercial pick-ups; Proctor and Gamble in Quincy; Star Market, Quincy; Longfellow Management, Commonwealth Ave., Boston; Town of Braintree; Commercial Rubbish, Brighton; HPA Transportation, Canton; Debris from MDC Beach, Hull.

Others were: Commercial Rubbish, Boston; Commercial Boston and South Shore; Kenneolly Hul, Fairmount St.; Spencer Press, Hingham; Grossman's, Braintree; K Plumbing, So. Weymouth; Weymouth High School building debris; residential and commercial, Wellesley and Needham.

State and local officials say rubbish hauling has recently become the seventh largest industry in the U.S. Haulers advertisements occupy several of the Yellow Pages under "Rubbish."

Officials also report BFI, the largest trash haulers in the area, and perhaps in the nation have bought the rolling stock off Barry Bros, who reportedly bought the dump (doing business as Cohasset Heights, Limited in 1982) for $3.1 million.

No guard or person stopped the car, although Burns said many of the same haulers use Quincy Dump, operated by BFI, which is expected to close in one and one-half years. At Quincy, the city stations a city worker to check in the trucks, he said.

The paved road turns to dirt roads at the rear of the hill. There is a red office building, formerly a hunting lodge, Odermatt said, and sheds for the equipment. In front were two mammoth bulldozers parked, and working at the dump site were three more 'dozers.

There is a small pond near the top of the hill believed to be for firefighting purposes, and another small pond at the bottom.

There is one pit with clay and sand "cover" material, and a huge pit covering many acres with plenty of room for vast amounts of more rubbish. In the distance one can see two water tanks and the insurance buildings on the Boston skyline. The rubbish is covered and there were no seagulls present to indicate poor maintenance or coverage.

One of the loads listed was debris from a Weymouth High School. Weymouth School Superintendent Leon Farrin, said the roof of North Weymouth High School was being removed and replaced. Farrin said he knew of no asbestos in the roof, but would not give the name of the contractor.

The property was bought by James Tyeryar, who developed the private dump for $3.1 million, according to records in the assessor's office.

Although the property reportedly sold for $3.1 million in 1982, the assessor's records show the 1983 assessment is for a total value of $35,750 in land and building and the 1983 tax total is $1,984 to be spread to the town.

Field Hockey Coach Gino DiGirolamo shows some pointers to Jill Shuckman and Maria Cahill.

Cohasset riders held Jumpathon

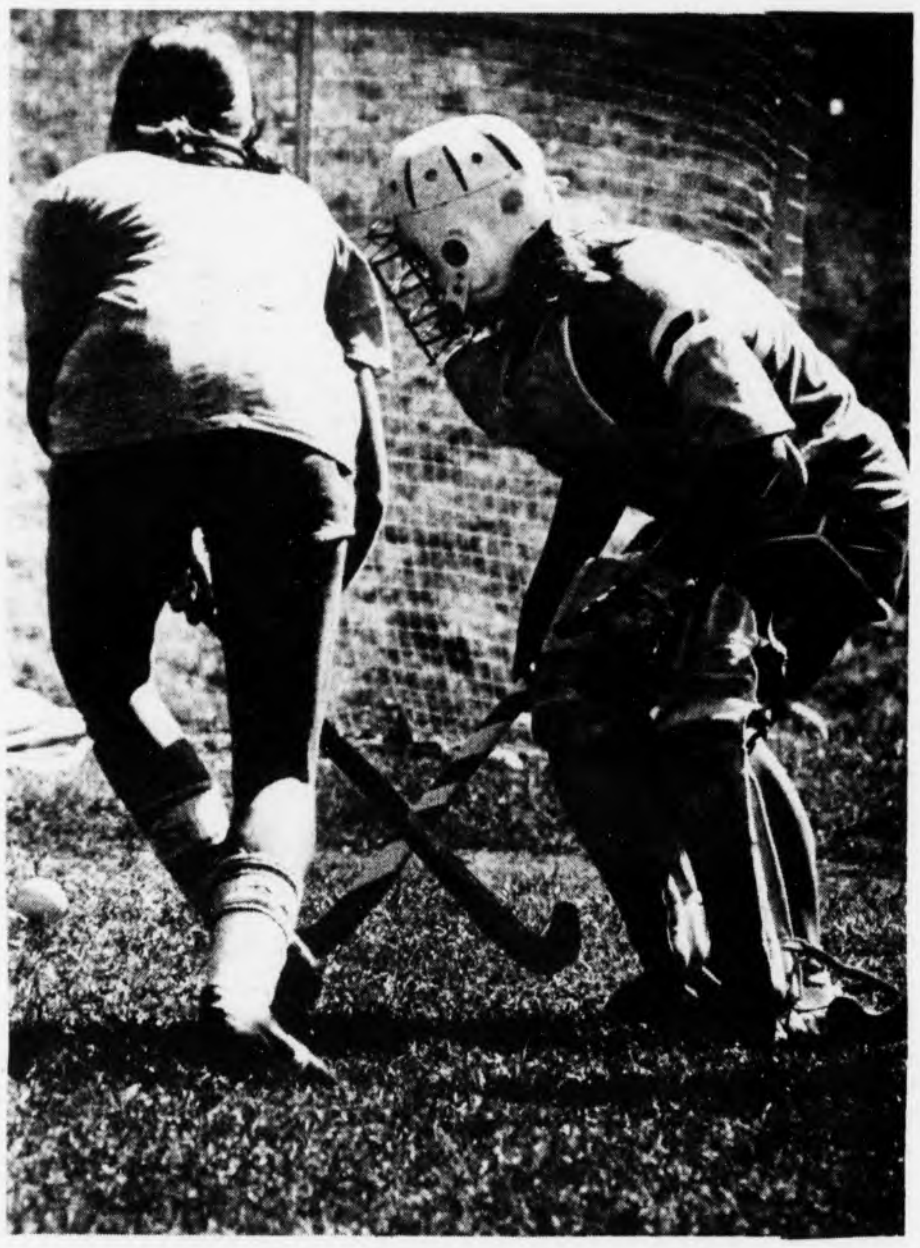
The Cohasset Riding Club held a Jumpathon at Wheelwright Park recently.

In Division A, jumping 18 feet and placing first was Jennifer Ellingwood on Fortress; Jennifer Powers on Doll was second; Cindy Spooner placed third on Rassan Shalif and Michelle Massa placed fourth on Fling. Also participating were Jill Hamilton on Moshe and Lauren Brown on Source.

In Division B, jumping two feet, three inches for first place was Heather Ripley on Soxy, and Anne Marie McKenna jumped second on Rassan Shalif.

In Division C, jumping two feet, nine inches for first place was Jean Garvey on High Jynx, Amy Mitman second on Jay B and third place Laura McKenna on Lady Guinevere.

Upcoming activities for the Cohasset Riding Club will be the Annual Hunter Horse Show which will be held Sunday, Sept. 11.



Judging will be Miss Lynn Briggs of Pembroke.

Also scheduled are a Dressage Show Sunday, Oct. 10 and a two phase event Sunday, Oct. 23.

Those who want information about the Cohasset Riding Club or any of its activities may call Sally Davenport at 383-1932 or Ann Mitchell at 383-9888.

Drugstore confusion

Recently there has been some confusion to the identity of Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy and Scituate Colonial Drug. The two separate stores are owned by two distinct merchants. Ralph Harrison owns the Cohasset store and Bruce Goldman owns the Scituate store. Recently Goldman pleaded guilty to two counts of fraudulent record keeping.

All eyes are on the ball during this recent field hockey practice.

1st Annual Leslie Messina Field Day

The First Annual Leslie Messina Eastern Mass. Field Day was held at the Cohasset Golf Club Friday, Aug. 26.

Twenty-eight foursomes representing junior golfers from eight South Shore Clubs participated in the event.

Clubs sending 14 junior golfers were: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hatherly, Marshfield, North Field, Pembroke, Scituate and South Shore.

The format was a mixed club foursome playing Denver style.

The winning foursome matching cards with a 63 were: Brian O'Neill, South Shore; Dan Benidetti, Marshfield; Bill Geraty, Duxbury, and Scott Bianchi, Cohasset.

Also scoring a 63 and coming in second were: K. McKenna, Pembroke; G. Rath, Marshfield; A. Kondracki, South Shore, and Lou Ann Doherty, Hatherly.

Leslie Messina, a junior golfer from the Cohasset Golf Club, played in this Field Day in 1981 and 1982.

She was killed in an automobile accident in Hingham in December.

The Junior Golfers from the South Shore chose to dedicate this Field Day annually in her memory.

It is interesting to note the low score for this tournament was 63 and the high 72 (course par 72).

4th Annual Nantasket Bike Race

The Fourth Annual Nantasket Beach Bike Race, a 25-kilometer event with over 100 competitors, was held Labor Day morning under ideal conditions. The unique featuare of the race was that a majority of participants, with ages ranging from 14 to 62 years-old, were first-time racers.

Cindy Emery of Quincy came in first in the Women's Class with a winning time of 39.27. In the Men's Class, Jon Turbitt of Worcester won with a finishing time of 39.39.

Placing second and third were Jeffrey Migre of Hanover and Richard Murphy of Wakefield.

Vincent Champetta of Quincy led the Veteran's Class with a time of 39.48.

The winners were awarded prizes and trophies, and 20 of the participants received gift certificates through a drawing.

The race, sponsored by Cohasset Cycle Sports and Marukin U.S.A. Bicycles, was held for the benefit of the Vincent de Paul Society, a non-profit charitable organization providing emergency help for the needy.

In addition to registration fees, funds were raised by raffling off a Marukin 12-speed bicycle donated by Cohasset Cycle Sports. The bike was won by Colin Gillis of Hull. A corps of dedicated volunteers, including parishioners of St. Mary's of the Bay, St. Ann's and St. Mary's of Green Hill, members of U.S. Naval Sea Cadets Corps of Scituate, police officers from Hingham and Hull, and the Hull Fire Department contributed to the race's enormous success.

'The Game' new Cohasset-Scituate rivalry

Rockland and Duxbury week in and week out," he said.

As soon as Scituate joined the league, it was evenly divided into two six-team divisions. Schools will play teams in their own division twice and schools in the other division once. Football will still be played once against each school in the league.

Cohasset, the smallest school in the league, will often compete against schools its own size. They ranked in the top 15 of the Eastern Mass. Division for overall school record last year. But, teams like Duxbury, who are double Cohasset's enrollment, usually took the top four places in the league.

More teams in the league provides more opportunity for Cohasset and other schools. Some of the small division teams like East Bridgewater and Hull do not have all the sports like soccer, golf or gymnastics, which Cohasset has. Expanding the league will allow Cohasset to play more league games in those sports.

Svensen views the South Shore League as a positive step for Scituate also. "The kids are really enthusiastic to play teams that they have never played before. Scituate will be the new kids on the block this year," said Svensen.

Some old traditions will reoccur since school enrollments have dropped and these teams have become competitors again.

Because Scituate left the OCL they were rematched with Rockland for the Thanksgiving game. Scituate and Rockland were Thanksgiving rivals for 14 years in the Old Colony League.

Chatterton said, "I see Scituate becoming our rivals instead of Hull. We've been competitive with them in every sport in the last few years. Even when I was in school, Cohasset kids were closer to Scituate kids then with Hingham or Hull."

Svenson said, "Ninety-five percent of the coaches were in favor of moving to the South Shore League."

"On Oct. 1 we will find out if we are officially ranked fourth largest in the league." he said

However, Scituate teams are well aware that there are some very good teams in the South Shore League." Scituate does not intend to slough off because they may be a bigger fish in a smaller sea," he said.

Mothers of grooms want the left side of church

By Lois Martin

That's bad news. And it accounts for my sons' refusal to get married.

"The mother of the groom wears beige and keeps her mouth shut."

Hogwash on that. And my boys know that's what I'd have to say about such a repressive social motto. They wouldn't mind a lot if I didn't honor the beige dress part and they'd expect any mother of the bridegroom to murmur politely in the reception line.

It is rather they know that a mandate of this nature would inspire me to other extremes, untoward ones. And while they are, by popular consensus, tolerant of having what someone once called "Haley's Comet" for a parent, they're too smart not to be fearful.

PATCHES

Consider this. Society has made small if not spectacular strides in placing equal value on both men and women. Why then, when in this particular lifetime I have only sons, must this be history's spot to make the bride's mother the big deal at the wedding of my sons?

It's like being second runner up in the Miss America Pageant. No one even remembers the color of her hair, let alone what state she's from. That won't do. It isn't equal. Women alone ought not be the only sex to benefit from upgrading social status. Men have been the second thoughts at weddings. Time for the bridegroom,to become equally important...thereby his dear mother.

Let's face it, the way things stand now no one notices what the bridegroom's mother is wearing. Make that memorable. There are simply cut dresses in flourescent sequins that are perfect for any wedding. Beige, indeed any aura of silent off-white are out. We require strong colors, bright, vervy, promising one whale of a reception and a good dancer.

And I want the left side of the church. The bride's had it since the beginning of time. It's our turn, mothers of the marrying men.

Let the bride wear the corsage. I plan to wear the bouquet. Furthermore I'm finding hose with words on them. And I'm going to be escorted to my seat after the bride is down the aisle and I'm requesting her father escort me since my sons are busy.

The acceptable alternative to that is if I concede to be ringbearer. In acquiescence to the boys I'll resist having a mole put where none has been before. I don't plan to make a scene, after all, I just want equal billing. And that won't come easy. The mother of the bride will likely forget to invite me unless I make subtle moves to be included.

How come, by the by, no one gives the groom away. He's no more prepared to be married than the bride. If someone has to offer her up, then the bridegroom gets the same courteous surrender. I'll do it...'Who gives this man to be married?' "I will, somewhat," I say, before moving unobtrusively to his right side.

There are little details to be ironed out, where we all stand in the receiving line, what I'll give for a dowry and when he throws his boutonniere. That'll fall into place.

And there's no hurry. I've got time to shop for the right dress, years to help the boys' friends plan the bridegroom shower.

It'll be exciting, novel, progressive, the BRA movement (Bridegrooms Rights Amendment). See you in church, on the left, sometime in the next decade.

Extra patrols decrease N.R. boating problems

By Milly Potter

There has been a substantial decrease in boating problems on the North River this summer thanks to extra patrols, according to Alice C. "Patsy" Proctor, chairman of the North River Commission.

The gift of about $1,100 to the commission from the North and South River Watershed Association has allowed the commissioners to add 45 extra hours, she said.

Patrol officer Joseph Strazdes has also been patrolling on weekdays, so that would-be violators of boating laws can't say to themselves, "Aha, it's only Thursday, I can speed," Mrs. Proctor laughed.

She said the patrols will continue into the fall, "as needed."

The commissioners have been pleased to see many more canoers on the river this summer. Several Canoe Days have been sponsored by the Watershed Association, and the South Shore Natural Science Center, and at least one more is being planned. Canoers, she said, feel safer on the river now.

In other commission news, Mrs. Proctor said she is going to Georgetown this week to talk to a group in that town that is interested in applying to make the North Shore's Palmer River accepted as a Scenic River.

She said she'll tell them of the North River Commission's experiences as managers of the river, and "what we see in our law we'd like improved."

Among the improvements, she said, would be further definitions of the commission's powers. "I would feel easier if we had the same rights as the conservation commission to inspect and respond to complaints," she said. She explained that the North River Commissioners can only inspect a site if a complaint has been filed with the commission. "We can't just snoop around," she said. The Commission "doesn't go looking for violations or have an agent," she said, adding that as a taxpayer herself, she would never ask for an agent.

Now that the busy summer on the river is drawing to a close, commissioners will turn their attention to updating the river's management plan, now five years-old.

Mrs. Proctor said they would contact the conservation commissions in the six-member towns to find out what they have done to carry out the plan's recommendations for land-taking and other suggestions. Some the commission is aware of, but they want to find "what else has come to pass."

She said it was easy for the commission to get bogged down in the law enforcement aspect of the management plan, and they want to concentrate more on its other aspects.

School has started, so can meetings and coffees and adult classes be far behind? I can remember going off to school puzzling over what mother could find to do, alone all day. Now that I've found out for myself what goes on behind the scenes, I realize that just providing three meals a day can be a challenge. All that menu planning, puzzling out what to buy at the supermarket, making the meals come out right and on time, day after day after day, is a job in itself. It gets particularly tricky when fall activities resume and it seems everyone is on a different schedule, with different places to go and things to do. Some families seldom eat together any more, so "supper" has been known to extend from four in the afternoon to seven at night and for many, a casserole is the answer. This recipe of Millie Carr's is quick and easy, can be reheated and has the added advantage of using nourishing vegetables.

BARBECUED CHOPS

In a blender jar, place 1 medium onion, quartered, 1 clove garlic, halved, 1 stalk celery with leaves cut in chunks, 1 small green pepper, cut up and seeded, 1 c. catsup, 2 T vinegar, 1 T Worcestershire Sauce, 1 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper. Blend until vegetables are finely chopped. Set aside. Preheat fry pan, rub a small amount of fat from six pork chops over the bottom of the pan. Add chops and brown well on both sides. Pour mixture from blender over top, cover and reduce heat to simmer. Cook 45 min.

Come January I'll regret these words I know, but right about now, tomatoes are losing their charm for me. When urged from all sides to take home a few tomatoes from the garden when you're already wondering how to use up your own supply, disguising the taste of this fruit becomes a challenge. Now, it seems good cooks such as Susan Scott are finding ways to use green tomatoes that taste every bit as good as ripe ones. So, here's a tasty dish to set before your family called

GREEN TOMATO SCALLOP

1 c. chopped celery
1/2 c. finely chopped onion
2 T butter or margarine
2 T all-purpose flour
2 T sugar
1 tsp. salt, dash pepper
1/4 tsp. dried dill
4 slices bread, toasted and buttered
5 medium green tomatoes, chopped

Cook celery and onion in butter or margarine till tender. Blend in flour, sugar, salt, pepper and dill. Cut toast in small cubes. Add tomato and 3/4 of toast cubes to celery mixture. Turn into 1½ qt. casserole. Bake, covered, in 350 degree oven for 55 min. Uncover. Top with remaining toast cubes. Bake 5 min. more. Serves eight.

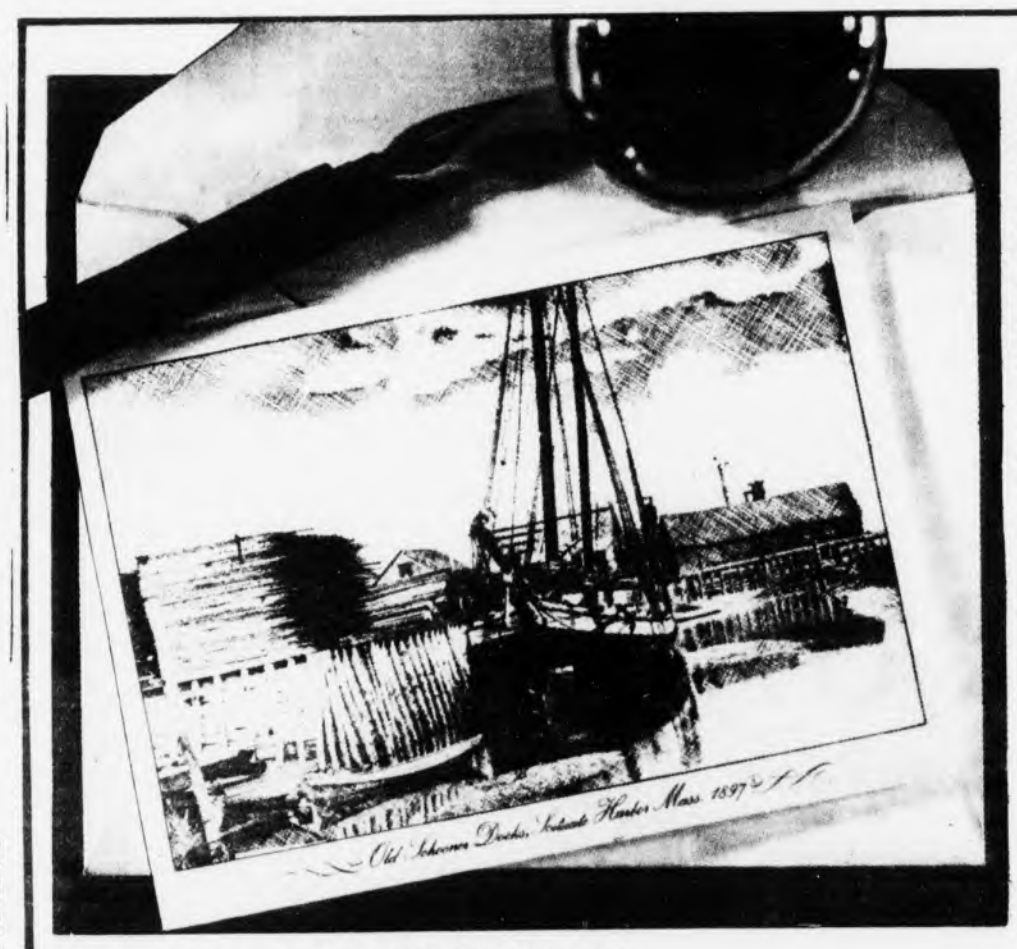
Now that summer is on the wane and the evenings ever cooler and shorter, why not one last outdoor meal? When the sun sets over the garden, a hot cup of coffee would go well with a serving of Donna Modell's



CHEESECAKE

Crust:
1 c. graham cracker crumbs
3 T melted butter
2 tsp. sugar
Filling:
2 pkg. cream cheese, 8 oz. each
1 pint sour cream
3 eggs
1 c. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

Butter an 8" spring-form pan. Sprinkle sides with crumbs. Mix the rest of the crumbs with butter and 2 tsp. sugar. Place firmly in bottom of pan. Soften cream cheese at room temperature. Beat, add sugar, slowly adding eggs one at a time, beating each time. Fold in vanilla and sour cream. Pour over crumbs in pan and bake 30 min. at 375 degrees. Turn off heat and leave in oven for one hour (very important). Cool, then chill. Reserve some of the crumbs for top. Top with cherries or other fruit.

a new approach to single family living

We've had a great many visitors at The Meadows in Hingham since our opening, and we're pleased at their reactions to the spaciousness and detailing of the homes ...and to the very private feeling that has been achieved.

Over and over we hear... "this is just like a single family home... only better!" "The floor plans are great—so functional—and there's no wasted space"... "Your two bedroom home is larger than the three bedroom house I have now!"... "and everything is new: kitchens are fantastic"... "The cathedral ceilings make the rooms seem twice as big"... Everyone is pleased by the unusually shaped swimming pool ... the whirlpool ... the clubhouse and tennis courts. There's no way you can have all of that in the typical one-family home.

"There are people to care for the lawns ... the snow shoveling"... "I like the private courtyards—just big enough to do some creative gardening—but not so large as to be a chore"... "There's much better security here than I've been used to"... "and we still have full basements ... and a two-car garage." "Ownership is just like my old home ... you can mortgage your property, sell it when you want... get the same tax advantages."

The Meadows in Hingham is a wonderful place to live... the country-styled two and three bedroom attached single family homes are located on rolling meadowland covered with wild flowers. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500

Historical Society recalls the famed Cox estate

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Historical Society Curator

The large brick house at Cohasset's 49 Margin Street, long known as "The Oaks," and for years the home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox (she was often called by her first name, Jessie), has been since its inception one of Cohasset's best known garden estates.

Constructed in 1931, this spacious residence and its superbly landscaped yards reflect an era of gracious living now all but passed from the Cohasset scene.

However, not everyone may realize that the beautiful grounds surrounding "The Oaks" once were the site of a thriving ship-building establishment whose production included the largest sailing vessels ever built by Cohasset's 19th century shipwrights.

During the town's "Age of Sail", a number of small shipyards existed on the shores of Cohasset Harbor. From about 1800 to 1866 the largest of the shipyards was located on the point of land at Margin Street, where, years later, Mr. and Mrs. Cox would build their Cohasset home.

Near the flourishing shipyard, Capt. Nichols Tower owned his wharf and store from which he conducted a fishing and marine salvage business.

This Capt. Tower helped in the construction of the second lighthouse at Minot's Ledge. Later, his wharf property at Margin Street was owned by Capt. Ephraim Snow and his brothers, owners of a fleet of mackerel schooners and descendants of a Cape Cod seafaring family.

The largest sailing vessel constructed at the adjacent shipyard was a three-masted vessel named "Greenwich", of 788 tons and measuring 160 feet in length. The Cohasset bark "Lewis", 218 tons, was launched at the Margin Street yard in 1841, during the peak of Cohasset's maritime activity.

By the 1850's, Richard Bourne, descendant of an early Cohasset family had built his residence near the shipyard. Bourne's home soon was sold to the well-known dramatic actor Lawrence Barrett, a member of the late 19th century "colony" of theater personalities then living along the shore of the harbor, all of whom also were avid yachtsmen.

Barrett enlarged the house, turning it into a Victorian estate-house of prominent size, then sold it in turn to Clarence W. Barron, the well-known financier.

C.W. Barron was known as the founder of Barron's weekly financial journal, and for his purchase, in 1902, of the prestigious "Wall Street Journal," a publication started by Dow, Jones & Company some years earlier.

In addition to his ownership of the Margin St. estate now called "The Oaks," Barron maintained a prize herd of Guernsey cattle at "The Oaks Farm" on Sohier Street.

His sense of community spirit manifested itself through his membership on the town's Harbor Improvement Committee, a group dedicated to modernizing the facilities of Cohasset Harbor and to the establishment of public parks at the harbor's edge.

By the second quarter of the current century, "The Oaks" had passed to C.W. Barron's grand-daughter, Mrs. William C. Cox.

The Victorian mansion was razed, to be replaced by today's substantial brick structure. Thus the Cox family became the owners of one of Cohasset's newest—and finest—great estates. "The Oaks" soon became a focal point of attention, both for its handsome house and the tasteful beauty of its finely landscaped grounds. Carefully tended greenhouses displayed superb collections of flowers, and trees of numerous species were grown to shade the spacious lawns.

To many, "The Oaks" came to epitomize a style of living characterized by the graciousness of early 20th century years, but perhaps emperilled by the disquieting events of more recent times. Today, the Cox estate at Margin Street retains the element of visual delight for which it first became known.

The Cohasset Historical Society, in cooperation with "The Oaks" new owners, Yankee Oil and Gas Company, is offering a unique opportunity for area residents and visitors to view the "Cox Estate" at Cohasset Harbor with a two-day Open House and Garden Tour, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 8 and 9.

On both days, the hours will be from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Historical Society members will act as guides.

Tickets for the event are $3, and may be purchased at the following locations at Cohasset Center: Philip Smith's Creations, Fleming's Hardware, The Linen Chest, Roger's Music, and at the Historical Society's museums.

Tickets will also be available at the door on the days of the Open House. A special feature of the house tour on both days will be a program of classical guitar music, presented by Roger Shaffer of Roger's Music, who will play from noon to 1:30 p.m.

For further information about this unusual and unique open house event, please call the Historical Society at 383-0773 or 383-6930.

Murray named chairman

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset is the new chairman of LANCE, a group of legislators opposed to casino establishments.

LANCE represents all of the New England states and New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Senator Stephen Casey (D-Connecticut) and Murray, a Republican, are the co-founders of Lance. Casey was the first chairman of the committee.

"The reason LANCE was established was the need for legislators to band together so that casino owners could not play one state against another to set up casinos," Murray said.

"I sincerely appreciate the unanimous vote given to me by the out of state legislators to be their chairman, she added.

South Shore singles

Single men and women, give us your perspective. That's one of the things we're including in the Oct. 12 "Single on the South Shore" supplement.

Our population is made up of nearly one-third men and women who are not married. Write a brief point of view on single style as you see it.

Mail that or other comments to Lois Martin, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield 02050.

And if there is a single person who is worthy of a feature, call us with that information, 837-5625 or 383-6731.

It's happening in Cohasset . . .

Pancake breakfast

A pancake breakfast will be held at Deer Hill School Sunday, Sept. 18 for the Cohasset school soccer programs.

The proceeds of the breakfast (8 a.m. to 1 p.m.) will be used towards the purchase of sweatsuits for the varsity teams.

Two dollar tickets will be available at the door or can be purchased from the junior high school and high school players.

Welcome Back Luncheon

The First Parish Church (Unitarian) is having its annual Welcome Back Luncheon Sunday, Sept. 11 at the Parish House at 11:30 a.m. following the 10:30 opening service at the Meeting House.

Cold cuts, salads and desserts will be served, and there will be activities for children.

Everyone interested in learning about the church and the church school program for the coming year is welcome and invited to attend.

Fitness for pregnant women

The Cohasset Community Center will be offering a new program for women this fall. Fitness for the Pregnant Woman is an exercise class designed to increase strength, flexibility and endurance.

The exercises will work all the areas of the body with special attention given to the muscles of the abdomen and back.

Instructor Deborah Ketchum has experience teaching exercise to both pregnant and post-partum women in a private health club.

She has attended numerous training seminars on nutrition, health and exercise for the pregnant woman.

Those interested in the course should be no more than three months pregnant, unless they have been involved in a regular exercise program. Anyone interested should consult her doctor prior to enrollment in the course.

All courses offered will begin the week of Sept. 12, at the Cohasset Community Center. For more information, call 383-0088.

Silver-haired Legislature

The state Dept. of Elder Affairs will extend the Aug.19 deadline for acceptance of nomination papers for the Silver-haired Legislature to Wednesday, Sept. 7 at 5 p.m. Papers must be filed at the state Elder Affairs Office, 38 Chauncy St., Boston. While 25 signatures are necessary for a candidate's name to appear on the ballot, write-in votes will also be counted. The election in Cohasset will be at the Town Hall, Sept. 21 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. For more information, call Dorothy Bjorkgren, 383-1848.

Leonard guest speaker

Roger Leonard of Cohasset will be the guest speaker at the Fall meeting of the American-Portuguese Genealogical Society, Inc.

The meeting will be held Sept. 25 in the Starboard Room of The Skipper, Fairhaven, with a social hour at noon and dinner at 1 p.m., followed by Leonard's talk.

His topic will be "Mackereling during the 19th Century." He will cover this early occupation, along with lighthouse and other related activities in the Cohasset area during that time. He will tell of the many early Portuguese who were engaged in the work and heroism of the era of which included his own. Much of his findings are the result of his genealogical research.

A question and answer period will follow.

Guests are invited. Reservations may be made by writing P.O. Box 644, Taunton, or by contacting Mrs. Francis Pimental, 91 Haskins Ave., Tiverton, Rhode Island.

Bloodmobile

The Cohasset chapter of the American Red Cross will conduct a Bloodmobile Monday, Sept. 19 at the Unitarian Parish House on the Common, and the hours will be 2:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Everyone in good health between the ages of 17 and 65 are urged to attend.

Newcomer meeting

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold a membership meeting Sept. 19 at Scituate Library, 9:30 a.m. New residents are welcome.

For more information, call Lynn Leighton, 383-6175, or Bunny Wagner, 545-6422.

Country Crafters

Country Crafters is about to begin its 11th Fall season. The first craft show and sale will be held at the Cohasset High School Sept. 24 and Sept. 25.

The following show will be at the Scituate High School on Oct. 22 and Oct. 23 with the last show being held at the Norwell Junior High School Nov. 19 and Nov. 20.

Crafters from all over the South Shore and beyond are members of this quality oriented organization. They have developed a wide range of crafts with many new and innovative ideas.

The show in Cohasset will be sponsored by the High School Boosters Club with the doors opening at 10 a.m. Doors will remain open until 4 p.m. Saturday and hours will be noon until 4 p.m.

Drama Club tryouts

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, beginning its 63rd year at Cohasset's Town Hall, will hold tryouts for its first 1983-84 production at the Town Hall Sunday, Sept. 18 from 3 to 5 p.m.

The show will be Charles Dickens' classic "A Christmas Carol"in an adaptation for community theater.

Director will be Julia Wood Jordan.

This version of Dickens' 19th century Christmas tale calls for a large cast of various ages, from the very young to the young-at-heart.

All interested in participating in the play are invited to attend the Sept. 18 tryouts.

Play books may be obtained at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset, during September.

Playdates for "A Christmas Carol" will be Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 9 and 10, Friday evening, Dec. 16 and matinee performances on Sunday, Dec. 11 and Saturday, Dec. 17.

Subsequent productions by the Cohasset Dramatic Club this coming season will include Jay Presson Allen's comedy "Forty Carats" and Sidney Kingsley's police drama, "Detective Story." Playdates will be announced later.

Weatherization program

The South Shore Community Action Council is accepting applications for the weatherization program. This program provides materials such as attic insulation, door sweeps, caulking, inside storm windows and burner tune-ups. Individuals must meet the following income guidelines:

Adult health care center proposed for Rte. 3A

By Mike Berger

A Newton nursing home chain is proposing to build a $6.3 million long-term care and adult day health care facility in Cohasset.

The two-story building is proposed by Mediplex of Massachusetts to be built on 20 acres of property near the intersection of Route 3A and King Street.

A company spokesman said the property is zoned for nursing home use. If the facility is approved, 100 full-time and 150 total jobs would be created.

News of the proposal was published last week in a legal newsaper advertisement.

Mediplex intends to file a determination of need application with the state Dept. of Public Health for construction of a 172-bed long term care facility and adult day health care center.

If ten taxpayers file a written request no later than Sept. 21, a public hearing will be held.

The request should be made to the Dept of Public Health, Attention: Determination of Need Program, 80 Boylston St., Room 1230 Boston, Mass. 02116.

The Mediplex application may be inspected there or at the Health Planning Council for Greater Boston, Inc, 294 Washington St., Boston, Mass. 02111.

Mediplex which owns and manages three nursing homes in Massachusetts and four in Connecticut is competing against four other proposals before the state Health Dept.

A state report says there is a need for 300 additional long term health care beds in the South Shore area.

As a result, four firms have applied in the greater Hingham-Norwell area.

They are: Norwell Knoll, Washington Street, Norwell which plans to add 60 additional beds to its current facility. The project is estimated at $2.1 million.

Another is Norwell House, proposed by the firm Scovell, Schlager and Fraser Inc of Boston. The firm has proposed a 142-bed and $5.7 million facility in Queen Anne's Corner (behind Kentucky Fried Chicken).

Near the Queen Anne's location, Richard Starr, owner of the Deering Nursing Home in Hingham is proposing to build a nearby nursing home, Accord

Special Town Meeting will deal with unpaid bills

The primary reason for calling Tuesday night's Special Town Meeting is to pay nearly $55,0000 in unpaid bills.

But voters can also expect some discussion about who should operate the town landfill and an update on the alternative to the construction of the central sewer plant.

It is also expected some discussion will center on unpaid wages to firefighters covering a special detail at the South Shore Music Circus.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School auditorium. Paying the bills will require a nine-tenths majority vote at town meeting.

Included in the unpaid bills are some $29,000 in legal bills and $44 for Casey's Kennel to store a stray dog.

The legal firm of Thaxter, Beckwith and Henderson, represented by Town Counsel Richard Henderson collected $25,988 in legal bills, nearly double what was budgeted for Fiscal Year 1982-83.

Much of the money was used in the litigation with the owners of the Cohasset Heights Landfill and the dispute with the state over whether the town can pursue alternatives to a proposed $13.7 million central sewer system.

In an effort to stem the services of town counsel, selectmen approved a new procedure for access to Henderson and his staff. The policy is: Department heads must receive selectmen's approval before referring a question to town counsel.

Another chunk of unpaid bills are $13,000 for consultants, diesel fuel and landfill material at the dump.

The School Dept. bills are nearly $6,000 for a computer attendance services and for architectural services in preparing a study on asbestos hazards in the town's school buildings.

Fire Dept. overtime

State law requires that wages be paid. The town owes 20 firefighters some $2,810 for a series of details assigned by Fire Chief Martin Dooley at the South Shore Music Circus.

Union firefighters lodged 16 criminal charges against Dooley for refusal to pay them overtime money.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said the amount is an unpaid bill and should be paid for by the Music Circus.

Dooley, on the advice of the state Fire Marshall sent firefighters and equipment to the Music Circus beginning June 18.

After the Fire Dept. tested a sample of the theater rug, Dooley said the flammability test showed "a lighted cigarette would melt the carpet."

Dooley said a verbal agreement was made between Circus Director Ronald Rawson, Building Inspector Robert Dennis, Dooley and Capt. Mark Trask. Until the carpet was certified as safe, the Music Circus

Cox Estate has a special story

(Mariner reporter Pat Walsh was asked to write a special article concerning the Cox estate and the Cox family. Some of her observations were found through interviews of employees and friends of the Cox family and through a tour of the property. Ed. Note)

Few Cohasset residents have entered the Georgian mansion on the estate of Jessie Cox, formerly one of the world's wealthiest women, prior to last week.

But thanks to the Cohasset Historical Society, tourists had an oppurtunity to view the oceanfront house, pool, tennis courts and greenhouses.

The planned League of Women Voters dance for Sept. 17 at "The Oaks," as the estate is named, has been postponed, "because the sale is not completed," said League President Marie Caristi.

Several years ago the Garden Club asked Cox to show the house on tour as a fundraiser, but they were refused. Eventually Cox allowed a tour only of the grounds.

One Summer Street resident recently recalled how during the tour she stepped onto the terrace and had the temerity to wistfully press her face against a window pane to catch a glimpse of the furnishings inside.

Cox, who was a trustee of the South Shore Playhouse Association, occasionally entertained residents involved with that organization. She also opened her house for a party of about 80 area prominent Republicans, at the request of State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Former Gov. Volpe and State Senator Edward Brooke were invited.

The guests were served a glass of champagne and also offered asparagus sandwiches, by the tall waiters from a caterer, well known for debutante affairs.

Cox was visibly disturbed when Volpe failed to show. He stopped at the Fore River Shipyard to discuss contract difficulties, and called to say he was detained,

Minutes recorder needed

The Board of Health and the Sewer Dept. are looking for individuals to record the minutes of their monthly meetings (four per month). If interested, please call the Board of Health at 383-1664 or at the Sewer Dept. at 383-6630.

Disposal Works Permits

The Board of Health will be discussing the extension, renewal and expiration of Disposal Works Construction Permits at a health board meeting Monday, Sept. 19. The topic will be discussed from 8:15 to 9 p.m. at the Board of Health office, 43 Elm St.

A Night for the Nardos

A Night for Vinnie and Eileen Nardo will be held Monday, Sept. 19 from 8 p.m. to midnight at Harrington's Old Stage Coach Way. Tickets are $25 a person.

Tickets can be obtained at the Cohasset Winter Gardens, Sea 'N Cheese, Holistic Health, Reflections, 114 Elm Street and Harrington's. Tickets are available at the door.

Checkers at Town Meeting

Checkers appointed for the special town meeting on Sept. 20 will be Margaret Hernan, Mary Grassie, Mary Brennock and Barbara Williams.

In other special town meeting news, one article was clarified to read closing of Town Way to vehicular traffic. Town Way will still be a pedestrian walkway but closed to vehicles.

Selectmen need members

Selectmen need members for a committee to research the pros and cons of hiring an ambulance service.

Selectman John DeBassio said "We would like to give emphasis to key professional people like some doctors or nurses in town."

Jurors named

Jurors named for a hearing on the first Monday in October will be Jacqueline Noonan, of 26 Ash St. and Jeffrey Waal, of Old Pasture Road.

Jurors for first Monday in December will be Leelan Jenkins, 301 Forest Ave. and Howard Songer.

Free fingerprinting service

A free fingerprinting service will be provided Saturday, Sept. 17 at the Cohasset Community Center. The service is provided by the Cohasset Boy Scouts Troop 28 and will be supervised by Gerald McNabb. The service is designed for 12 year-old children and younger. Everyone is invited to attend, to see how fingerprints are done and to receive a free set of prints.

TOTFINDER decals

Members of the Cohasset Permament Firefighters Association Local 2804 have obtained a quantity of TOTFINDER Fire Rescue window decals. These 6 x 7½ inch highly visible decals are designed for use on the windows of children's sleeping areas. Firefighters responding to an alarm will have an immediate indicator for locating those people who need assistance. Used in conjunction with smoke detectors and a rehearsed home exit drill, the TOTFINDER decals should be a valuable tool in the war against fire.

For more information regarding the decals, please call the Cohasset Fire Dept. at 383-0261 or stop by Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St. The association hopes Cohasset residents will use the decals.

Executive Secretary duties

Selectmen briefly discussed but did not outline the roles, duties and responsibilities of executive secretary Mark Lanza.

The job contract says "The executive secretary shall supervise all personnel and activities under the jurisdiction of the board and the general office staff." Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur said.

"This description was presented to all candidates for this position," she said.

Selectman John DeBassio said, "The problem is that the members of the board have one perception of this role and Mark has another. We have to put into perspective exactly what this job is."

Selectmen agreed that the job description is general and that they would have to specify Lanza's responsibilities.

Selectmen discussed the accountability of the fire and police chiefs to the executive secretary. Selectman Clifford Mitman said he did not think the police and fire chiefs should report to the town hall on a weekly basis.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said "The chiefs have contracts that say they're answerable to the board of selectmen but they don't say how."

DeBassio added, "Mark has the ideal situation to coordinate boards but not to take on the responsibility of making them accountable to him."

Selectman McArthur said, "This issue will be put on a future agenda after Mark Lanza, John DeBassio and Cliff Mitman meet to clarify Mark's duties."

New publication date

Mariner Newspapers is expanding its South Shore coverage to include Pembroke. The Pembroke Mariner will make her maiden voyage Sept. 21 and will be published Wednesday. This necessitates the Cohasset Mariner to change its publication date from Wednesday to Thursday with a press deadline of Wednesday afternoon. This will begin Sept. 21 and also the deadline for community copy will be advanced to Tuesday at 5 p.m. at our local dropspots, Cohasset Colonial Drug and Hennessey's News. This also means Tuesday night committee meetings will also be covered by our reporters. For the average Cohasset reader, your newspaper will arrive in the mail or sold on various newsstands Thursday. The classified ad deadline of Monday at noon remains the same.

LWV panel on low income housing

A panel discussion on Low-Income Housing—What's Right for Cohasset? will be the kick off event for the League of Women Voters' Fall Program.

Panelists will include representatives of the Housing, Planning and selectmen boards. There will also be a reception for prospective members of the League. The event will be held Thursday, Sept. 15 at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 No. Main St. at 7:30 p.m.

Other special programs this fall include the continuation of the League's National Security study Sept. 27 and 29. The focus of the study this year will be arms control initiatives and efforts to reduce the risk of war.

In addition, a United Nations Dinner will be held Oct. 22, with Saul Mendolvitz of the World Peace Institute as its featured speaker.

A fundraising dance at the Cox estate to benefit the work of the league is planned for October.

Additionally, the League this year is undertaking a study of the town meeting form of government with special attention being given to regional solutions to local problem.

A directory of health care services is being developed for the community as an extension of its three year study of issues of quality, costs and delivery of health care services.

Members will be attending an all day conference on Day Care which is being studied across the Commonwealth this year by the State League.

The ongoing Voter Service activities of the League, Candidates Nights, forums on public policy issues, and civic education programs for the schools, will continue. The League's booklet, "Know Your Town" is being revised and udpated this year with a spotlight on the school systems since Prop. 2½.

Membership is open to all citizens in the non-partisan organization. The league does not support candidates. It does support issues after member study and decision making at the grassroot level has taken place.

For more information or to join please contact Membership Chairman, Janine Broadhurst, 231 So. Main St. or send check to Carol Martin, treasurer, in the amount of $25 payable to LWV of Cohasset, 45 No. Main St., Cohasset 02025.

S.S. Elder Services hearings Sept. 20 & 22

South Shore Elder Services, Inc., an elderly planning and social service agency, will hold two public hearings Sept. 20 and Sept. 22 on the agency's plans for the coming three years.

The Sept. 20 hearing will be held at 1:30 p.m. at the Catherine McGowan Senior Center and Nutrition Site, 27 Brook Street in Scituate.

The Sept. 22 hearing is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. at the Hough's Neck Community Center and Nutrition Site, Sea Street in Hough's Neck, Quincy.

Nursing Home, 123 bed, $4.7 million facility.

Probably the best known application under consideration is the proposal by Elder Care Services of Rowley to build a 120 bed facility on the former Maryknoll property on Charles Street. The application for permit with the town is tied up in litigation.

The Mediplex application will make five companies competing for state permission and money.

Steven Garfinkle, vice president of government affairs for Mediplex, said his firm applied for Cohasset because of the Route 3A location and because of the economic attractiveness of the town.

"We selected Cohasset because of the accessibility of Route 3A, the area's elderly population and the town's good economic character," said Garfinkle.

The company plans to build a 74,624 square foot facility with facilities for an outpatient clinic. If the state selects the Cohasset site, the firm will submit a site plan to the Planning Board.

If all the permits are approved, construction is estimated to begin in September of 1984 and be completed in January of 1986.

The company owns three nursing homes in Newton, Beverly and Lexington.

but was sending his wife.

Two days later, Cox's friend Eileen Craven, wife of "Honey" Craven, master of the Cohasset Hunt for many years, visited Cox, who was dining on the leftover asparagus sandwiches. She offered some to Craven, who later said, "Jessie could not understand why they were all left over."

Men do not consider asparagus sandwiches to be an exciting bill of fare. The crustless triangles were not laid flat on the round silver trays, but stood on end in three tiers as a pyramid.

One woman said, "Since the waiters persisted in offering the sandwiches with their fingers spread under the trays from their shoulder height, and they were all over six feet tall, she was afraid that even in her highest heels, she might only reach the bottom row by standing on tiptoe, and cause the whole pyramid to cascade on the floor." She refused the sandwiches as did most other guests.

Only two Democrats were invited to the party—"I guess it is because we had three Harvard degrees and one from Brown between us," one person noted.

One of the Democrats was annoyed to discover after the party that 12 of the "guests" were actually watching the others. "After all, I did not know all of those people and I have to consider my silver trophy room," Cox was reported to have said. The party organizer later reported that Cox was pleased because "she only missed a sterling silver pill box from a bathroom."

The Democrat discovered Cox's widsom later. After the visit of one famous person and entourage, employees reported a collection of bronzes had disappeared from a mantlepiece. "Jessie was concerned not so much bcause they were valuable, but because of their sentimental value since they belonged to her mother," one person said.

Jessie entertained Mrs. Patricia Nixon and David Eisenhower at a Republican Town Committee Fundraiser in 1967. Bob Hope and Liberace also stayed at The Oaks during their performances at the Music Circus.

Cox's grandfather, Clarence Barron, bought a large white house belonging to the famous tragedy actor Lawrence Barret on Margin Street in the late 1800s. It was the former site of one of Cohasset's famous shipyards.

Barron was a financial wizard who purchased the Wall Street Journal in 1902, and founded Barron's, the National Financial Weekly and other financial journals.

He was financial advisor and friend of President Calvin Coolidge and also supplied milk to Coolidge from his "Oaks Farm" on Sohier Street, and Barron also entertained Coolidge for lunch in 1925 in Cohasset.

Reportedly Barron had his large victorian house razed and erected the house as a wedding present for Cox. The architect originally planned a ballroom for the basement, but those plans were later scrapped in the Depression of the '30s.

Cox's trophy room was lined with pane glass cases in which were displayed numerous silver plates, trays, bowls and trophies. She was famous for showing her hackney ponies at the internationally famous Cohasset Horse Show during the 1920's and 1930's. She became an international hackney and harness judge.

Many famous horses formerly occupied the white barn on the estate, which has recently been the subject of a purchase and sales agreement with Yankee Oil and Gas Co. of Boston.

The firm is applying to the appeals board to operate the mansion as corporate headquarters.

Jean Salvador owns a brown picture of Cox's mother, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, which shows her to be a strikingly beautiful woman, even by today's standards. Salvador's grandfather was employed by the Bancrofts.

Cox in middle age was a "very average looking woman—so undistinguished in looks, she would have made a good detective because she could blend so well with a crowd," one resident said. "You'd never now she had a cent when she went down the street," said a neighbor. "The family disliked publicity," said a friend.

On one occasion, however, Cox made television news. She joined resident women and two children in picketing the motel John Carsis built on the harbor beyond her property.

One Cohasset father watched the evening T.V. news and was surprised to see his five year-old son just beneath the swinging arms of Cox and Carsis as they gesticulated and verbally confronted each other "on camera."

CONTRIBUTIONS

The family contributed a lot to Cohasset in a quiet way. Cox's mother donated 51 carrilon bells to St. Stephen's Church; Cox gave money for the pool used by residents on Sohier Street; and the Bancroft Bird Sanctuary off North Main and King Streets is a reminder of Hugh Bancroft.

Barron owned a sizeable portion of Cohasset real estate. Family holdings included part of Millican Field, the Fairoaks area, the Deer Hill School and Music Circus site, etc.

Cox donated funds to the South Shore Art Center, and the establishment of a $50 million dollar fund for use of non-profit agencies.

Advisory Board Chairman sets the fiscal goals

Jim Lagrotteria

By Theresa Sullivan

Advisory Committee Chairman Jim Lagrotteria is not an indecisive person.

He is clear on the purpose of the advisory board.

"The idea is to present a budget that will satisfy the needs of each department and be to the benefit of the town as a whole," he said.

Considering the amount of money the advisory board works with, $6 million, this isn't always possible.

Lagrotteria said he and the board plan to stop departments from over-spending their budgets. The board's primary goal "is to see to it that we don't have unpaid bills.

"If a manager has 'x' number of dollars, he does not have the right to spend beyond the budget. A department manager has no authority to spend funds not previously approved by town meeting," he said.

In most cases overspending the budget is caused by poor budgeting initially and this can be prevented, he said. There are $54,885.70 in unpaid bills for Fiscal Year 1983 which will be voted on in a special Town Meeting, Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Lagrotteria has served on the board for four years.

He said the approval of Proposition 2½ has not made his task much different than before Prop. 2½.

Before Prop. 2½, there was a four percent cap on the budget, and prior to that, "our job was always to try and contain the tax rate," he said.

"I don't really think there was a big difference." Department managers are less likely to ask for items they don't need under Prop. 2½, he said.

Regarding the frequent practice of attributing everything imaginable to Prop. 2½, Lagrotteria said, "They're using that as a crutch.

"In Cohasset, it was voted in two to one. It's the wish of the people that we control expenses. It was not up to the departments; it was up to the townspeople."

However, because the budget is so tight, those items which are not crucial tend to be postponed from year to year. The purchasing of equipment can't be put off much longer, he said.

"It won't last forever. We never established (equipment) as a priority. But it does your plowing in the winter," Lagrotteria said.

However, money has to be put into departments which involve personal safety such as the Fire and Police Depts., he said.

In addition to advising residents at Town Meeting, the advisory board assists the town departments with their budgets, he said. The board goes over every municipal budget, item by item.

The board meets twice a week beginning in October and continues this schedule until Town Meeting in the spring.

Lagrotteria was asked why he would want to serve on such a demanding board. "I was asked to," he said. "I was born and raised in town. I got tired of standing on the side of the road saying, 'Why don't you do it this way?'

"It's a very enjoyable experience." He said if the budget ends up distributed fairly, the experience is "damn satisfying."

Recommendations from the Capital Budget Committee, the town accountant and the executive secretary help the board make well-thought-out decisions, he said.

He cited one of the articles on the Special Town Meeting warrant as an exception to the norm of having at least one month to weigh a decision.

Article 16 pertains to the transfer of land fill from under the jurisdiction of the Board of Health to the jurisdiction and control of selectmen. The article is not recommended by the selectmen.

Lagrotteria said he did not know about the article until he received the warrant in the mail Saturday, Sept. 3. The board will make the best judgment it can, he said, but a month is usually necessary "to investigate and check into it."

Commenting on Article 16, which the board has not yet voted on, he said, "The board of health is saying in a sense, 'Here, you handle it.' "

Lagrotteria said the request itself doesn't bother him, but the way the situation is being handled is not right. "I'm not concerned about it (the change in responsibility of the landfill). They can't handle it anyway," he said.

"They've established a budget; to shift horses midstream is improper and unfair. It's like jumping off a sinking ship."

'The idea is to present a budget that will satisfy the needs of each department and be to the benefit of the town as a whole.'

It makes sense to have the landfill under the jurisdiction of the selectmen, he said. "The Board of Health will always be responsible for the health standards. Right now they're reporting themselves to the state when they find an infraction.

"It would be difficult for any department to work under those conditons," he said.

However, he said the issue should be brought before Town Meeting in the spring when a larger number of people attend than the number at Special Town Meeting.

The advisory board will meet Thursday, Sept. 15 to vote on Articles 13 to 16.

agreed to pay for the Fire Dept. detail, Dooley said.

This, he said, was a verbal agreeement and Rawson was to give him an agreeement in writing. This was never done, Dooley said.

The work the men did ended June 30, the end of the 1982-83 Fiscal Year. There was no more money remaining in the overtime budget. As a result the $2,810 amount in back pay is an unpaid bill.

Landfill article

The Board of Health is sponsoring an article to transfer responsibility for operation and management of the landfill to selectmen. This came as a result of the selectmen's decision to back Joe Laugelle, landfill supervisor, in a grievance filed by the health board.

Advisory recommendations

The Advisory Committee will recommend the town vote in favor of Articles 2, 3, 8, 9, 10 and 12. The committee is expected to recommend Article 11 from the floor.

A full text of all the articles is published in this week's edition.

Special Town Meeting articles

Here is the warrant for the Tuesday, Sept. 20 Special Town Meeting.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 at Cohasset High School.

Selectmen's recommendations are included in the warrant and Advisory Committee recommendations will be made from the floor of Town Meeting.

Article 1. (Inserted by the board of Selectmen, Mary Jane E. McArthur, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate by taxation or transfer from available funds the sum of $54,885.70 for the payment of unpaid bills itemized in Schedule A annexed below and incorporated herein by reference relating to Fiscal Year 1983; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 2. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Mary Jane E. McArthur, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote raise and appropriate by taxation or transfer from available funds the sum of $1,550 to purchase the necessary supplies and materials for making repairs to the stonework, Minots Light template, and the chain link fence at Government Island, and authorize the making of repairs thereto; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 3. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Mary Jane E. McArthur, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate by taxation or transfer from available funds the sum of $800 to repair the flood gates at the intersection of James Brook and Cohasset Harbor; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 4. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Mary Jane E. McArthur, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to discontinue the Town Way running from South Main Street westerly to the municipal parking lot and between land of George K. Roukounakis and Robert H. Fesler northerly and Richard C. and Suzanne S. Straley southerly and as shown on a plan entitled "Plan Town Way from South Main Street to Public Parking Space, Cohasset, Mass., Scale 40' to an inch, Lewis W. Perkins, Civil Engineer," a copy of which plan is on file with the Town Clerk; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 5. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Mary Jane E. McArthur, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate or transfer from available funds a sum of money to purchase supplies and materials to close the Town Way running westerly from South Main Street to the municipal parking lot to passage by motor vehicles; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 6. (Inserted by the School Committee, Diana D. Kornet, Chairwoman and others.)

To see if the Town will appropriate the sum of $10,762.01 representing the excess of the proceeds of a $15,762.01 insurance settlement which has been received, or will be received, by the Town from the Lexington Insurance Company for the repair of all water damage to the Sullivan Gymnasium floor; or act on anything relating thereto.

ARTICLE 7. (Inserted by the School Committee, Diana D. Kornet, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will raise and appropriate or transfer from available funds the sum of $20,000 to employ a mason to repoint and perform other masonry work at the Cohasset High and Osgood Schools and to purchase supplies and staging necessary thereto; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommendation from the floor of the meeting.

ARTICLE 8. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen at the request of the Board of Water Commissioner's, William Montuori, Chairman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to appropriate the sum of $3,700 from Water Surplus and transfer it to the General Expense appropriation for unclassified supplies, maintenance of grounds and buildings; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 9. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen at the request of the Personnel Committee, John H. Mullett, chairman and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to amend Article XI of the General By-Laws, the Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan, Schedule No. 5 as most recently amended by the 1983 Annual Town Meeting (part-time positions) under the caption "Hourly," by striking therefrom.

ARTICLE 11. (Inserted by the Board of Sewer Commissioners, F. Charles DeSantis, Chairman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to transfer from available funds the sum of $10,000 for the purchase of water saving devices for installation in the plumbing fixtures of all private residences which are connected to the Town's municipal sewer system; or act on anything relating thereto.

Not Recommended.

ARTICLE 12. (Inserted by the Board of Sewer Commissioners, F. Charles DeSantis, Chairman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to appropriate the sum of $86,600 for the preparation of alternative and innovative facilities plans for waste water management for the entire town as proposed in the Ward Engineering Associates preliminary waste water management study dated June 6, 1983 and to transfer for this purpose the sum of $86,600 previously raised and appropriated but unexpended under Article 4 "Maturing Debt Principal" (Item No. 49-00) at the Regular Town Meeting of April 2, 1983 under Article 35 at the Adjourned Regular Town Meeting on April 4, 1983; or to act on anything relating thereto.

Recommendation from the floor of the meeting.

ARTICLE 13. (Inserted by School Committee, Diana D. Kornet, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to accept an anonymous gift in the amount of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) for the purpose of establishing a fund to be known as the "William Ripley, Jr., Athletic Fund," the annual net increase of which shall be devoted to the payment of cost and expenses of the athletic programs in the Public Schools of Cohasset, with the spending priority to be given to the Track and Field activities of the schools. The establishment of the spending priorities will be the responsiblity of the Superintendent of Schools with the approval of the School Committee and the annual income may be used to defray such program expenses without further Town appropriation. The Town Treasurer shall be responsible for the investment and administration of the Fund and additional contributions can be made to the Fund by interested persons or organizations.

Each year the School Department shall award a trophy to be known as the "William Ripley, Jr., Track and Field Award" to the outstanding senior boy and girl in the school's Track and Field Program. Selection of the recipients will be made by the High School Principal, the Track Coach and the Director of Athletics based upon the contribution and performance in track and field events of the athletes during their varsity careers. This trophy shall be kept at the High School and appropriately inscribed with the names of the winners. The students receiving this honor will also be presented with a William Ripley, Jr. Revere bowl at the school's annual senior awards assembly; or to take any other action hereto.

Recommendation from the floor of the meeting.

ARTICLE 14. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen at the request of Bernard J. Salvador, President, Firefighter's Benefit Association.)

To raise and appropriate or transfer from available funds the sum of $300 and transfer it to the Fire Department Expense Account for the maintenance of portable radios from the Call Fire Department; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 15. (Inserted by the Board of Selectmen, Mary Janè E. McArthur, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate or transfer from available funds the sum of $2,000 to install a culvert and catch basin on lower Ledgewood Drive, and to raise and appropriate from taxation or otherwise a sum of money to purchase or take by eminent domain or otherwise acquire an easement for the purpose of installing a culvert and catch basin on lower Ledgewood Drive, such easement to comprise the area outlined in red on the copy of a portion of the Assessors map filed with the Town Clerk and identified as "Article 15 - Plan"; or act on anything relating thereto.

Recommended.

ARTICLE 16. (Inserted by the Board of Health, Marilyn Sweeney, Chairwoman, and others.)

To see if the Town will vote to authorize the transfer of the budgetary accounts pertaining to the operation and maintenance of the land fill, under the jurisdiction of the Board of Health and the unexpended balance contained therein from the Board of Health to the jurisdiction and control of the Board of Selectmen, and in connection therewith to the extent necessary, to amend Article XI of the General By-Laws, the Personnel Classification and Compensation Plan to recategorize those employees connected with the operation and maintenance of the land fill as employees of the Board of Selectmen; or act on anything relating thereto.

Greg Derr moves on

The Mariner is losing a fixture this week.

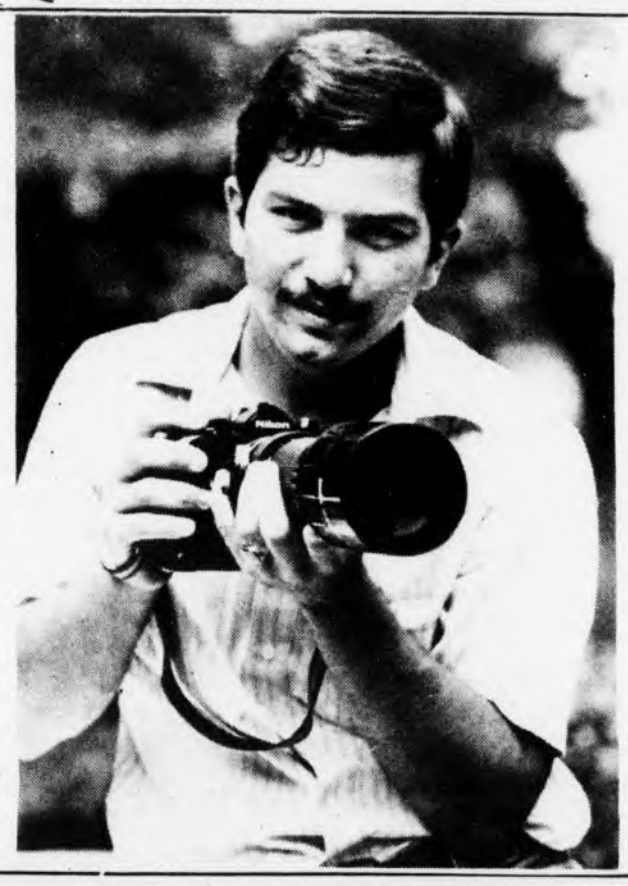
Photographer Greg Derr, who has been a part of the Mariners since the spring of 1978, is leaving this week to join the photography staff of the Boston Globe. He goes with our best wishes.

In his five and a half years with the Mariner Newpspapers, Greg, 22, has distinguished himself as one of the finest news photographers in New England.



Last year he won five awards from the New England Press Association and was named the group's photographer of the year in the weekly division.

A member of the Boston Press Photographer's Press Club since the age of 18, he has freelanced for the Associated Press and has twice had his photographs appear on national television -- on "Real People" and "Saturday Night Live."

Greg is a graduate of Marshfield High School and is the son of Gary and Theresa Derr of Marshfield.

He is succeeded at the Mariner by Rose Cundari.

☐Susan E. Yake of Cohasset is spending the 1983 fall semester in Vienna, Austria, participating in St. Lawrence University's semester abroad program.

The semester in Vienna was established to provide an academic program for interested students without prior knowledge of German. St. Lawrence also sponsors full-year programs in Austria, France and Spain where all classes are taught in the foreign language of the country.

Semester-in-Vienna courses are taught in English by qualified Austrian instructors at the Austro-American Institute of Education. Students live in dormitories located in different areas of the city or in private homes. During weekends and vacations, the students will have opportunities for organized group travel.

Yake, a junior at St. Lawrence, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Yake, 29 Beach St.

☐Three Cohasset residents will enter Bates College as freshmen in September.

Maureen A. Buckley, daughter of Cleida and John Buckley of 26 Old Coach Rd., is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

Robert F. Donahue, son of Barbara and Robert Donahue of 185 Jerusalem Rd., is a graduate of Deerfield Academy, Deerfield, where he was involved in football, wrestling, baseball, drama and was a radio disc jockey and hall proctor.

Tara E. Pompeo, daughter of Arthur and Leah Pompeo of 11 Ripley Rd., was tri-captain of the soccer team, a member of the basketball team, newspaper staff, photography club, prom committee, homecoming committee, and the senior play while at Cohasset High School.

☐It seems that everyone has his own way of ending the summer, but Linda O'Loughlin and her friends really managed to find a unique way! Robin McAllister, Ann Marie Goggin, Julia Setchen and Linda spent the day burying Michelle Stone in the sand. They were hoping that the Mariner photographer would drive by, but, even if he did, how would he spot Michelle? Next time, call first.

☐It was a beautiful sight Saturday to see Susan Quilty and her "brand new" husband in the horse and buggy riding through town. With her bridal veil flying in the wind and that special smile spread across her face, people were stopping everywhere to take a second look.

☐Jeff Walls is a patient at Mass. General at press-time, but here's hoping that as he reads this he is back at home on the road to recovery.

☐Joe Becker is back in the news, once again the football hero! The Boston Globe reported that Joe Becker, freshman, "put the game away with a 13-yard sweep in the third quarter."

☐The "wearing of the pink" is in order for Ronald and Janet Stankewicz of 81 Aaron River Road, since their baby girl was born Aug. 23. Congratulations.

☐For the boys, the news is bike repair and maintenance, something everyone can use. It will be taught by Jeff Mullaley, who works at Cohasset Cycle Sports.

☐The Cohasset Gridiron Club is back in full swing, and is in the midst of planning its annual yearbook. The Gridiron Club has awarded over $20,000 in scholarships over the past 12 years. The "patron-sponsor" section of their yearbook is a major source of revenue to the club and members are looking for either sponsors or patrons for the 1983 season. A donation of $5 for sponsors or $10 for patrons will put your name on the program and help a student with his or her tuition. Make your check out to Cohasset Gridiron Club Scholarship Fund and mail to the Gridiron Club at P.O. Box 23, Cohasset.

☐We almost had another winner in Megabucks last week. Gino DiGirolamo missed by one number too! Although "nears don't count" half as much as winning, $400 is better than nothing.

☐Marion Andresan finally made it out of the house after being confined for over two months with a bad back. So glad to be able to report she is back on her feet. Imagine having to be flat on your back this hot summer!

☐Amanda Sweeney and Holly Pompeo report that they had a grand time at the Music Circus the other night!

☐Stephen O'Connor left a few broken hearts behind when he headed back to school last week.

☐Cohasset resident Martha L. Magnuson was elected Treasurer of the Plymouth County Wildlands Trust at a recent annual meeting. A native of Long Island and a graduate of Wilson College in Pennsylvania, Magnuson has lived in Cohasset for 12 years.

Magnuson is an Administrative Assistant in the Investment Banking Division of Goldman, Sachs & Co. in Boston, and will serve with a group of 17 other volunteers drawn from nine towns in the region.

☐Now that so many of you students are out of town, why not write and fill everyone in with your news. There is nothing like seeing what the other guy is doing, and it is a great way to get your name in print. Give me a call, or, as many have done, drop me a line with your news.

Dance classes

The Cohasset dance classes will be held at St. Stephen's Church Auditorium beginning Oct. 4. Mr. and Mrs. John Cornish Nott will introduce the children in Grades 6 and 7 to ballroom and contemporary dancing. Proper etiquette in social situations will also be taught.

The sixth grade class begins at 5:45 Tuesday evening and the sponsors are Mrs. S. Woodward Chittick for the girls and Mrs. Colin Studds for the boys.

The seventh grade class follows immediately at 6:55 p.m. Tuesday evening. The sponsors are Mrs. David Lord for the girls and Mrs. John Suhrbier for the boys.

Any questions concerning the dance classes should be directed to the sponsors or to the chairman, Mrs. John P. Staunton.

Friday evening, Aug. 26, the Class of 1938 from the old Osgood School in Cohasset held their first time reunion, their 45th, in the functions room at the American Legion Hall.

Of the 34 original graduates, six have passed away. Only seven were unable to attend. The alumni came from California, Georgia, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Connecticut.

Many old acquaintances were renewed and old times rehashed. Many classmates had not met since graduation.

William Ripley, Burdett Collins and Miss Laura Leonard were honored guests.

Mary Walsh received a gift for travelling the farthest—Fresno, Calif. Other awards were presented to Dorris James Crysler, Anna DelGrosso Kelleher and Donald Sladen for the most children and/or grandchildren.

Committee members consisted of: Helen Barrow, Doris Kerr Flint, Bea Neagle Perrry, Edward Maree, Foster Cadose, Arthur Wood, Jr., and Louise Simeone.

The affair was catered by the Strawberry Parfait with the flower arrangements by Miss Maureen Healey.

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home . . . now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Survey sellout

Callers to the Mariner over the last two weeks have repeatedly asked why the newspaper has been sold out over the last two weeks?

"What's so hot," they asked. Some were upset they couldn't buy a newspaper by Thursday.

Before we published the Town Issues Survey, we predicted the survey would be completed by many residents.

We didn't think the survey numbers would go over 200 responses. But it did and it represented the largest response to a survey in a two-week period.

Question 1 concerning the school attendance policy received 238 responses.

Questions 3, 4, 5 and 13 concerning the future of firefighters received 171, 167, 175 and 162 responses respectively.

We predicted firefighters would fill out the survey because the questions focused on their future in the community. We were right.

Before reading the results, a few words of warning.

There is no way this survey could be completed scientifically. For example, a person could have filled out the responses ten times and their handwriting would not have been detected.

We don't know how many firefighters filled out the survey but we know that a fire official was seen dropping off a handfull of responses at the news dropspot.

We published the survey in order to get residents thinking about important issues facing the community.

The real test is what people say and vote at Tuesday's special town meeting. We ask residents to attend and vote because besides paying bills, the future of the landfill operations and the alternatives to the sewer plant will be discussed.

We also predict many firefighters and Chief Martin Dooley will also attend and their comments will be important.

Some say there are things to be gained by reading between the lines. We feel there are also things to be learned by listening to Tuesday's Special Town Meeting.

Here are the results of the survey.

Survey results

1. Do you approve of the new attendance regulations for Cohasset Jr.-Sr. students? 150 yes 51 no 37 no opinion.
2. Should the executive secretary have the authority to supervise town departments such as police and fire? 6 yes 153 no 5 no opinion.
3. Do you approve of the management policies of Fire Chief Martin Dooley? 17 yes 147 no 7 no opinion.
4. Should firefighters be required to monitor an after-midnight watch at the station? 20 yes 140 no 7 no opinion.
5. Should the town renegotiate the "past practices" clause in the firemen's contract? 17 yes 149 no 9 no opinion.
6. Should the Cox estate be turned into corporate offices? 58 yes 53 no 52 no opinion.
7. Should the town buy the Cox estate? 42 yes 87 no 31 no opinion.
8. Should Cohasset encourage low-income housing? 78 yes 52 no 37 no opinion.
9. Should a private company run the ambulance service? 19 yes 169 no 2 no opinion.
10. Should Congressman Gerry Studds run again for re-election? 57 yes 47 no 53 no opinion.
11. Should Cohasset teachers get merit raises? 88 yes 34 no 38 no opinion.
12. Should Hugo's Lighthouse be permitted to use the Govt. Island upper parking lot? 20 yes 61 no 23 no opinion.
13. Should the town establish a Public Safety Commissioner instead of paying a police and fire chief? 16 yes 141 no 5 no opinion.

NEWS ITEM — Cohasset: Town water treatment plant to become a regional testing center for acid rain. 'Acid rain is literally killing off our bodies of water and costing us money,' says commissioner. Water sample from here, Braintree, Weymouth, Quincy to be laboratory tested

"...On the other hand, it could be that acid rain again, Guinevere..."

A clarification on the sewer issue

To the Editor:

Recently, the Board of Sewer Commissioners and other representatives of the town government met with the Department of Water Pollution Control (DWPC) to expedite funding of the Ward Engineering Plan of Study.

Simultaneously, the DWPC requested that the town pay $2,000 per day for failure to move ahead with the former unacceptable plan. The Sewer Commission, Selectmen, and Town Counsel refused to accept this tactic, but rather insisted upon a complete review of our grant amendment request (the Ward Plan of Study.)

The meeting did prove productive in that the DWPC at last indicated their concerns regarding the Ward Preliminary Study. They are: (1) Variances to the State Sanitary Code, Title V, for on-site rehabilitation; (2) Necessity for wetland permits for any expansion of present plant; and (3) Adequacy of the Hull plant to accept Cohasset sewer service. Our consultant, Ward Engineering, and the Hull Town Engineer have prepared responses to these questions and these will be presented early this week.

The Ward study demonstrated that our entire town can be served by on-site rehabilitation. It also showed that with a combination of on-site rehabilitation, rehabilitation and/or expansion of the present facility, or with on-site and interconnection with Hull that the savings are so huge, the areas of service so comprehensive, and the environmental disruption so little, that this Sewer Commission would not only be negligent by not pursuing them, but would be in clear violation of the Federal Clean Waters Act itself.

We are eager to meet our discharge permit. However, we will commit only to a project that the town can afford and wants to build.

Often, by the time a community recognizes a misadventure, it is too late. However, the people of Cohasset at town meeting have not only recognized an unsound course, but have twice directed the Sewer Commission to pursue a legal, affordable and equitable plan. We are cognizant of your trust.

Armed with this resolve, the law, economics, common sense, and the precedent of over 800 communities in the U.S. which have engaged in alternative sewer projects, we are confident that we will soon begin the Ward Plan of Study.

I ask that you all attend Special Town Meeting on September 20 so that the Sewer Commission can bring you further up to date on the developments of this week.

Sincerely
Charles DeSantis, Chairman

Letters

Friends' love was heard

Dear Friends:

Your prayers and love have been our reality these past few weeks. Each card and letter and note was carefully read. The strangers who wrote of their own mournings for their own children were especially important, for we knew those strangers had survived. We read those letters closely and wondered if we would.

The friends who sat with us early into the morning hours, night after night and into day were our salvation when we could not bear to be alone. When we woke up listening . . . where sparrows had been known to sing, we heard your love.

Humanity is no stranger to the men who fought the flames that night and saw our naked grief and stopped to cry with us.

We thank you for yourselves.

It seems just yesterday we had years enough and days enough to spend in simple pleasures. But now we feel the press of time, the urge to move along. The days we thought there were no new windows on the world . . .our friends arrived to open them.

Love,
Eileen and Vincent Nardo

Garden Club Fall Festival ready for Sept. 21

Wednesday, Sept. 21 from 1 to 7 p.m. the members of the Cohasset Garden Club are presenting works of prominent artists on the South Shore in conjunction with a standard flower show, "Fall Festival of Arts and Flowers."

The artistic floral designs division will be entered by a large number of flower arrangers and will be shown at the Unitarian Parish House on the Cohasset Common. The horticultural competition will be held in the second Congregational Church. Tea will be served and the donation is $5 per person. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

The club painter is Mrs. Thomas B. Williams who signs her name as "Claffy." She has presented her work in five one-person shows, the last one at the Art Complex in Duxbury. She has participated in several group shows, most recently at the Clark Gallery in Lincoln. Mrs. Williams belongs to the Boston Painters and Sculptures Group and is a Copley Society Artist. She has received numerous awards in and around Boston and been invited to exhibit in New York and in Dallas, Texas.

Chris Rifkin is an artist working in stained glass. She studied at the Museum of Fine Arts School in Boston and has published articles in "Glass Studio" and in "Stained Glass Quarterly." Chris has exhibited in several juried shows including the South Shore Art Festival, the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, Copley Society and at the Boston City Hall. She participated in a two-woman show at Marblehead Art Association and her works are in many private collections in Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New York.

Mrs. John F. O'Toole known to her friends as "Frannie," has had a lifelong interest in Oriental Art. She lived and studied in Japan for several years and has a vast knowledge of this art.

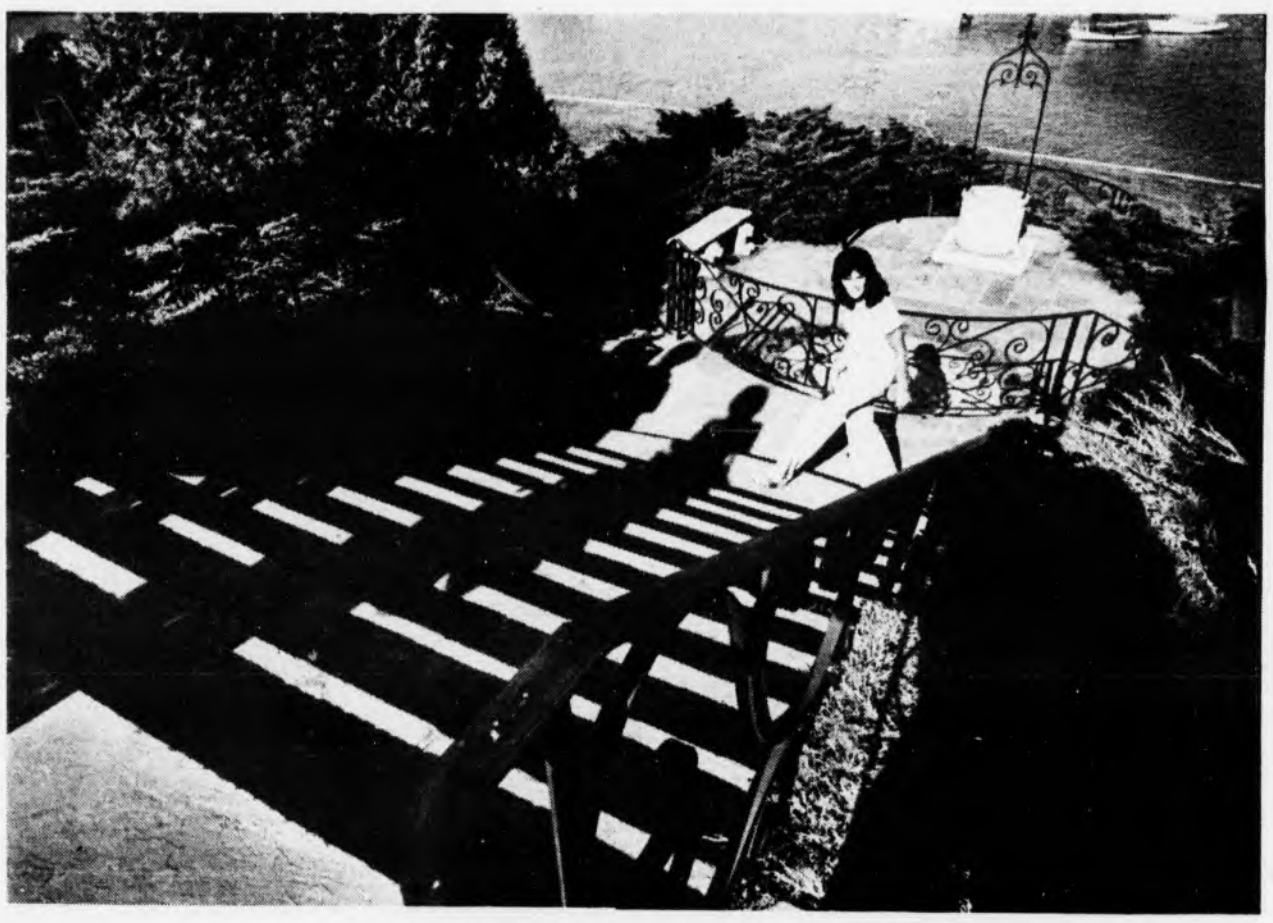
Mary Fleming has generously contributed miniature furniture from her collection and Rebecca Jordan is lending an antique dollhouse.

Dorothy Laney has studied weaving in San Miguel de Allendi, Mexico, where she learned the techniques of Mexican weaving. Her work may be seen at the Folk Arts Gallery in Duxbury where she is a co-owner.

Frederick L. Good, Jr., has been carving decoys and shore birds for many years as a hobby which delights his children and grandchildren.

Richardson White has spent his long career in sculpturing and operating his large Cohasset farm. His bronze animal studies are masterpieces of form, motion and strength. He studied with Boston sculptor, Joseph Colletti and is a member of the National Sculpture Society of New York, the North East Sculpture Society and the Animal Artists Society.

He has had many one-man exhibitions, some of which were at Dartmouth College, Saratoga Race Track, State Street Bank Concourse Gallery, Andover Academy, Groton School and the Doll-Richards Gallery. He is the winner of the prestigious Hexter Award and the National Sculpture Society's bronze medal as well as their Chilmark Award.



Mrs. Walter S. Railsback will direct the tea and the hostess committee is headed by Mrs. Frederick Garrison.

Mrs. Jeffrey R. Power is chairman of design entries and Mrs. John H. Hoopes, Jr., is chairman of the horticulture entries.

Mrs. James B. Grinnell is the general chairman, Mrs. Frederick L. Good, Jr., schedule chairman and Mrs. Robert L. Littlehale, Jr., is chairman of staging.

The Cohasset Garden Club is a member of the Garden Club of America and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

'Stromberg and Cooper'

On the evening of Friday, Sept. 23 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium, the public is invited to a 'mime' expanding experience.

At the hands of "Stromberg and Cooper," two unique and talented artists, the audience will enter the world of mime where they can unleash their imaginations and rekindle the art of pretending.

Presented by the Arts Enrichment Committee of the Cohasset Parent School Organization, this performance by Bob Stromberg and Michael Cooper as an arts fundraiser, brings this well known pair to Cohasset for the first time. Proceeds will support three artist-in-residence projects planned for the schools this year.

Although they present their anecdotes of childhood and life through mime, Stromberg and Cooper speak to explain what they are doing.

Their stories are comic and wholesome and have good, positive self-image value. Some are very dramatic, most are humorous. One is a beautiful story about the value of life, the retelling of how Cooper's father, a veterinarian, helps deliver a calf.

Stromberg tells a tale everyone can relate to, of the desire as a child for a new bike and not getting the one he wanted.

They perform for hundreds of schools, colleges, conferences—anywhere with an audience—each year.

The 90-minute show is appropriate for children as well as adults. Tickets are $3 and may be purchased at the door on the night of the performance, or in advance from PSO board members. Please call 383-0572 for ticket information.

Dramatic Club tryouts

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold tryouts for its first 1983-84 production Sunday, Sept. 18 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium.

The play is Charles Dickens' "The Christmas Carol," a special adaptation by Brian Way. Directing the production will be Julia Wood Jordan.

"The Christmas Carol," first performed in England during 1946, calls for a large cast covering a wide range of ages, from children to adults.

There will be an opportunity for carol singing as well as speaking roles in the club's presentation of Dickens' classic tale. Playbooks are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

All those interested in taking part in the community theater production are invited to participate in Sunday's tryouts.

Country Crafters

Cohasset High School Boosters will be sponsoring the Country Crafters craft show and sale Sept. 24 and 25 in order to raise money for their many projects.

This craft group represents both colonial and modern day crafts and members will be demonstrating and selling their products at the upcoming show at the Cohasset High School off Rte. 3A on Pond Street.

Linda Thomas of Scituate, has developed a technique for painting on hats and sun visors. Her style and workmanship bring something super special to the tee shirts she does. Her painters hats are whimsical with animals and flowers, and all can be personalized.

Christy Bacon of Hingham is known for her stencilling work. She not only does walls and curtains to order, but also sells placemats with matching napkins and stencils for your do-it-yourself projects. Christy teaches clases in the Hingham Evening School.

Richard Silvia of Cohasset is new to the craft field but has an udpated approach to working with slate. He has etched a picture of Minot's Light, or a duck, or clipper ship or other patterns into a piece of slate. The finished piece can be used in a number of ways. He can also take orders for your name or street number.

The group has several openings and is always looking for guest crafters with unique skills.

For those interested, please call 545-1034 or 383-0500 for more informaiton.

The Boosters will be serving coffee and donuts as soon as the doors open on Saturday at 10 a.m. and then later during lunch. The show will be open from 10 to 4 on Saturday and 12 to 4 on Sunday.

Blood pressure clinic

Medi Mart Drug Stores of Cohasset will conduct free blood pressure screening clinics for the public Saturday, Sept. 17 between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The screenings will be conducted by a trained professional and anyone with an elevated reading will be advised to see a physician.

Mormon meeting

South Shore women will be gathering Sept. 24 at 7:45 p.m. at the Mormon chapel on Gardner St. in South Hingham for a women's meeting sponsored by the women's organizations of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Debra Cadogan of 13 Lantern Lane extends an invitation to all Scituate women to attend.

The telecast will be received directly from Salt Lake City via satellite to the Hingham chapel, where one of the 552 satellite receiving dishes for the church is located. The church's satellite network is used to telecast meetings simultaneously across the United States.

"We want to invite all women of the area to attend this meeting," said Mrs. Cadogan, local church women's leader. "It's exciting that we can meet together to attend the women's meeting here in Hingham and we'd like to share that opportunity.

The theme of the meeting is "A Season for Strength." In addition to messages from the women leaders of the church, a specially prepared videotape presentation will deal with women finding and sharing the strength to meet the challenges of today's world.

"We take our commitment as Christian women seriously," added Mrs. Cadogan. "We learn how to better incorporate these principles into our lives through these annual women's meetings for women around the world. The same principles apply, whether a woman lives in Scituate or Mexico City or Australia."

Community Center Fall registration open

Registration is open for the Cohasset Community Center's Fall Program. Call 383-0088 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. to sign up for 12 weeks of recreational, artistic and instructional fun.

Courses begin the week of September 19 and the bowling alleys are also reopened that week. Hours for bowling are 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday; 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday; and 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. Call during those hours to join or form a league. Children (in grades Kindergarten through the third grade) can join a bowling class Thursday afternoons, from 3 to 4 p.m.

Other activities for children include various dancing classes. Margaret Barlow joins the center for a second successful year teaching Creative Movement for three to six year-olds, and Classical Ballet for Grades 1 through 3. Classes will be held Saturday mornings.

Clair Berman is offering her jazz dancing classes Monday afternoons.

A complete gymnastics program is offered by Ruthann and Richele Sargent to children three to 10 years-old. Intermediate and Advanced courses for girls, as well as a gymnastics team, are also available.

Most gymnastics classes are held Saturday; advanced and teams meet Monday or Wednesday evenings. Very small classes ensure individual attention for students of all ages.

Kurate, taught by Bob Blaisdell and staff, returns to a weekly format this year, Wednesday afternoons. Two classes are offered; one for children five to nine years-old, and one for ages 10 through 12 years-old.

Basic horsemanship skills will be taught at Turkey Hill on Wednesday afternoons for children Grades K through 3, and Thursday afternoons for Grades 4 through 7. An adult riding course will be conducted on Thursday mornings.

Other children's classes include Cartooning, with Marsha Serafin, Monday afternoons, for chilren nine to 16 years-old. Dungeons and dragons groups, led by Michael Walsh, meet Friday and Saturday evenings. Older students will be interested in the successful SAT preparation course scheduled for Wednesday (English) and Thursday (Math) evenings.

Successful model Andrea Kaplan will offer several courses, all concentrating on manners, deportment and confidence. Children in Grades K through 3, on Friday afternoons will learn about social graces and proper conduct. Lots of fun accompanies lessons on grooming, speech and poise; all of this a useful foundation for relationships with others.

Children in Grades 4 through 6 and Grades 7 through 9 meet Tuesday afternoons to develop the ability to project their own unique personalities. Public speaking and poise are stressed. Only the class of older students explore make-up and camera techniques.

A special mini-course on "Pinata Making," taught by Marilyn Adams, will be held three Monday afternoons, beginning mid-October. A pizza-making workshop with Carol Walls and Anna Abbruzzese, especially for child-chefs, will be held Monday, November 1.

ADULT COURSES

Three Adult Exercise courses are offered. Joanne Sheppard continues her successful fitness classes daily, from 9 to 10 a.m. An evening exercise program with Judith Boyle is scheduled on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. A new offering this year is special pre-natal fitness classes for Monday and Wednesday mornings at 10:15. These are expecially designed for pregnant women not over three months pregnant, unless already involved in an exercise program.

A variety of other adult courses are offered to help students be creative and artistic in home-decorating and crafts. Interior Design meets Wednesday mornings at the home of teacher Pat Murphy, an accomplished designer who runs her own design service.

Betsy Hoopes shares her knowledge of Landscape Design in a course emphasizing a landscape plan for each student's property.

Classes meet for six weeks on Wednesday mornings. Jane Chatfield teaches a comprehensive Antiques course on Monday mornings. Nancy Clapp instructs on Stencilling for the home and for crafts on Tuesday evenings or Thursday mornings; classes run for four weeks.

Mary Kelly teaches Oriental Rug Making Tuesday mornings or Thursday evenings. Furniture Refinishing, taught by Albert Meallo, meets Wednesday evenings.

Instructional and Skills courses include Beginning Bridge on Tuesday mornings, with Marilyn Alexander. Computer programming, for both beginners and intermediates, will be taught Tuesday or Thursday evenings. Math Department teachers, Charley Davis, Whitey Dunn and Dennis Walsh conduct the program. Typing for teens and adults, will be offered Tuesday evenings.

A new course for older teens and adults, is Bicycle Maintenance, Recreational Riding and Fitness Training. Taught by Jeff Mullaley of Cohasset Cycle Sports, the course encourages children to become a bicycle mechanic.

Many workshops are scheduled throughout the fall. September workshops include CPR, a two-session course taught by Dr. Michael Equi and Linda Farrag, R.N., held Wednesday, Sept. 21 and Thursday, Sept. 22, from 7 to 11 p.m. Laila Roukonakis will teach a six-week Icelandic Sweater Course beginning Sept. 20, Tuesday mornings. Workshops coming Oct. and Nov. include Basketry, Pinata Making, Cooking and more Knitting.

Please call the Center at 383-0088 for more information and to register.

Senior Citizen news

By Katherine McGrath

Senior citizens are urged to vote for Silver Haired Legislators, at Town Hall, Wednesday, Sept. 21, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Voters must be 60 years or older.

There are changes from the last election.

For a one-year term, 25 signatures are required for nomination, and write in votes are allowed.

A Keep Well Clinic will be held Thursday, Sept. 15, by Social Service Nurses, and will be from 11 a.m. to noon at the Unitarian Parish House.

Wednesday, Sept. 28, a Keep Well Clinic will be at Harbor View Hall, 60 Elm St., from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Sixty Plus Club will meet Thursday, Sept. 15, at the Unitarian Parish House. There will be a coffee hour at noon, and a business meeting will follow. Entertainment will be a colored slide show, shown by a club member.

Plans are being made for a Mini Fair, Thursday, Oct. 20, at the Unitarian Parish House.

Luncheon is 99 cents and there will be food and gift tables and hand knitted items. Everyone is invited to attend.

Thursday, Nov. 17, a fashion show, sponsored by Cohasset Consignment Shop, is planned.

Plans will be made for the Christmas Party to be held at Hugo's.

Mrs. Price reads 'We like Kindergarten' to new students at the Osgood School.

Sports roundup

Soccer League—1983

League play for both divisions will begin Saturday, Sept. 24. Team rosters and schedules will be given out that day. However, team coaches will be calling to tell players where and when to meet Sept. 24.

Weather permitting, a five-game schedule and two weeks of playoffs will be planned.

Because of inclement weather, you should call the Recreation office any Saturday morning after 8 a.m., at 383-6791.

If the event is canceled, follow the schedule as indicated for the next week — make-up games will be played at the end of the regular schedule if time permits.

Children in Grades K through Grade 2 will not be a part of the regular league.

Rather they will meet separately for instructional soccer and scrimmages Saturday mornings, beginning Sept. 24.

Kindergarten and first grade players will meet from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Second graders from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. (Osgood School Field).

All players, except Grades K to 2, will be required to purchase a team shirt.

The cost will be $3 payable to "Goodwin Graphics" through the team coaches. Only sneakers or rubber cleats may be worn. Shin guards are advised. Players should dress as weather dictates.

Send your children to the right colleges.

Finding the right college for your son or daughter (and then getting in) is harder today than ever before. Where do you start? Parents say our seminar is the best place.

We'll look at the criteria most important in your college selection. We'll show you financial aid options, and how students can best market themselves. Above all, you'll discover the key to success is learning to think the way teachers and admissions people think.

Seminars are small. They're held at the nicest inns and hotels outside Boston. And they're led by the former admissions counselor at Weston High School and Phillips Academy, Andover: Donald Dunbar. For complete information on seminars or individual counseling services, call 617-262-5380, Donald M. Dunbar, Director, School and College Counseling.

Sullivan Gym repairs

Work was scheduled to resume on the Sullivan Gymnasium repairs Wednesday. An unexpected construction problem was solved by a combination of school and contractor officials. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the unforeseen problem will not cost the town any more money. Work is expected to be completed by mid October.

Better investment sought

The School Committee will ask town counsel if the state will allow the committee to seek a better way of investing a $10,000 William Ripley Jr. Athletic Fund. The fund must emphasize track and field activities and that a high school track and field trophy in Ripley's name be established. Currently the town treasurer is investing the fund at a 10½ percent interest rate. Board member Jack Langmaid feels the committee can find a better return on the investment.
Approval of the fund will be asked at Tuesday's special town meeting.

School opening enrollment

School Supt. Eugene Crowell reported to the School Committee Monday night there are 1,351 students in K-12. , 12 more than projected last year. There are 12 more pupils in Kindergarten this year. Here are the enrollments by Grade: Kindergarten, 82; Grade 1, 67; Grade 2, 80; Grade 3, 83; Grade 4, 76; Grade 5, 77; Grade 6, 89; Grade 7, 124; Grade 8, 136; Grade 9, 131; Grade 10, 128; Grade 11, 123 and Grade 12, 155.

Driver Ed. to continue

The Scituate Auto Driving School will continue to service Cohasset students this year. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said it will cost $95 per student for the program which includes classroom and on the road instruction. Crowell said he did not solicit bids because the school has maintained such an excellent custodial record of the schools. He feared bidding would cost the student price to increase.

School printer approved

The School Committee, by virtue of a 3-2 vote, approved spending as much as $1600 for a new computer printer which should speed attendance and other School Dept. statistics. Committee members Martha Gjesteby and Jack Langmaid opposed the motion. Gjesteby wanted to know where the money would specifically come from to finance the printer. She wanted a specific transfer while other committee members said it was recommended by the town accountant to wait for a transfer amount at the end of the fiscal year. Langmaid said he would rather wait to find out if a less expensive alternative machine could be found. Board member Diana Kornet's suggested there may be another machine which would cost about $700 less than the $1600 printer.

Personnel actions

The School Committee accepted with regret the resignation of Lois Cecsarini, a Spanish teacher and appointed Emile Green as the new Spanish instructor at the high school.

Other appointments were Clare Brady, a J. V. field hockey coach, Roaslie Collins, a Chapter I tutor at the Osgood School and Miriam Aronson, an activity aide at the Osgood School.

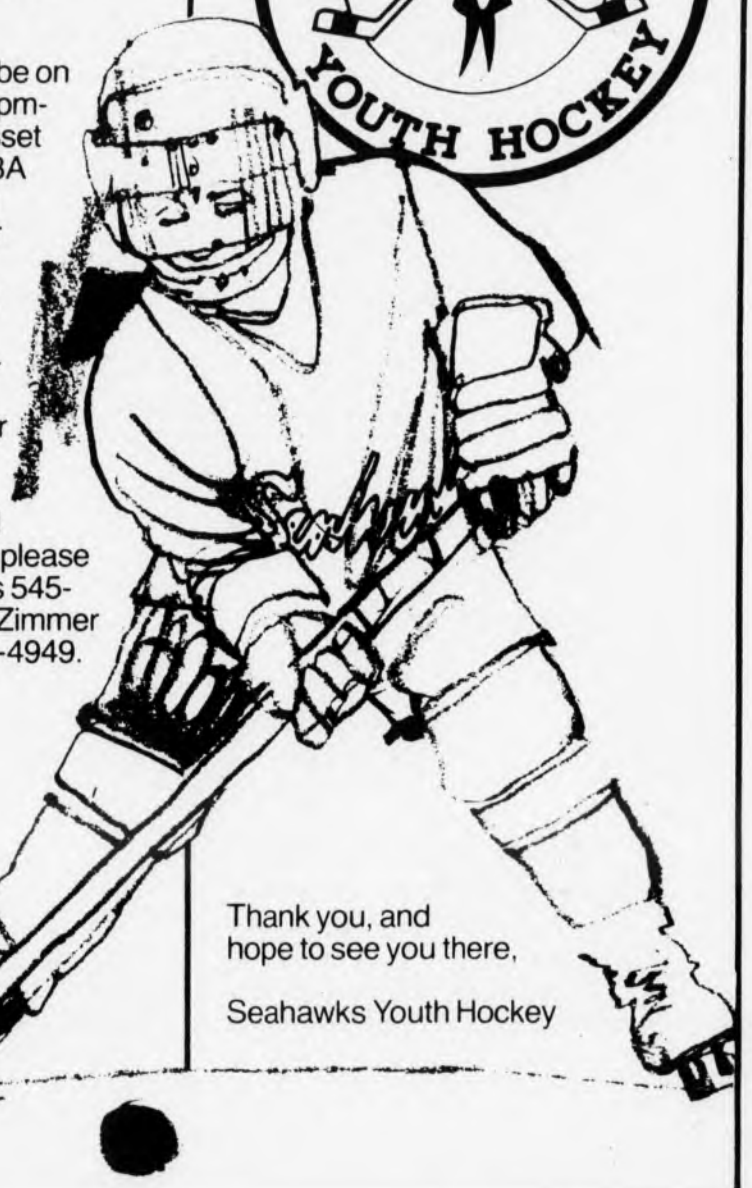
LEARN TO SKATE

SEAHAWKS YOUTH HOCKEY '83
BEGINNER'S INSTRUCTIONAL PROGRAM



NOTICE TO PARENTS:
Seahawks Youth Hockey is holding a September registration for boys and girls ages 5-9 in a new Beginners Instructional Program. Learn to skate while having fun, utilizing games, races, drills, etc, will be the theme while preparing young skaters for next year's mite and squirt hockey teams.

The new "NO CHECKING" rule from the AHA will also make Youth Hockey more fun and appealing for new skaters. There is no registration fee, and the only uniform required is:
1. Proper fitting skates
2. Helmet
3. Gloves

Weekly sessions will be on Saturdays from 5:40 pm-6:40 pm at the Cohasset Winter Gardens, Rt. 3A Cohasset, beginning Saturday, September 17th. The cost is $2.00 per session on a pay as you go basis. You may register any Saturday beginning September 17th.

If you have any questions, or need more information please call Bill Roberts 545-2590, Linda Zimmer 545-4949.

Boys invited to join Scouting program

The Old Mills District of the Boy Scouts of America invites boys, second grade and older, and their parent(s) to discover more about local Boy Scout groups.

Each of the 10 towns in the district will sponsor a "School Night" in a local school where boys and their parent(s) will be provided information, answers to questions and an opportunity to register. Adults interested in working with scouts at any age level are encouraged to attend and meet local and District leaders.

Cohasset's "School Night" will be held Thursday, Sept. 22 at First Parish Meeting House at 7:30 p.m. Tiger Cubs, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts will have representatives available at that time.

Tiger Cubs is a partner adventure in Scouting for second graders (who are at least six years of age) and their father or another adult at least 18 years of age.

Tiger Cubs is a new scouting program in the Old Mills District and has had an enthusiastic response with second graders anxious to search, discover and share with their adult partners.

Cub Scouts are boys in third grade or eight years old. The boys learn the basics of rank advancement. Webelos is the third year of the program and is open to all boys in fifth grade or 10 years old even if they have had no previous Scouting experience. During the Webelos year the Scouts start learning camping skills and usually have several meetings with the older Boy Scouts.

Boy Scouts are 11 through 18 years old. The Scouts advance in rank as they learn scout skills, leadership and perform service projects. Boy Scouts in the Old Mills District will be trained in search and rescue techniques and have been called out several times to assist local police and fire departments in searching for lost persons.

Boys and their parents are encouraged to take advantage of the opportunity afforded them on "School Night" and visit First Parish Meeting House Sept. 22 at 7:30 pm. Anyone interested but unable to attend can obtain more information from Bill Roberts at 828-8360.

Recreation Dept. classes

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes, which will be taught by Ms. Laurie Ann Goodrich.

Beginner training classes will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday evening. The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice, pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered will include proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience class will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dog in obedience.

Wednesday evening, an intermediate class will be held from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. This class is designed for dogs which had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Department's Beginners class.

Thurday evenings, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., there will be an advanced class. For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches.

It is suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes, the fee is $15 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program. All classes will meet on the Town Common across the street from the Town Hall at designated times, unless it is actually raining at the time of the class.

Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age.

To register, please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791.

AEROBIC EXERCISE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations, via phone, for Aerobic Exercise classes to be taught by Mrs. Margaret Watson.

Evening classes will be held Thursdays from 6:45 to 7:45 p.m., in the Town Hall Auditorium, beginning Thursday, Oct. 6.

Morning classes will be held Wednesday mornings from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., Town Hall Auditorium, beginning Wednesday, Oct. 5.

Participants may register for either class for $15 for the eight week session or may register for both classes for $22.50 for the eight week session (i.e. 16 classes).

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Office at 383-6791. Non-residents may register on a space available basis.

Coast Guard report

SUNDAY, SEPT. 11

3:16 p.m., Received call from vessel "Free Spirit" about a 16 ft. runabout out of control doing 360's with nobody on board. Personnel from vessel had already been picked up from the water by a third vessel. CG unit was able to come alongside the runabout and stop it with the assistance of the Cohasset Harbormaster. Incident occurred between Minot Light and Cohasset Harbor.

4:58 p.m., Received call from Mr. Noble calling from Bayside Marine, Duxbury, stating he had been towing a 17 ft. pleasure craft but was unable to continue and dropped tow at High Pines Ledge buoy. CG auxiliary vessel "Helbra" on patrol in the area towed vessel to Humarock Marina.

6:39 p.m., While on patrol, CG auxiliary vessel "Helbra" was flagged down by a 23 ft. pleasure craft "Scudding Cloud" which was disabled near Green Harbor.

Obituaries

Kathryn Grant

Kathryn (Rollins) Grant, 82, a resident of Cohasset for eight years, died recently after a long illness in a Cohasset rest home.

Born in Iowa, she attended school in Des Moines and attended Drake University in Des Moines.

She leaves a daughter, Patricia G. Facey of Cohasset; a son, Douglas E. Grant of Gaulala, Calif., and a grandson, Mark Facey of Cohaset.

Memorial services will be conducted at a later date. Donations may be made to the Cerebral Palsy Fund, 105 Adams St., Quincy 02169.

Stella Goldsmith

Stella M. Goldsmith of Cohasset died Sept. 8. She was the wife of the late Chester Goldsmith.

She was the mother of Theresa Oddi of Cohasset, Kenneth Goldsmith of Dorchester and Madeline Blair of Mesa, Arizona.

She leaves a sister, Ethel Richardson of Rochester, N.H., nine grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandson.

Funeral services were held in the L.J. Keaney Funeral Home, Dorchester, Monday. Burial was private in Ossipee, N.H..

Dorothy C. Morse

Dorothy Catherine (Cooper) Morse, 85, of Cohasset, a retired head dietician at Deerfield School, died Friday at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Born in Milford, she had lived in Cohasset for 58 years.

Following her retirement from Deerfield School in 1979, she was a volunteer worker at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home until recently.

She was a past president of the Sixty Plus Club, former editor of the Vista bulletin and past secretary of the senior citizens.

Wife of the late Herbert E. Morse, she leaves a son, Herbert E. Morse, Jr. of Keller, Texas; two daughters, Helen M. Shyne of Scituate and Barbara Jean Jones of Cohasset; a sister, Helen Cronin of Arlington; a cousin, Mae Merrill with whom she lived; 15 grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the Sixty Plus Club or St. Anthony's Church.

Margaret Mieluch

Margaret (Van Nostrand) Mieluch, 86, of Scituate, formerly of Cohasset, died Saturday in the Scituate Ocean Manor Nursing Home after a long illness. She was the retired president of the L.M. Trade Composition Co. of Boston, which was owned by her late husband, Joseph Everett Mieluch.

Born in Chicago, she attended schools in Brookline, N.Y., and graduated from Sea Pines School in East Brewster in 1914. She lived in Cohasset 22 years ago and with her daughter in Scituate five years before going to the nursing home 2½ years ago.

She was granddaughter of the late William T. Van Nostrand, a state senator of Brookline.

Wife of the late Joseph Everett Mieluch, she leaves a daughter, Ruth C. Pulver of Scituate; and a sister, Blanche Grace of Snohomish, Washington.

A memorial service will be held Thursday in the First Trinitarian Church in Scituate Center. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers donations may be made to charity. Arrangements were made by the Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Sparrell Funeral Homes sold to the McNamara's

The Sparrell Funeral Homes, on Central Street and in Cohasset, were recently sold to the McNamara Funeral service of Brighton.

John McNamara said papers passed on July 29. The price listed in Banker and Tradesman was $175,000.

The purchase, according to John, consisted of the operation and properties of the funeral homes, including the Central Street residence of Loring "Spike" Wadsworth. For legal and financial reasons, the transfer of ownership is being handled in stages.

John added that Wadsworth, whose family has operated the Sparrell Funeral Home since 1906, would continue to be actively involved in the Sparrell and McNamara operations. Personnel, he said, had been moving back between Norwell, Cohasset and Brighton since July 29.

The Sparrell name wil be kept, McNamara said, because the funeral service has been in operation and known since 1820. He said his name and the name of his brother, Robert, would be advertised in conjunction with Wadsworth's in ads for Sparrell Funeral Homes.

The McNamara service is a family funeral service that was started by John and Robert's father, Bernard S. McNamara, in 1934 at 460 Washington St., Brighton. Spike's father, Joseph Lyman Wadsworth, ran the Sparrell operation for 60 years until his death in 1966 Spike took over after his father died.

Sex-less advertising is serious business

By Lois Martin

It is very seldom that I am blamed for federal or state laws. But given human nature one ought not be surprised that a hometown newspaper and its employes should be held accountable for mandates that seem unreasonable.

To be succinct but oblique, a man was ticked about the Mariner's implementation of Mass. General Laws Chapter 272, Section 92A. That law, for those who have misplaced the Commonwealth's law library, says there shall be no discrimination in hiring because of one's sex or one's age.

PATCHES

Newspapers are mindful of the rule in classified advertising, specifically in the help wanted ads. Used to be 10 to 20 years ago that papers had categories of "Men Wanted," or "Women Wanted."

No more. Jobs advertised must not be restricted to one's sex.

For at least one reader that's not the American way.

He says it's his right to advertise for whatever he wants in an employe, without threat of a lawsuit.

"If I want to hire a man to shovel snow," he said (the word 'snow' is used here because discretion compells translation. Ed.) "I have a right to get a man to do it...Why are you advertising for personoids?"

His contention was that this country is capitalistic in its foundation rather than socialistic. And that the privilege of choice in seeking and hiring, if denied, is contrary to his constitutional right.

In that argument he's at odds with lofty U.S. courts who said that any job should be open to any person and must be advertised as such. Maybe he's been out of town frequently and missed the major minority movement that unlocked doors for some people who couldn't compete for jobs before.

Since that time there have been equally awesome legal encounters harboring claims of reverse discrimination et al. Some say requirements for competency have been replaced by advancement of minorities. But the laws have thus far held. And the Mariner would not like to inspire the wrath of the Commonwealth.

There have been times when we have run ads that said, "Mature woman wanted to take care of pre-school children." Apparently that was not proper. For my part it wasn't the 'woman' portion that amazed me. It was the 'mature' part. I always wondered if someone believed they'd end up with an immature woman if they didn't stipulate maturity.

But the reader wanted chapter and verse and he didn't mean a Shakespearian sonnet.

The Globe gets out a lot. So I called the chief of that classified advertising department to verify the posture of the law and its particular placement in the fat legal book.

She gave me the information, according to the mighty Globe, and the phone number for the state's Sex & Age Division Against Discrimination Commission.

I wasn't foolin' around.

The person with whom I spoke gave me further information. Neither she nor the woman at the Globe wanted me to use their names as spokes...people for the law or the daily newspaper. They were wise. They must have sensed anonymity protected them from the pontification of the man who believes he has a right to advertise for a male shoveler of...snow.

Laws ought not in fact nor by intent preempt our use of common sense. Sometimes they seem to do just that. But let's go at it this way. Should we spot a classified calling for "a mature babysitter," "an oil burner repair person," "a mother's helper," "experienced hairdresser," or "responsible, loving person," we must employ our own horse sense.

By law those jobs are open to our application. Conversely though, there's no law that says window washers are obligated to wash the windows of both men and women regardless of age, sex or national origin. Someone will probably come up with that ordinance sometime.

It's true that if we feel we didn't get a mother's helper job because of sex discrimination, we can hie ourselves to the court for a hearing.

Meanwhile the Mariner and other newspapers advertise for what this reader calls 'a personoid' instead of a man or woman.

I've got further foul omens for that man who decries this type of law. This morning I heard President Reagan is considering "minor changes" for about 112 sex discrimination laws.

Let us hope democracy, capitalism, shall survive all our efforts, thereby putting this man's mind to rest and allowing me to get some of the same.

He reinforced his argument in closing by saying, "If I want a 200 pound male gorilla to shovel coal (this guy's big on shoveling), that's what I'm going to hire."

So we need care in our classified choices. Should we read one..."Portly masculine-appearing animal type wanted to shovel..." anything, with a 907 area code for response, I for one will pass it up.

and better

a new approach to single family living

We've had a great many visitors at The Meadows in Hingham since our opening, and we're pleased at their reactions to the spaciousness and detailing of the homes ...and to the very private feeling that has been achieved.

Over and over we hear... "this is just like a single family home...only better!" "The floor plans are great—so functional—and there's no wasted space"... "Your two bedroom home is larger than the three bedroom house I have now!"..."and everything is new: kitchens are fantastic"... "The cathedral ceilings make the rooms seem twice as big"... Everyone is pleased by the unusually shaped swimming pool ... the whirlpool ... the clubhouse and tennis courts. There's no way you can have all of that in the typical one-family home.

"There are people to care for the lawns ... the snow shoveling"... "I like the private courtyards—just big enough to do some creative gardening—but not so large as to be a chore"... "There's much better security here than I've been used to"..."and we still have full basements ... and a two-car garage." "Ownership is just like my old home ... you can mortgage your property, sell it when you want...get the same tax advantages."

The Meadows in Hingham is a wonderful place to live... the country-styled two and three bedroom attached single family homes are located on rolling meadowland covered with wild flowers. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 7 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500

Those of us who have lived in the South know they march to a different drummer, their life-style scaled down in response to the oppressive heat. It's been a long, hot summer for us "Yankees" and some of us need the jolt that causes cooler fall days to quicken our tempo and stir our creative juices. Now, with one of the busiest seasons of the year just ahead and lazy summer days a thing of the past, new ideas are needed, for we get bored with the same food day after day and salads and grilled hamburgers lose their charm. It's time for new ideas which you can find by studying the menus when you eat out, swapping recipes with friends, looking through cookbooks and best of all, joining in the fun of sharing family favorites through this column. Here's a dish featuring kale and brown rice, rich in vitamins and protein. Kale continues to grow until the first frost in local gardens such as Milly Fremont has and is a vegetable that is growing in popularity around here.

KALE AND BROWN RICE CASSEROLE

2 c. cooked brown rice
1 c. grated cheddar cheese
4 eggs beaten
2 T chopped parsley
1/2 tsp. salt, 1/8 tsp. pepper
1 pound kale
1 tsp. oil
2 tsp. wheat germ
2 T soft whole grain bread crumbs

1. Combine rice and cheese. Add parsley, salt and pepper.
2. Wash kale, strip off leaves and steam until almost tender.
3. In an oiled casserole, alternate layers of rice and kale, ending with rice.
4. Combine oil, wheat germ and crumbs and top casserole with mixture. Bake at 350 for 30 min. Serves six.

It took 40 pages for a federal judge to explain why the Toll House in nearby Whitman can still sell its chocolate chip cookies under the name it's had for fifty years. That was when Ruth Wakefield, the original owner of the restaurant, invented the cookie we all know and love called the Toll House Cookie. The judge decreed that the name is merely a descriptive term for a type of cookie and Nestle's doesn't have the exclusive right to the name. Now we can sleep again nights, knowing that the chocolate morsels Nestles sells are but an ingredient we need to make homemade Toll House cookies. Marian Burros offers this recipe for a mix which can be stored in a cool, dry place for six months and even longer in a refrigerator or freezer. We can make our own and have them fresh for a bed-time snack with little last-minute work.

CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIE MIX

9 c. unbleached flour
4 tsp. baking soda
2 tsp. salt
3 c. firmly packed dark brown sugar
3 c. granulated sugar
4 c. vegetable shortening (see note)
4 c. chopped pecans or walnuts
4 12-oz. pkg. semisweet chocolate chips

1. Combine dry ingredients in large bowl. Mix in shortening, using fingers. Stir in nuts and chocolate chips.
2. Store in airtight container in cool, dry place. Yield: 28 c. of mix.

To make the cookies:

1. Combine 7 c. mix with 1 tsp. vanilla that has been mixed with 2 eggs, slightly beaten. This batter is heavy.
2. For larger cookies, drop batter by heaping tablespoonsful on greased baking sheets. For smaller cookies, drop by heaping teaspoonsful.
3. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 to 12 min. for large cookies, 8 to 10 min. for smaller size.
4. For flatter cookies, pat down with back of spoon. Cool slightly on baking sheets, then remove.

Yield: 30 to 40 large cookies.

NOTE: Butter may be used in place of shortening, but mix must then be kept in fridge or freezer.

Saving money on the weekly food bill can become a challenge, as all coupon-clippers know and seeking out generic items is all part of the game. In New York, a survey showed a savings of 40 percent. The cost of 34 national items was compared with 34 house-brand and generic items. The market basket of national brands cost $73.09, while the store brands cost $44.14. Worth thinking about if you haven't already done so!

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
SUPERIOUR COURT
NORFOLK, ss.
No. 140705

TO MARY E. FAIRMAN and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended. Greeting: John W. Shyne and Bernadette C. Shyne claiming to be the holder of a mortage covering real property situated in Norfolk County given by Mary E. Fairman to John W. and Bernadette C. Shyne, dated September 28, 1979 and on file with the Registry Dist. of Norfolk County as document no. 396145, on cert. of title no. 109801 has filed with said court a complaint for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before October 14, 1983 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

For those travelers who wish the choice of doing more than swimming and sunning, St. Thomas, in the U.S. Virgin Islands, is just the place. Of course, the object of a Caribbean vacation is white sand and blue water which St. Thomas has in abundance. However, there are also many fine restaurants and lots of duty-free shopping to be found. The harbor of Charlotte Amalie is the heart of the island. It has restaurants, dance clubs, glass-bottom boats, fishing, glitter and flash. The mountains sweep up from the shoreline to a height of 1,500 feet. Nestled in these high elevations are some exquisite retreats. There are a multitude of resorts that offer all sorts of sporting pleasure.

There are many vacation spots around the world that will offer you the excitement and variety of more well known places and at far greater savings. At COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER, we are your travel experts. Our job is to know what's happening in this world and to keep you informed of this. You will find us conveniently located at 3 Brook St., Scituate. We look forward to being of service to you soon. We are open 9-5 Mon. to Fri.; 10-4 Sat. and by appointment. Tel. 545-4500 and 383-1717.

Travel Tip:
St. Thomas is a mixture of carnival and seclusion. Plan now for an early winter season escape vacation.

State - Cohasset to settle sewer issue in court

By Mike Berger

The negotiations with the state concerning alternatives to build a large central sewer plant are about over.

The issue will be settled in court.

This is apparent after Monday night's Special Town Meeting which produced another strong backing for Sewer Commission Charles DeSantis.

The town will spend $86,000 from unexpended funds from a previous town meeting to finance an indepth investigation of alternative and townwide sewer systems.

Besides a vocal and convincing town meeting vote, DeSantis has the backing of selectmen and the advisory board.

The Sewer Commission met with selectmen and the advisory board in an emergency meeting outside Cohasset High School when DeSantis received what he called "another state delivered bombshell."

After state officials met with DeSantis Monday afternoon, the state director of Water Pollution Control wrote to town officials Tuesday and essentially said Cohasset's alternative plans will not meet state approval.

In addition, this division will back the state Attorney General's decision to fine Cohasset $2,000 daily until the town follows the state approved Metcalf and Eddy plan.

In a three-page letter, Thomas McMahon, director, wrote his observations and concerns about the commission's ideas for an on-site rehabilitation system, the existing treatment plant expansion and the Hull connection.

A full copy of the letter will be published in next week's Mariner.

McMahon said the alternatives proposed in the preliminary engineering report are not "approvable."

"The Division will not fund any further studies and the town must proceed with the recommended plan as contained in the approved Metcalf and Eddy facilities plan. If the town does not immediately begin to implement the approved plan but instead chooses to conduct further studies and thereby continue with its NPDES Permit violations, the town's action will be considered as further grounds for contempt by the Attorney General's office."

Charles Dauchy of Ward Engineering, the commis-

The action was tense Tuesday night as the state letter was the hot topic for discussion outside CHS. Listening were (L-R) Charles DeSantis, Richard Henderson, John Slater and Rocco Laugelle.

'Stigma' attached to low-income housing

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Housing Authority Chairman Lloyd Prescott said there may be a "stigma" if families with as much as a $12,000 income are housed in a $250,000 two-family home on Atlantic Avenue.

The League of Women Voters held a forum on low housing last week. Prescott was one of several officials to sign a low income housing requirement with the state.

Unless the town agreed to the pact, state water and sewer grants would be witheld to Cohasset.

Panel members at the forum included Prescott, Planning Board Chairman John O'Toole, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza and John O'Donnell of Old Pasture Road and one of four partners in State Street Development Company.

O'Donnell is also a director of the National Home Builders Association.

One audience member questioned whether the agreement would mean changes on Atlantic Avenue or would the agreement apply to the rest of the town?

Prescott replied, "There is only one two family house for sale now in Cohasset and that is for $250,000 on Atlantic Avenue."

He objected to purchasing a $250,000 home for the purpose of housing two low income families. But he acknowledged, "I have four married daughters and not one of them can afford to buy a home in Cohasset."

Prescott also said the 64 units of elderly housing should satisfy the state.

He was supported by Selectman Rocco Laugelle. Laugelle said voters at town meeting were told several years ago those units should satisfy any state requirements for low-income housing.

Prescott said the town already established four subsidized low rental units scattered throughout the town and added the town might be willing to vote the Housing Authority jurisdiction over the two unit house on Government Island.

However Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said the state Economic Office of Community Development does not agree the 64 elderly housing units meet state requirements.

They meet only a portion of the need, he said.

Lanza said there are also single heads of households, unemployed people and young people who can't afford current housing costs. The state, he said, wants to relocate people in need who may live in Boston or Brockton.

Under the state agreement signed by authority, selectmen and the Planning Board, the town has agreed in principal to accept a state option providing for scattered housing.

This option includes purchasing properties for low income or subsidized tenants as well as condominium conversions.

The agreement between the town and the state is still not signed and delivered to Boston.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the agre-

Chamber of Commerce concept revived

Several Cohasset merchants and business owners have met to discuss the re-establishment of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

A meeting was held Wednesday night at Hugo's Restaurant to discuss objectives and plans.

Currently, Cohasset merchants may be members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Recently, Cohasset Village merchants had banded together and during the past few years had some business promotions.

But several merchants feel there is an urgent need for all Cohasset businessmen to meet and promote Cohasset. This would include village merchants as well as owners from the Rte. 3A Cushing Plaza.

Other civic groups and town officials would also be invited to join.

Here is a copy of a letter sent to all Cohasset businessmen from a chamber Steering Committee.

"Do you know that there are 208 businesses within the boundaries of this peacefull New England Village? Cohasset has opened its wings to many new and diversified businesses over the years in the hopes of working together.

"We all as business people, have many ideas on how we would like our businesses to support and benefit this historical town. We are anxious to discuss these ideas as well as hear your ideas on these and other subjects."

Those business firms who have already shown an interest are Cohasset By the Sea, Petersen Realty and Insurance, The Bread Shop, Carousel Antiques, Cards and Shards, Green Gage Plum, Sea 'N Cheese, Hugo's Lighthouse, Sestito's Flower Shop, Cohasset Hardware, Noble Camera Shops, Flemings, South Shore Music Circus and Medi-Mart Inc.

For more information, call Frank Smith at Flemings Hardware at 383-0684.

Beware of Cohasset clam flats

Cohasset clam flats are not officially closed but selectmen advised that people do not eat the clams until further Department of Environmental Quality Engineering testing.

Two weeks ago the town health department brought clam flat samples to the Briggs Engineering Company. Briggs said that the clams contained a high count of fecal bacteria.

The state shellfish division of DEQE also took one sample and found a fecal bacteria count that is too high.

Shellfish constable Jim Curly has posted warning signs about the clam flats.

Closing clam flats depends on further DEQE testing.

Cohasset's week . . .

One-day liquor license

Any applicants seeking a one-day liquor license must have the application filed in the Selectmen's office two weeks before the meeting at which the applicants liquor license application will be heard by selectmen. The applicant must state on the application when the liquor for the event will arrive on the premises and when it will be removed from the premises after the event.

The applicant must be present in person or by representative at the hearing before selectmen (the licensing board).

Selectmen approve application

Selectmen approved a Boston Gas Co. application to supply gas to 43 Tower Lane by opening the street. Selectmen also approved a request for patchwork surface repair for 107, 109, and 111 Atlantic Ave.

Hull request for storage

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said the Hull Fire Dept. has asked to use the North Cohasset Fire Department building for storage space. Lanza added, "they have not specified what they want to store.The room is 24 feet by 18 feet."

Highway department suprervisor Harold Litchfield uses some storage space but he said that they could use the 24 by 18 foot area.

Selectmen agreed Peter, Laugelle, head of the Tree and Park Dept. will be in charge of the building and its contents.

Committee members needed

Selectmen are looking for applicants to serve on an Ambulance Service Delivery Study Committee. The committee will research various methods of Ambulance Service Delivery both private and public to achieve effectiveness and efficiency from both a cost and a public safety standpoint. Persons with backgrounds in medicine, emergency medical services and related fields are encouraged to apply.

Cable update

Steven Farquhar, American Cablesystems regional manager has given a progress report to selectmen. Since the signing of the provisional license June 22, the design of the Cohasset cable plant has been completed.

Farquhar said the company is close to signing a lease for an office studio in Cohasset Village. The site is adjacent to Harrington's Restaurant and was formerly occupied by a travel agency.

A video equipment package has been ordered for the high school and the equipment is scheduled to arrive during September.

The pole attachment agreement between Eastern Edison, New England Telephone and American has been executed. This licenses American to attach to any utility polie on a public right-of-way.

Tri-Town Comm. meetings

Last week's meeting of the Tri-Town Commission never became a meeting because only three members of the six-member board attended.

Hull Selectmen Chairman Nancy Burns, Selectman Ed Lewieki of Hingham, and Selectman John DeBassio of Cohasset came to Hull Town Hall to discuss the three town's mutual concerns about transportation and sewerage.

Ginny Capo came as a representative of the Hull Finance Committee.

Charlie Brennan was at the meeting as State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's liaison.

This is the second "non-meeting" the commission has had, according to Burns. Part of the reason for the attendance is caused by uncertainty about where and when the meetings are, she said. The commission has actually met once.

Burns suggested notifying each member in writing of an upcoming meeting one week in advance.

Leweiki had arranged to have speakers on transportation and sewerage at the meeting.

There were four Cohasset residents at the meeting.

New publication date

Mariner Newspapers is expanding its South Shore coverage to include Pembroke. The Pembroke Mariner will make her maiden voyage Sept. 21 and will be published Wednesday. This necessitates the Cohasset Mariner to change its publication date from Wednesday to Thursday with a press deadline of Wednesday afternoon. This will begin Sept. 21 and also the deadline for community copy will be advanced to Tuesday at 5 p.m. at our local dropspots, Cohasset Colonial Drug and Hennessey's News. This also means Tuesday night committee meetings will also be covered by our reporters. For the average Cohasset reader, your newspaper will arrive in the mail or sold on various newsstands Thursday. The classified ad deadline of Monday at noon remains the same.

The Jessie Cox Charitable Trust has awarded Cambridge College $50,000 to develop a multi-year action plan to institutionalize adult higher education opportunities for women and minorities. The plan will include strategies for outreach as well as needs assessments and program administration.

Power Outage

Power near the Jerusalem Road area was out for several hours early Saturday morning because of an automobile accident. Police cited Richard N. Rodriques,26 of Marshfield with operating to endanger, leaving the scene after property damage and failure to keep right. Cohasset police were alerted to the accident at 1:22 a.m. Saturday. Rodriques had been involved with a Hull police chase. Sgt. Robert Jackson reported the Eastern Edison pole and live wires were down at the accident scene but no vehicle operator was there. Police later found Rodriques and cited him. Damaged from the accident was a town stone wall and a fire hydrant. The investigating officer was Ptlm. Richard Yocum.

Firefighter grievances

The firefighters union recently filed three grievances for arbitration with the American Arbitration Association and sent another one to the state labor board for a hearing on an unfair labor charge.

Sent to the AAA were grievances for the purchase of bell caps and night drilling. Another grievance concerned the failure to pay a master mechanic for several months.

Regarding night drilling, the union said Fire Chief Martin Dooley unfairly scheduled training drills during nighttime hours.

Firefighters said training had been scheduled during the day and added day and evening drills reduced the number of call firefighters from five to one. Selectmen said training and scheduling should be up to the chief.

Regarding bell caps, selectmen said the chief was within his rights to order ceremonial wear for the men even if there was a more pressing need to buy protective equipment.

Another grievance sent to the AAA said the town failed to pay firefighter Bill Protulis master mechanics wages between July 1, 1982 and February of 1983. Dooley said Protulis was appointed to the position in February of 1983.

Sent to the state labor board was an unfair labor practice charge regarding Dooley's failure to negotiate with the union the position and duties of the fire prevention officer. Dooley said the position was already created by Acting Fire Chief and Capt. Roger Lincoln.

TOTFINDER decals

Members of the Cohasset Permament Firefighters Association Local 2804 have obtained a quantity of TOTFINDER Fire Rescue window decals. These 6 x 7½ inch highly visible decals are designed for use on the windows of children's sleeping areas. Firefighters responding to an alarm will have an immediate indicator for locating those people who need assistance. Used in conjunction with smoke detectors and a rehearsed home exit drill, the TOTFINDER decals should be a valuable tool in the war against fire.

For more information regarding the decals, please call the Cohasset Fire Dept. at 383-0261 or stop by Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St. The association hopes Cohasset residents will use the decals.

Selectmen approve Voke request

Richard Silvia, representative to South Shore Voke Regional school received the first approval from Cohasset to fund back $988 of $66,000 returned to individual towns instead of the school.

Executive secretary Mark Lanza told selectmen that their vote will have no effect "without the concurrence of five other towns boards."

So far Scituate and Rockland have voted against funding. Abington and Hanson will vote this week.

Silvia said, "A majority of equipment in the school is worn out, for example: the framework systems, the automatic analyzers and the electronic equipment in the body shop.

If Voke is forced to cut programs they will disorient many sophomores, juniors and seniors who are well into their trades.

'Stigma' attached to low income housing . . .

ement is still in his office because he asked for a definition of "scattered site housing and what the state perceives that would mean in Cohasset" from Carol Ford of the state Economic Office of Community Development.

The answer, said Henderson, should be explained to selectmen soon, possibly at a Wednesday night meeting.

Essentially Henderson said her answer is scattered housing means whatever is defined by state law.

O'Toole said under some state programs, incomes as high as $28,000 can qualify as low income families. This, he said, might mean some firefighters and teachers.

O'Toole is opposed to grouping a large number of low income families into situations like Columbia Point, Boston.

O'Toole argued at a recent Town Meeting voters should rescind a portion of the zoning bylaws which allows homes built in town before 1955 to be converted to two family homes.

He lost the argument after several residents objected. The vote went against the Planning Board. At the league meeting, O'Toole cited that section of the zoning bylaws as an example of how Cohasset is not restrictive in housing laws.

Alfred Odermatt, former authority director, said currently elderly housing residents pay 25 percent of their net income as rent "and that includes utilties."

Prescott said that sum does not meet the electric heating bills in the winter.

When elderly housing opened in Cohasset, 50 percent of Cohasset residents were admitted. Fifty percent or 32 people were admitted from out-of-town and Odermatt said state officials should consider the rental composition.

O'Donnell presented several state low income options and warned legislation in the next two years might change state imposed requirements.

League President Marie Caristi said the state is building 54 percent of the 44,000 units the state estimates is needed.

Several panel members said the needs, when distributed among the 350 cities and towns, will only mean a few units each year for Cohasset.

Caristi said state and local leagues have decided to conduct a survey of low income and housing needs to provide additional clarification of the issue.

Studds' legal-fee fund approved

U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds has received approval from the Federal Election Commission to accept donations to pay $40,000 in attorney fees resulting from the investigation by the House Ethics Committee.

Studds was censured in July by Congress for conducting an admitted affair with a 17 year-old male page 10 years ago. Since that time he has conceded that he is a homosexual and has discussed his continued representation of District 10 during four open sessions in the district since the censure.

The legal defense fund will be a separate entity from campaign funds. As such Studds can receive donations to pay the legal costs incurred in his defense through services of Mahoney, Hawkes & Goldings of Boston.

Steve Schwadron of Studds' office said Monday conditions of the specific legal trust fund do not require the congressman to account for or to reveal the amount and the name of donors.

However, said Schwadron, Studds has committed himself to making the contributors and the sums known to the public voluntarily.

Studds says he has been able to pay about a quarter of the $40,000 debt.

Selectmen appointments

Selectmen designated special town counsels Robert Smart Jr. and Thomas Brachen as special municipal employees.

Also, John Slater III will be assistant town counsel.

Mary Davis, of Beechwood St. will be board of appeals secretary.

AFS given go-ahead to extend opportunities

As a result of a charter revision, the Cohasset Chapter of the American Field Service (AFS) has been given the go-ahead to extend its opportunities to all Cohasset residents who are students in the tenth, eleventh, or twelfth grade.

Originally, the AFS opportunities extended only to students in the Cohasset public school system.

Now, students enrolled in private schools are invited to apply through the Cohasset AFS chapter, provided their own school does not participate in the AFS program.

The deadline for declaring a AFS candidate is Sunday, Sept. 25. Interviews are scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 27. Call Jo Ann Rossi at 383-6818 for details. Applications are available.

A special High School Assembly was held Thursday, Sept. 15, to welcome back AFS Summer Program students. Kevin Keller has returned from an exciting summer in Kenya, while Cohasset students Kathy Corbett and Jennifer Hanlon spent wonderful and memorable summers in Mexico and Germany, respectively.

The student body also welcomed at this time Tui McArthur from Christ Church, New Zealand. Tui will be spending an AFS year abroad with host family Ed and Sally Atkinson.

Although not under the jurisdiction of AFS, Cohasset students' lives will be enriched this year by the presence of two additional foreign students.

Hannamaija Helander is the Rotary Club exchange student, visiting with host family Dave and Jane Crocker. Tove Osterling is an independent foreign student from Uppsala, Sweden, staying with Ian and Christine Gilmour.

The Cohasset AFS Chapter is looking for new and interested members. Sunday, Sept. 25, is the deadline for making oneself known as a potential AFS candidate. Call Jo Ann Rossi at 383-6818 for details. Interviews will be held Tuesday, Sept. 27.

The next regularly scheduled monthly meeting is Thursday, Nov. 3 at 8 p.m. Call President Jane Goedecke at 383-6935 or Nancy Andell at 383-0486 for details.

Special Town Meeting . . .

sion's firm to develop the alternative plans, attended Tuesday's meeting.

Dauchy said there are towns and cities in the state which have developed alternative systems and have approved state variances.

He said with the proper engineering, the alternative systems will be a success.

He also said the state did not take into consideration the opinions of the Hull Sewer Plant engineer.

Reacting to Dauchy's opinion, health board member Dr. Michael Bliss said the health board will tend to go along with the state concerning the denial of the variances because of the threat to the town's water supply.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said an earlier court judgement allowed Cohasset to amend a court order if circumstances concerning economics,environment and technology changed since 1979.

Regarding the state's $2,000 penalty, Henderson said no penalty will be imposed until the issue is heard in court.

Although Henderson acknowledged he has no expertise in environmental lawsuits, he said Ward Engineering has had success in other communities.

The town is spending money to be represented in court by special environmental attorneys. Henderson expects the court hearing to be held within the next two or three weeks.

DeSantis first opened discussion with a comparison of the large central sewer plant and the alternative plan.

For Phrase 1, he said the Metcalf and Eddy plan would solve 30 percent of the town's sewer problems, cost the town $3.5 million, the homeowner $720 and non-service homeowners, $200. These figures, he said, were estimated in April.

For the alternative plan, DeSantis said Ward Engineering is estimating it will cost the town $430,000 to $1 million; an annual cost to homeowners of $80 to $170. The average homeowner, said DeSantis, will spend between $120 and $130 annually.

DeSantis said backing down to the state will mean a transfer of "Taxachusetts to Taxahasset."

Sewer Commissioner Joseph Gwinn represented opponents to the alternative plan.

He prepared a flyer distributed to Cohasset homeowners last weekend.

The flyer answered the question, "Is the Ward plan cheaper and quicker than the Metcalf and Eddy plan?"

The answer is 'No, No and Hell No!' The state does not believe the Ward plan will solve any of our sewer problems and therefore has refused to fund it. We will pay dearly to pursue it further because we will pay the fine and the entire cost of a project that solves none of our sewer problems.

"The state is willing to subsidize the M & E plan but will not subsidize the Ward plan. The town would pay only $3½ million and about a ½ million hook-up charge to implement the M & E plan but would pay the entire $9 million to implement the Ward plan."

One Jerusalem Road woman said it will cost her about $15,000 to repair her septic system. She asked what the Metcalf and Eddy plan would do in the future concerning Jerusalem Road.

Sewer Commissioner Edward Guild replied, "I live on Jerusalem Road too, and the Metcalf and Eddy system will arrive in Jerusalem Road in the year 2,010.

"The Ward Plan may cost $15,000 but 94 percent of that is reimbursed by the state and federal government. Your cost would be $900."

She replied, "Are you sure?"

DeSantis said a full alternative plan will be ready for discussion in six months.

Other town meeting articles

In other town meeting actions, voters approved $52,074, for outstanding fiscal year bills.

Patricia Anne Walsh protested about the School Dept. bills which she said could have been paid in previous fiscal years within the School Dept. budget. She said the department has the funds to pay the bills.

Several weeks ago the firefighters union filed 16 criminal complaints against Fire Chief Martin Dooley for failure to pay firefighters for a special detail at the South Shore Music Circus.

Ronald Rawson, Music Circus director, in a letter said there was no commitment from the Music Circus to pay but in a spirit of good will, the Circus paid the firefighters. Therefore, the criminal complaints are moot.

In another article, the town authorized $16,000 to employ a mason to repoint and perform other masonry work at Cohasset High and Osgood Schools. A motion by Stephen Wigmore to authorize the funds for recaulking putting and masonry at the Osgood School failed.

Town Way will soon be closed to all vehicular traffic but will remain a pedestrian route.

The town also paid tribute to former School Supt. William Ripley and named a $10,000 athletic fund in his name. Priority will be given to track and field programs.

The donor is anonymous but Ripley, after a standing ovation by the estimated 260 member audience, said it was one of his former pupils.

Pier reconstruction plans

Charlie Fink, chairman of the harbor committee suggested to selectmen the Anderson Nichols Co. plans to reconstruct the Government Island pier..

Originally the state would have covered the cost of $475,000 but the harbor improvements bill is now dead. Fink said, "Hopefully the bill will be introduced in 1984."

Selectman Frank England said, "We all think that this would be a good thing for the town. Could we start exploring federal funding sources?"

Aside from funding Fink said there were no problems with reconstructing the pier. "Recreational users and 12 of 14 fishermen are in favor of this plan. We have plans available to solve any problems that may come up."said Fink.

Fink will look into other funding sources.

Heights landfill litigation costs near $17,000

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the litigation costs regarding the Cohasset Heights landfill is nearly $17,000.

Recently, Assistant Town Counsel John Slater said he was going into executive session with the board of health to bring them up to date on the suit and legal matters. Slater said he was having a pretrial conference on the suit, but now expects the case will not be heard until October.

Thursday, Assistant Town Counsel John Slater said he was going into executive session with the board of health to bring them up to date on the suit and legal matters. Slater said he was having a pretrial conference on the suit, but now expects the case will not be heard until October.

How did the town get into the position of having to pay soaring legal costs in this suit against Cohasset Heights Ltd. private dump off Route 3A?

State officials say this and similar private facilities are never allowed without the knowledge and permission of town officials.

In 1976, the Board of Health held a public hearing for the purpose of deciding whether to assign the site for use as a demolition type dumping facility. Under state laws a health board is the only body which can make such a determination, known as a "site assignment."

The health board at that time included Chairman Dr. Stephen O'Connor, Rene Chaisson and Dr. Roger Pompeo. They unanimously approved the site "as a dumping ground facility for only demolition and brush."

Notes taken by the health board and on file concerning the hearing say: "Only Mrs. (Martha) Gjesteby came up to examine the plans. Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink eleborated on the need for such an area." "Peter Laugelle as tree warden voiced approval of the site and project, and Wayne Sawchuck as an abutter approved."

Apparently no one presented any objection to the facility.

Wayne Sawchuck, a contractor and former member of the Planning Board, wrote a letter "in favor" of using the area (20 of the 50 acres) "as a sanitary landfill area for stumps, brush and demolition material.

"As a local contractor, I know a need exists to find a convenient and safe area to dispose of these materials. I don't believe there is any other area of the town which is better suited for a disposal area than this property."

Now, Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos says, "As I understand and correspondence in our files indicate, former owner James Tyeryar had been operating such a site before he received the necessary approvals."

Dec. 7, 1976, the Zoning Board of Appeals issued a special permit for the land to be used as a dumping area, following their hearing on Aug. 31.

The Appeals Board members were James Graham, Arthur Lehr and Robert Londergan. Their unanimous decision states, "There were numerous questions raised as to where the area drained, and there was concern whether the drainage would contaminate the watershed area of the Town of Cohasset."

Joseph Rosano traced the flow of drainage water from the area to "Great Swamp" and to the Weir River noting it did avoid the watershed area.

Those who "raised the numerous questions" were not named in the decision.

The appeals board concluded "drainage would be to the Weir River via the Great Swamp as outlined by Mr. Rosano" rather than to Brass Kettle Brook and Lily Pond as one woman at the hearing questioned.

The state DEQE approved Tyeryar's plans Dec. 7, 1976.

Dec. 11, 1978 Thomas McLoughlin, Regional Environmental Engineer wrote the project (of dumping "only demolition and brush") is categorically exempt under environmental Protection Regulations, and therefore been determined to cause no significant damage to the environment.

Tyeryar requested a hearing before the Board of Health Aug. 11, 1980 for the purpose of changing the existing agreement to include the dumping of refuse.

The minutes of that meeting say "Mr. Tyeryar plans to accept from private contractors, and not from individual vehicles, but plans to accept from anywhere in Massachusetts.

This assignment change was unanimously accepted by Chairman Marilyn Sweeney, Dr. Michael Bliss, and Lynne Buckley the health board members.

Two of those members who are currently serving on the Board—Sweeney and Bliss—now are bringing suit against the dump.

Joe Rosano opposed the change at the hearing, because "of traffic that would result which must pass his home. He agrees the area is maintained well, but fears if the landfill is sold if future owners will maintain as well."

John Berwick, Secretary of Environmental Affairs then determined "the above referenced project does not require an Environmental Impact Report."

Former Planning Board member Martha Gjesteby says she wrote in opposition, but her concerns were not listened to.

Rebirth opens next week

By Moira McCarthy

Battered and emotionally abused wives of the South Shore will be given a chance to help one another when Rebirth opens next week.

Rebirth was created when Gini Pomeroy, a counselor at Hingham District Court, noticed the great need.

"There have been 128 restraining orders issued out of Hingham Court since January. Clearly, there is a need," she said. "Some women don't know what options there are for help. Women often internalize the problem.

"Men use pojection, and women internalize. They need to externalize, and start to help themselves."

The support group, formed in the same idea as alcoholics anonymous, will meet weekly, on Monday evenings at the Hingham Congregational Church House on 366 Main Street.

"Hopefully, the group will run itself. The purpose of the group is to coordinate a self-help and growth program to provide support for abused women to to take responsibility for their lives, That means rejecting all forms of violence, verbal emotional, physical, and sexual, and to acknowledge personal dignity, self-worth, achievement, and fulfillment."

The logo of the group, a butterfly, best signifies the meaning behind the meetings, she said.

"Rebirth is a new beginning. These women can live free, with repect and dignity in their lives."

And according to Pomeroy, there's been a lot of response already.

"A self-help group was really needed. The response has made that evident. The doors have been open, and everyone wants to help. That's a good energy. And the community working together will help fulfill the need for these women to come out of the closet, if you will."

The first open door meeting will take place at 7 pm on September 26.

"We'll see where it takes off to from there, and add on and put in whatever is needed."

A few words from C.C. Chairman John Hubbard

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Conservation Commission Chairman John Hubbard acknowledges there is a real division between hunting and conservation.

A former hunter, he said, "I feel there is a real distinction and if you're going to be a conservationist, you can't go hunting."

Hubbard has devoted 20 years to the commission and withstood a legal battle with a developer. "That was before the town carried any insurance for town officials," he said.

He is a semi-retired engineer and works part-time for Massa Products Corp. of Hingham.

Originally, Hubbard was a summer resident and a duck hunter. He moved permanently to Cohasset in 1951 and lives on Beach Street with his wife and four children.

Hubbard has seen a lot of change to Cohasset over the years. Originally, he said, the commission was concerned with preservation but now the commission also focuses on flood plain and bylaw regulations. He also sees a change in the composition of the commission.

"For a time there was a lot of political appointments to the commission, some good, some not so good. Now we are getting better appointments. We have people willing to devote time, not just friends of the selectmen. It is a lot of work," he said.

Commissioners do a lot of on-site inspections before making decisions and issuing conditions.

Hubbard is also a trustee of the Cohasset Conservation Land Trust which manages Bassings Beach and other properties purchased for perservation. Such properties include Treats Pond on the Atlantic Avenue marsh, next to the Cohasset Yacht Club, and land near Pleasant Beach.

Future topics for the commission include studies and concern for Cohasset's water and groundwater supplies.

As commission chairman, Hubbard believes in returning telephone calls and answering questions responsively. He is one dedicated public servant and one protector of Cohasset's unique properties.

Those who witnessed the show included: Sheehan, Gina Esposito, Jenny Mitman, Maura Corkery, Nina Atkinson, Debbie Soltesz and Jim Lydon.

Students who are enrolled in the half-year course study all facets of the American legal system. This includes criminal and juvenile justice, consumer law, family law, housing law and individual rights and liberties in our society.

☐Pvt. Stephen M. Bolster, son of Phillip Bolster of 15 Stockbridge St., has completed one station unit training (OSUT) at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training. The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. Completion of this course qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect-fire crewman. Soldiers were taught to perform any of the duties in a rifle or mortar squad.

☐Joan Appel of Holly Lane, Cohasset has returned from an extensive work-study trip to Florida. Appel, a classical singer and artist, spent nine mnths there exhibiting her work, painting and performing. She had her monotypes presented at art shows and galleries throughout the state, St. Petersburg and Tampa, and has returned to her Cohasset studio.

In music, Joan Appel was trained at the Longy School, Syracuse University, and the New England Conservatory, where she received her Masters Degree in 1969. Since then, she has performed as a recitalist and soloist in New York, Boston and Europe. Throughout her musical career, she has been a pedagogue as well as performer, and founded and directed a children's chorus in Thonon les Bains, France.

Having also worked in theatre, (both musical and "straight") while in Florida, she worked with the American Stage Company in St. Petersburg. She is a member of the Cohasset Drama Club, the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale (Hingham). She is hoping to be on the stage again this winter with various drama groups on the South Shore and in Boston.

Appel maintains a studio for voice and piano coaching and lessons, and will accept students for all ages for the academic year. For more information, call 383-9584.

☐Cadet Charles D. Coe, son of John and Marcia Coe of 23 Pond St., received practical work in military leadership at the U.S. Army ROTC advanced camp, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Coe is a ROTC cadet and a student at the University of New Hampshire, Durham.

☐Army Cadet Richard J. Young, son of Carole Tierney and stepson of Joseph Tierney of 36 Stockbridge St., received practical work in military leadership at the U.S. Army ROTC advanced camp, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Young is a ROTC cadet and a student at Stonehill College, North Easton.

☐Maj. Joseph P. White, Jr., son of Joseph and Estelle White of 67 Forest Ave., has arrived for duty in Washington.

White, a staff otorhinolaryngologist at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, was previously assigned at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, Denver.

He received his doctorate in 1979 from Boston University School of Graduate Dentistry.

His wife, Kathryn, is the daughter of John and Irene Koundourakis of 44 Inverness Lane, Longmeadow.

Sewer - town unity

Tuesday's Special Town Meeting, braved by about 260 residents in steamy hot weather, showed some intangible progress about town unity.

This was the continuation of three town meetings where all five selectmen, the advisory board and residents backed Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis in his bout with the state over alternatives to building a central sewer system.

Even Town Counsel Richard Henderson seemed more confident of the town's case against the state.

Again the state proved its "bullying" tactics with a last minute denial letter could not sway town meeting voters.

Regarding the vote to spend $86,000 of already approved sewer funds to finance an alternative plan, two statements by Cohasset residents stand out.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said the study is necessary, necessary if you are a proponent of the alternative plan and necessary for opponents. Essentially, he said, a full investigation is needed before voters can make a well informed decision.

This was backed up by Richard Silvia who said no study, in length, has been completed and voters should have a full study completed before decisions are made.

Essentially the meaning of Tuesday's special town meeting was expressed by DeSantis. Taxachusettts doesn't mean Taxhasset.

Catch-up work

The Dukakis Administration, which has been heretofore lax in offering any real solutions toward the transportation mess on the South Shore, deserves some credit for its catch-up work in recent weeks.

South Shore commuters, surely the hardiest motorists in Massachustts, are being prepared for a new kind of misery that will descend next spring when the Southeast Expressway is ripped up from Rte. 128 to the Mass. Avenue ramp. According to DPW officials, 8.3 miles of the road will undergo reconstruction, reducing the total number of lanes from eight to six. The work will require at least two years to finish. So if you have a helicopter...

At an area meeting on the subject last week, residents from Marshfield, Scituate and their environs expressed displeasure over the problems to come. The criticisms are valid, but the Pollyannas among us can take heart in knowing that steps are being taken to at least partially alleviate the burden, be they through increasing the number of MBTA cars and buses, increasing the number of commuter parking lots and improving commuter boat service from Hingham.

The Dukakis team has worked to provide bus service in conjunction with the commuter boat which will allow Marshfield commuters to avoid the Expressway altogether...provided they have plenty of time and money. The bus-boat-bus route is not a quick way to Boston and at $4.50 per trip (that's $45 per week and $2250 per year for 50 weeks), it is not cheap. Those getting minimum wage will have to find another way to travel.

The plans to reduce the level of misery are welcome indeed, but some day we are going to have to consider another way to travel. And that means by rail.

A good shepherd, Cardinal Medeiros

By Claire McDonough

I met him only once — at the dedication of Kent Village — but I felt that I had known him always.

He was a kind, gentle, humble man who was sustained during bright and dark hours by a faith that was like a rock.

He was a Cardinal, but more than that, he was a pastor — a good shepherd, really. When we turned to him for guidance, he consulted his Source.

When his decisions were questioned, he never blustered, never threatened.

"I feel," he would state simply, firmly, "that we must go by the gospel. We must do what the gospel tells us."

For him it was as basic as that.

The 2,000 year old words of a Galilean carpenter were timeless. They were as relevant to today's problems of abortion, race, poverty, homelessness as they had been when they were first proclaimed to residents of Bethany or Caperhaum — many of whom found these words so hard to take that they "turned away and walked with Him no more."

Sometimes we found the words hard to take. We rebelled, we complained, we said that the Cardinal didn't understand today's problems.

Perhaps, though, he did.

Humberto Cardinal Medeiros was not a man for ivory towers. At an early age he and his family came to Fall River as many an immigrant family had come before them. They faced prejudice, and they exchanged the poverty of the Islands for the poverty of a mill town in the depression. At 16 years old young Humberto left school to help support his family. With the New Deal, the family's lot improved, and the young man was able to return to high school. He was 21 years old.

Nothing ever came easy for Humberto Medeiros. His first assignment as a Bishop was to Brownsville, Texas. Once again he was face to face with the twin serpents of poverty and racism. Once again he took his problems, one day at a time, and sought his answers in the gospel.

By the time he came to us, he had it down pat. No big sermons; no condemnation; no retreating. Just gospel. If God is my Father, then all men are my brothers. If my brother is hungry, or homeless, or frightened then I must help him.

As simple as that. And as difficult.

Now he's gone. We shall surely miss him. We shall miss his matter-of-fact courage, his dry sense of humor, and his rock-like faith. His faith that we could rebel against, and complain about, nevertheless secure in the knowledge that he wouldn't let us stray too far — that we could depend on him to be the good shepherd who would again and again bring us face to face with the reality of the gospel.

And even as we miss him, we shall rejoice that he was with us for a while. We shall remember, and take strength from his words, "I know that God loves me. And if He loves me, then He loves these others, too. These unfortunate ones. I am certain of that."

Humberto Cardinal Medeiros. He was a man of God, and he was a friend to his fellow man.

Letter To the Editor:

It is the best of times, it is the worst of times...one wonders if Charles Dickens could well have been describing public education in 1983. It is the worst of times when only 23 percent of the electorate have children in public schools. It is the worst of times when education is the focus of daily media attacks. It is the worst of times when schools are assaulted by massive budget cuts, private school aid legislation at the state level, and tuition tax credits at the federal level. Public education, as we know, is fighting for its life.

It is, however, the best of times when we consider that for the first time in the history of the United States, education is ourcountry's #1 priority!. What a perfect opportunity for the teachers of this country to lead the way to excellence in the classroom. We know the children best. We know the children need to be in school. We know the children need to be in school on time. We know the children and not the parents need to do homework assignments. We understand the need for maximum competencies, not minimum competencies. We have the expertise to set realistic expectations for children, and the skill to prepare environments where consistent, loving discipline prevails.

We know that administrators and teachers need to work together as a team, respecting each other's contributions. Administrators are the support system for staff. When teachers are viewed as labor and administrators are viewed as management, adversary roles are set up. This framework works well in the private sector when you are dealing with a product. We are not dealing with products; we are dealing with children's lives.

Music Circus director explains wage issue

(Here is a letter sent to Selectmen. Ed. Note.)

Madam and Gentlemen:

I have noted over the past few weeks that a substantial amount of misinformation has been circulated in the press and otherwise with respect to the circumstances giving rise to the assignment of fire department details to be present at the Music Circus premises during certain performances, and the arrangements concerning payment for those details.

Specifically, it has been erroneously alleged that the details were necessary because the carpeting at the Music Circus was in some respect unsafe and that there was a "verbal agreement" that the Music Circus would pay for the details.

In the face of these inaccurate allegations, I am writing on behalf of the Music Circus to set the record straight.

With respect to the allegations concerning the carpeting, I wish to point out that the carpeting installed in the Music Circus is the same brand and type of carpeting that has been installed there for over 12 years.

There has not been a single occasion, until this year, during that 12 year period, when anyone on behalf of the Town, including the Building Inspector, the Fire Chief or any other Town official, has raised any question concerning the safety of the carpeting.

We have relied upon the integrity of the carpeting manufacturer and the installer to be familiar with, and to comply with, any applicable regulations concerning the flammability of the carpeting material.

In point of fact, when questions were raised by the Fire Chief this year we sought, and obtained, a certificate from the manufacturer and an independent test by a certified testing laboratory, copies of both of which are enclosed, conclusively establishing that our carpet meets or exceeds by a substantial margin all applicable flammability requirements.

Consequently, as the enclosed documentation proves, any allegations to the affect that our carpeting was in any way unsafe or not in compliance with the applicable law or regulations were completely without foundation.

With respect to the allegation that the Music Circus "agreed" to pay for the fire department details which the Fire Chief unilaterally elected to assign to its premises, I am enclosing a copy of my letter to the Fire Chief dated June 8, 1983, dealing with the specific issue of his proposal to assign fire department details to the Music Circus premises.

That letter unequivocally states that "...it is our experience after 33 years of operation that the addition of two firefighters would be, in our opinion, an unnecessary adjunct to our staff, who have the duties and responsibilities to carry out the assignments that you ask for..."

My letter went on to state, and I quote: "The addition of this personnel would be a significant cost item to us, running upwards to something less than $1,000 per week. Should the Town feel that this type of coverage is needed and wishes to undertake its cost, we would review our opinion on it. (Emphasis added.)

Notwithstanding our clear written position that the Town must be responsible for what we consider to be the wholly unnecessary costs of assigning firefighters to our premises, the Fire Chief unilaterally proceeded to do so and then to submit statements to the Music Circus demanding payment for those details.

As the enclosed letter of June 8, 1983 establishes, the Fire Chief was advised in writing, well before any details were assigned to our premises, that the Music Circus would not be responsible for the costs associated with such details. The Music Circus made no verbal agreement contrary to its written position in that regard.

Despite the unfortunate misinformation which has been circulated with respect to this matter, the Music Circus does not wish to condone a situation which has resulted in a number of the Town's firefighters being deprived of payment for services which they provided under the impression that the details in question had been properly authorized.

The Music Circus is also greatly concerned that the Townspeople may now be inconvenienced by the necessity of taking up the matter at a special Town meeting in order to appropriate funds to correct the situation.

While the Music Circus fully recognizes that it has no legal obligation to pay for the details to which it objected in writing and for which it disavows any financial obligation, as a responsible citizen of the Town of Cohasset the Music Circus cannot countenance allowing this situation to continue any longer in a manner which inconveniences third parties who have no responsibility for what has transpired.

Accordingly, in a spirit of good citizenship, and in the hope that this gesture will put to rest this most unfortunate sequence of events, I am enclosing herewith a check from the Music Circus in the amount of $2,344.83 in full payment of the amounts billed as a result of the firefighter details assigned to our premises during the period in question.

As noted above, this payment is being made on a purely volunteer basis for the reasons above mentioned, and in the hope that any subsequent concerns which may arise with respect to similar matters will be handled by the Town's representatives in a manner consistent with the spirit of this letter.

Murray's memos

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Chapter 341 of the Acts of 1983 has made it more convenient for the elderly of the Commonwealth to cash certain checks. It provides for banks to honor and cash certain checks of pensioners and retirees.

There is a change in the law which will prevent banks from refusing to cash certain checks for elderly people who do not have bank accounts.

The law provides that "Every bank doing business in the Commonwealth, which for the purposes of this section shall include any bank as defined in section one and any national bank, national banking association, federal savings bank, federal savings and loan association and federal credit union, shall honor and cash a check presented by a pensioner or retiree, whether or not such person has an account in such bank, if the following conditions are met.

These are: (a) the said pensioner or retiree is a resident of the Commonwealth; (b) the said pensioner or retiree provides adequate information for identification purposes and is registered with such bank; and (c) any such check has been issued to the pensioner or retiree presenting the same as a social security, supplemental security income, supplemental security income for aged, blind, and disabled or retirement benefit by the federal government or any agency thereof, or by the commonwealth or any agency or political subdivision thereof.

The commissioner, by regulation, shall establish a procedure to be employed by any bank, as defined in section one. Whereby pensioners or retirees may be registered therewith for the purpose of having such checks cashed. The regulations shall require, but need not be limited to, the following.

They are: (1) every such bank shall provide for the registration in its main office and any branch thereof of any pensioner or retiree requesting the same by means of an application card containing the application date, and the name, address, date of birth, social security number and handwritten signature of the applicant as well as any other information which the commissioner may deem necessary, or by any other method and under such conditions as the commissioner may approve; (2) every such bank shall have the authority to verify all information required to be submitted to effect such registration ; (3) upon verification, which shall be completed within thirty days of the receipt of such application, the applicant pensioner or retiree shall be so registered and shall be forthwith provided by the bank with an identification card, in such form as the commissioner may approve, entitling him to such check cashing privileges.

Others are: (4) the presentation of any such check for cashing shall be restricted to the office or branch of any such bank in which the registration of the said pensioner or retiree was affected; and (5) every such bank may assess a charge for processing the said application and issuing the said identification card in an amount equal to the actual cost incurred therefore as determined by the commissioner to be fair and equitable, and no other charge shall be assessed for such check cashing purposes.

Any bank which fails to cash any such check of a pensioner or retiree registered therewith in accordance with this section or which otherwise violates the provisions of this section or any regulations promulgated thereunder shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars for each such violation.

Many of our "Young at Heart" have been refused by various banking institutions to have their checks cashed. I do not believe that government should interfere with business ordinarily, however I believe we owe pensioners, social security recipients and retirees the right to have their checks cashed.

Joan Pinkham

By Joan Pinkham

Like Bibles and dictionaries, a good cookbook can outsell a work of fiction any day. Certain to be a moneymaker is a charming collection of recipes which Gina Bresnahan has sent me. "A Taste of Scituate" is the name her committee chose for the collection that took them two years to assemble. Gina says it is thanks to the parishioners of St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Church in North Scituate that this little treasure has come into being. Browsing through the book I discovered there are over four hundred recipes in the plastic-covered volume which features a drawing of Scituate Harbor and the famous lighthouse on the cover. For the most part the recipes are easy, but at the same time, unusual. For instance, there are Lucille Foley's "Amazing Muffins," Andy Zilonis' "Bacon and Breadstick Appetizers," Pat Malone's "Simple Pecan Rolls," Pat Michaud's "Gougere Bread," and Helen Allison's contribution of

Sea Captain's Chowder

*1/4 c. margarine
1½ c. diced celery
1/2 c. chopped onion
Cook above on low heat till tender, then add the following:
2 cans Campbell's Cream of Potato Soup
2 soup cans of milk
1 lb. fillet of haddock, cut in 2" pieces
1½ c. sliced cooked carrots
1 lg. can cream-style corn
1/8 tsp. pepper and 1 bay leaf (important)

Bring all to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 10 to 15 min., or until fish is cooked. Stir often. Remove bay leaf before serving. Makes about 8 to 9 cups. Recipe can be doubled.

*Diced salt pork can be used instead of margarine. Brown the salt pork and remove from pan. Cook celery and onions in drippings, then follow rest of recipe and add the browned salt pork.

A money-raising project such as this which will benefit the North Scituate Church, is undertaken with a great deal of courage. First, one has to encourage the congregation to do their part by contributing favorite recipes, then the committee begins the work of assembling, cataloguing, testing and proofing the recipes before turning them over to the printer. Helping Gina were the following committee members: Susan Campbell, Betty Gerry, Catherine Glavin, Helen Lonergan, Nannette Limbacher, Isabelle Martell, Marie McEachern and Polly Pyne. The book is dedicated to Marion Smith, with appreciation given to Andrew Zilonis and Esther Maschio. I'm looking forward to making "Golfer's Stew," of which Betty Gerry says you can go out for a pleasant round of golf and come home to a good dinner. Roasted pumpkin seeds is Pat Malone's recipe which she says is fun for kids at this time of year and perhaps a good project for young scouts some rainy meeting day. Gina recomends this recipe of Nancy Wilson's for

Potato Bundles

6 medium potatoes
1/2 c. soft butter
1 envelope dry onion soup mix

Scrub potatoes, but do not peel. Cut each into three length-wise slices. Blend butter and soup mix. Spread in slices, then reassemble the potato. Wrap each in a square of foil, overlapping ends. Bake at 375 degrees for abut one hour, or on charcoal grill, turning often, for 45-60 min. Nancy says, "Gets raves at every cookout!"

* * *

Faith Bowker contributed a cookie recipe of which she writes: "Kids love these! They are quick and require no baking pans." We'll all be flocking to the supermarket for these ingredients and no doubt hiding them once they're made in a place the kids have yet to discover — wherever that is!

Reese Peanut Butter Cup Cookies

Melt together over low heat:
1 c. peanut butter and
1/2 lb. butter or oleo
Combine with above mixture:
1½ c. graham cracker crumbs and
2 c. confectioners sugar
Press the mixture into small cupcake liners. Chill.
Melt:
18 oz. pkg. chocolate chips in double boiler

Spoon and twirl melted chocolate over peanut butter cups. Refrigerate to set.

If you wish to add "A Taste of Scituate" to your cookbook collection, call Gina at 545-9284. Get an extra copy to give as a gift by sending a check made out to St. Frances X. Cabrini Church. The price is $7.95 plus mailing charges of $1.13.

Martha Gaffey joins forces for Norwell Centre South

By Theresa Sullivan

Diane Flanagan, of Scituate, Maria D'Arcangelo, of Quincy, and Martha Gaffey, of Cohasset, don't dress alike, speak alike or look alike.

But somehow their outward differences don't matter when they communicate with each other.

The three of them compliment one another like a couple who has been married 35 years—one finishes a sentence another started.

They've joined together to teach dance and theatre at Dance Centre South, Norwell.

Diane and Maria grew up together in Quincy. Diane started dancing at age five. "I started dancing because my aunt was a dance teacher," Diane said.

"I was always there."

Maria interjected, "Whenever you wanted to find Diane, she was at her aunt's (dance studio)."

Diane said her aunt's lessons were stage dance oriented. She studied tap and jazz from her aunt.

She said she learned in a light, fun atmosphere.

Meanwhile, Maria began studying ballet at age 4. She attributed starting at such a young age to her mother's involvement with dancing.

She said she worked in a very strict, disciplined atmosphere.

At age 14, Maria was apprenticing with the Boston Ballet.

"Then I quit to go to college. I couldn't imagine myself working at it 12 hours a day," Maria said.

She said being a professional dancer requires tremendous discipline. "There's very little social life."

In college she majored in foreign languages. She teaches foreign language at Quincy High School.

Martha made her acting debut as a freshman in high school when the girl playing the lead in "Cinderella" had to be hospitalized a week before the show.

The director asked Martha to assume the role, because she had some experience singing. "I had never done anything on stage before.

"I learned the part in a week."

She was doing fine until dress rehearsal, when the male lead was flown in from his college. Martha attended an all girls high school.

When it came time for Prince Charming to kiss Cinderella, she ran off stage, in utter embarrassment.

"I had had very little contact with boys," Martha said.

"I had nuns telling me it was okay to kiss a boy. I said, 'How do you know?' "

She made it through that performance and countless others since. When she isn't on stage, she directs. The three have worked together at high schools, colleges and local theatre clubs.

Diane and Maria choreograph and Martha directs.

They met when working on a production of "South Pacific," where Martha was the assistant director.

"Now we've gotten to the point (where) people consider us a package," Martha said.

"When you find a combination of people who work well together . . . We'll fight back and forth, but we have not had any situation where we can't come to a compromise," Martha continued.

Maria added, "Before I have a chance to say it, Diane will finish a sentence."

Diane said their differences compliment each other. "There's a perception that Maria is the hard nose . . ."

"I am," Maria interjected.

"I'm the one who smooths things over," Diane said.

"She's the one who's much more understanding," Maria added.

Their philosphy toward their participation in dance and theatre is unified.

"In Europe, theatre, dance and opera are as important as science and technology. Art, culture in general, is available on an affordable basis," Martha said.

"It's $2 a ticket for the ballet in Europe," Maria said. "They're letting the general public in on it."

After college, Martha tried to break into the acting field in New York City. She said she decided to leave N.Y.C. because she could contribute more to theatre in an area that was nowhere near the saturation level of New York City.

Even on the South Shore, the competition is enough to put the pay for choreographing or directing at the level most artists are paid—"peanuts."

The three agreed, "It's a tough way to make a living."

Diane joked that while she was just getting by teaching dance to two different groups in Quincy, Maria was "getting rich."

During school vacations, Maria travelled to the Bahamas to teach ballet to children. Their government paid for the instruction, their lodging and Maria's air fare, she said.

To say the three lead hectic lives would be an understatement. They will be teaching three afternoons and evenings per week, and working on at least one production at a time—but more likely two at a time.

"The more you do, the more you want to do." Any one of these women could have said that.

Last year, Dance Centre South's first year, Diane and Maria taught jazz, ballet and tap two afternoons and evenings a week. This year, they've added Martha, the business manager, and she will lead acting workshops.

Diane and Maria will also team-teach a jazzercise class, which is an intense workout using jazz movements.

Diane said of the class, "It's a fun class. We do silly things."

"It's held at the end of the day; so we're kind of punchy," Maria added.

Prospective students may register for any of the classes, Thursday, Sept. 22, from 4:30 to 8 p.m.

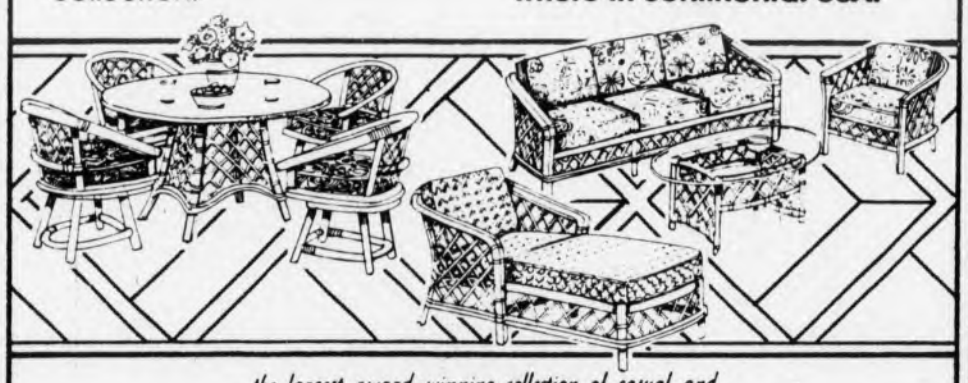
Classes and registration will be at the Church Hill Methodist Church, off River St., Norwell. Dance Centre South operates on the bottom floor of the education building, Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Register by phone at 545-3370 or 328-0973.

Classes range from Children's Dance, for 3- to 5-year-olds, to Classical Ballet for anyone age six and up.

Martha, Maria and Diane stressed their willingness to instruct people at all levels of skill, from beginners to advanced students.

Their love for the arts and teaching was apparent in much of their conversation.



Martha condensed what each of the women seemed to feel when she said, "Probably the more rewarding (aspect of teaching), is when you take someone who is frozen, when they come through and you see them get to their best potential.

"That's very rewarding."

Coast Guard report for the week

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 14

12:33 p.m., Received call "Mayday" off Scituate Harbor. Watchstander answered call with negative response. Dispatched CG Unit and a CG helicopter to search area off Scituate Harbor. At 2:16 p.m., 1½ hours later, a person called Station Scituate and stated he was a 38 ft. sloop homeported Marblehead moored in Plymouth Harbor.

Earlier in the day he had put out a Mayday call; his position at the time was 1 mile north of Plymouth Harbor. He had noticed the petcock in his sink was opened and taking on water. He then secured the petcock and proceeded into Plymouth Harbor. He failed to secure his Mayday broadcast and shut off his radio. At 2:28 p.m. we recalled both CG units.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 18

11:23 a.m., Received a call from 24 ft. cabin cruiser "Liquor Store" disabled with water in fuel 100 yds. off Scituate Harbor. Dispatched CG unit "Laura Leigh." Towed vessel to Scituate Harbor.

6:08 p.m., Received call from 25 ft. cabin cruiser "Lorac" disabled engine, can no. 9 South River, dispatched CG unit "Lisa Jean." Towed vessel to South River Marina.

MONDAY, SEPT. 19

8:50 a.m., Received Mayday call from vessel "Prometheus" taking on water 3 miles east of Brant Rock. "Prometheus," a 41 ft. dragger homeported in Plymouth was taking on water fairly rapidly. CG unit responded from Scituate and CG Cutter "Cape Higgon" also responded to call. After vessel was dewatered by pumps and personnel supplied by both CG vessels, "Prometheus" was towed to Plymouth by CG unit and hauled at Plymouth Marine.

4:43 p.m., Received call from pleasure craft "Traders Reward" 1 mile east of Scituate. "Traders Reward," a 25 ft. inboard-outboard was disabled with engine failure. CG unit towed vessel to Scituate Harbor.

A subterranean ranch makes Cohasset debut

"There aren't many people around who can tee off from the top of their home."

With that statement, Pat Casey of Cohasset introduces his unusual residence—the dream home he envisioned and built with determination.

Pat, owner of Casey's Kennels on Cedar Street, has a subterranean ranch.

He is selling the home now, and plans to build another on a few of the many acres of land he owns along Lambert's Lane.

Jack Conway Sales Associate Eunice Coady says this will be ideal domain for a creative person.

"I think someone like an artist, or a writer, who loves to be surrounded by creativity, and also appreciates solitude, will love this house. It is well-built, made with the best materials that will survive the worst winters and the hottest summers. I think it's an ideal spot for a creative person who loves nature and loves to be surrounded by nature," she says.

Adjacent to the Cohasset Golf Club, Pat says he often smacks a few golf balls from atop the grass roof of his underground home. He is secluded in this wooded neighborhood, and that is why he likes this special, private area.

Why, in this town where Colonial Garrisons and Custom Capes abound, did Pat decide to construct a subterranean structure?

Inside the house the hidden advantages of the ranch are revealed. Although electric heat has been designed into the home, without any heat, the temperature will never dip below 60 degrees. On the hottest summer day, without air conditioning, the thermostat will never read above 70 degrees. On a recent, hot sticky August afternoon, the home was naturally cooled to a comfortable 68 degrees.

The reason for this phenomenal temperature control is nature itself. Because the rear and top of the home is protected by three feet of earth, the home is naturally insulated against extreme hot and cold wather.

Pat saw an underground home depicted in a magazine and decided that was the home for him. A lot of the scientific ingenuity went into the design and construction of the home.

Here is a frontal view of Pat Casey's underground home.

The huge, thermal windows which line the entire front of the structure are constructed with an outside overhang above, which allows the winter solstice to eminate thoughout the shortened days, but shades the summer sun from entering and heating the house during the long, hot summer.

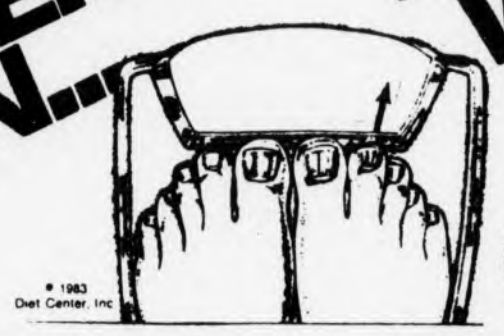
Another advantage to this home, is that homeowners' insurance is less expensive. Because the structure, surrounded by dirt, can not burn, the insurance premium is less.

Pat says it takes only one day to stain the entire outside of the home. He added the new homeowner will never have to replace the roof, which consists of six inches of styrofoam insulation, covered with six inches of dirt, topsoil, loam and grass.

"The only maintenance you have to do to the roof," he claims, "is to mow it a couple of times a year.

Inside the home is contemporary living. Tiled floors and oak cabinets line the kitchen. There are three bedrooms and two bathrooms. A 24 by 24 foot outside deck overlooks the two-acre lot. A two-car garage is interconnected to the home, and there is an entrance into a partial basement.

This passive-solar home is the reflection of Pat's hard work and determination to construct a solid, energy-efficient home. Living here has been fun, he acknowledges. Pat's immediate goal will now focus on a two-story underground home, perfect for a large family.



"It took me four years to complete this home," he says."Now it's time to begin again."

Boy Scout car wash

Boy Scout Troop 28 (Cohasset) will sponsor a car wash Satuarday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. to benefit the Nardo family at the Town Hall parking lot.

Landfill article withdrawn from town meeting

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Board of Health members voted unanimously Monday night to rescind a Town Meeting warrant article calling for the transfer of control of the landfill to selectmen.

This article would have reclassified landfill employees as employees of the selectmen.

At the same time board members discussed with Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos a new policy of "progressive discipline" regarding the activities of Landfill Supervisor Joseph Laugelle.

The board earlier wanted to terminate him.

As a first step, they are sending a letter to Laugelle regarding his coffee breaks, with copies to selectmen, and the Personnel and Advisory Boards

Board Chairman Barbara Sweeney urged the board to rescind Article 16 because "I do not want to face the opposition of another member (Bliss was not named) of my Board on Town Meeting floor," and because of the opposition of the advisory board.

Eliopoulos said she had had a discussion with Executive Secretary Mark Lanza for an hour regarding "progressive discipline" of employees. After a warning letter, any infractions may be dealt with a one day suspension and loss of pay for the first offense, two days for the second offense ect.

Eliopoulos said she wanted Laugelle to notify the health office when he was leaving the dump for coffee breaks. "This will eliminate mystery trips," said Eliopoulos. Sweeney said, "town folks don't give a damn."

According to Eliopoulos, Laugelle's coffee breaks "vary."

She has already sent him "written notifications on the subject and added she has been questioned by citizens at the dump as to his absence. Since a chemical toilet was recently installed by Roto Rooter, which is cleaned and disinfected once a week, Laugelle no longer has to make trips to go to the bathroom, Eliopoulos said.

Board members and Eliopoulos said they do not want Laugelle to leave the landfill.

According to state regulations, health board members said, the dump must have two men on hand.

OSHA (Occupational Safety Hazard) rules prohibit operation of the 'dozer without another man present.' They discussed the serious liability that could occur to the town, if an accident occured when the equipment was operated with only one man present.

Eliopoulos said that the secretaries do not go on coffee breaks without her knowledge, and "You," she said (speaking of the board), "may always know where I am located."

Board members also discussed it is common office practice for personnel to have a set time for a coffee break each day or to notify supervisors and/or co-workers when they are taking a break.

Board member Michael Bliss questioned if the board would have to supply Laugelle with dimes for the pay phone. "No," Eliopoulos said, "because I have an arrangement where he rings the office (a certain number of times) from the pay phone at the dump, and then I call him back." Eliopoulos said this procedure "saves money."

AGENT CONTRACT

Eliopoulos requested the board give her a one year contract "for protection" instead of employing her "at will."

SEPTIC SYSTEM COMPROMISE

Eliopoulos agreed to a compromise solution with developer Ted Patrolia and his Engineer Edmund Atkinson concerning observation holes to be dug around a septic system and installed in a lot on Fairoaks Lane.

Sweeney said the plans were drawn under old rules in 1970 and approved in 1976 to "beat Title 5 requirements," and installed in 1979.

Eliopoulos was concerned there were no water table or depth of field notations on the plans.

Patrolia said a developer had rights and Atkinson said regulations provide starting times but not finish deadline for projects. Health board members said they wanted to protect any future purchasers of the property.

CORRAL VARIANCE

Carol Bestick of 555 Beechwood St. denied Eliopoulos' allegations her "barn is filled to the ceiling with debris." She said she objected to the "agent inspecting for one thing and then talking about another."

Sweeney said the health board has other legitimate concerns.

Bestick sought variances from corral side lot requirements and 10 by 10 ft. horse stall space requirements for a stall. She wants to stable a shetland pony.

Florence Stoddard of 50 Doane Street objected that five equines presently stabled are "standing in water for several months" in the corral in the spring.

Lloyd Huskins of 561 Beechwood Street said he was concerned about waste disposal into fields, "hundreds" of flies, and observable odor.

The health board approved the variance conditional on relocated manure storage, improved barn sanitation, and inspection of the premises by the agent. The board required more sand be added to a section of the corral to relieve the animals from standing in water.

TRUCK REPAIR

Stephen Ward attended the meeting regarding his purchase and sales agreement for a lot he proposes to purchase from James Tyeryar on Crocker Lane for a truck repair operation.

He said it is one of the last pieces of industrially zoned land available. The lot does not perk and might require a chemical toilet or holding tank. Ward wanted the board's "opinion" of the toilet. Bliss said yes, board member Barbara Kern said no, and Sweeney did not decide.

Boosters sponsor Country Crafters

The Cohasset High School Boosters will sponsor the Country Crafters craft show and sale Sept. 24 and Sept. 25 to raise money for many projects.

This craft group represents both colonial and modern day crafts. They will be demonstrating and selling their products at the upcoming show at the Cohasset High School off Rte. 3A on Pond Street.

Linda Thomas of Scituate, has developed a delightful technique for painting on hats and sun visors. Her style and workmanship bring something special to her T-shirts. Her painters hats are whimsical with animals and flowers, and all can be personalized.

Christy Bacon of Hingham is well-known for her stencilling work. She not only does walls and curtains to order, but also sells placemats with matching napkins and stencils for do-it-yourself projects. Christy teaches classes in the Hingham Evening School.

Richard Silvia of Cohasset is new to the craft field but has a terrific, updated approach to working with slate. He has etched a picture of Minot's Light, or a duck, or clipper ship or other patterns into a piece of slate. The finished piece is charming and can be used in a number of ways. He can also take orders for a name or street number.

The group has several openings and is always looking for guest crafters with unique skills. If interested, please call 545-1034 or 383-0500 for more information.

The Boosters will be serving coffee and doughnuts as soon as the doors open on Saturday at 10 a.m. and then later for lunch. The show will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Satuarday and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday.

PSO school report

PSO FALL MEMBERSHIP MEETING

All parents of Cohasset school children are automatically members of the Cohasset Parent School Organization and are encouraged to attend the PSO Fall General Membership Meeting where they will be introduced to school administrators, School Committee Representatives, and PSO Executive Board.

The membership meeting will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 4 at Cohasset High School's Study Hall, Cafeteria. Refreshments will be served at 7 p.m. The meeting will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m.

"Are We Killing the Arts?" is the topic for what promises to be a lively, informative evening.

Penny Dunning, a creativity consultant with the Whole Brain Corporation, will introduce the idea of brain dominance and its implications for teaching.

Problems will be presented to groups selected from the audience to illustrate different people use different cognitive processes to reach conclusions.

She will demonstrate what it is to think "whole-brained" and how the brain dominance theory can be used to unlock creative potential.

Bart O'Connor, assistant superintendent of the Attleboro School District, will discuss the importance of creativity. He will discuss why the arts have special meaning in the Attleboro Schools.

Connor will also explain Attleboro's successful and unique approach to keeping the arts alive in the schools and integrated into all subject areas despite the monetary pinch of Proposition 2½.

PSO SCHOOL CALENDAR

Sue McNamara, President of Cohasset's Parent School Organization, has been receiving up to 10 phone calls per day from frantic people who have grown to depend on the information provided in the PSO Calendar.

"The calendars are coming," McNamara tells the hysterical callers. "They will be mailed to the parents of all Cohasset school children beginning Oct. 1."

The school calendar was an innovation by last year's newly formed Parent School Organization and has proved to be an invaluable aid to the Cohasset family.

The PSO school calendar collates these important school dates and, also, provides a handy listing of any important community services.

The calendar is free to parents of school children, but this year an envelope will be attached to the calendar. McNamara said that donations to the PSO would be greatly appreciated.

The money will be used to help cover calendar expenses and to help finance other PSO supported projects during the year such as the Artist-In-Residence programs. METCO host family network, and the Junior High field day.

Boosters Club elects officers for '83-'84 school year

The Cohasset Boosters Club recently held their first meeting of the '83-'84 school year.

Officers elected were Janet Figueiredo and Rosee Duffy, co-presidents; Robin Suhrbier, vice-president; Agnes Froio, secretary; Ruth Nedrow, treasurer.

The new board expressed appreciation to last year's officers for an excellent job.

Through various fund-raising efforts the Club is able to give scholarships each year, provide three all-sports team banquets, and assist the teams with specific needs as requested by their coaches.

Presently, Izod-type Cohasset shirts in navy or white are available for $12 and the popular V-neck Cohasset sweater for $16.

Please call Robin Suhrbier at 383-0349 to place orders.

Refreshments will be sold by the Boosters at the Country Crafters Fair to be held Sept. 24 and 25 at Cohasset High School.

Happy as a lark is Allison Ludlow on the swings at the high school field.

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home . . . now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Maine & Connecticut potatoes are in

By Lois Martin

A major industry publishes a health booklet periodically and a recent one had the results of a study showing when someone needs a vacation.

Predictably a foul temper and commensurate language are among the signals of a work-worn person. So are dietary extremes, procrastination and the blaming of others for mistakes.

That report inspired thoughts of John McEnroe, Scrooge and Ivan the Terrible, never mind the late John L. Lewis who always terrorized me when he was on front pages of newspapers.

PATCHES

It wasn't, now be fair, because I was turning the air blue in the Mariner office that I vacationed last week. It was instead, my turn. But I had noticed I was answering the phone as if I were the only one on duty in a metropolitan hospital's emergency room.

So I have undergone the balm of a change, a vacation. And in that brief period I visited both old and new acquaintances in fellow New England states. Herein I proffer my report of their continuing grace and good health.

In Connecticut I found a son or rather he found me and drove me to his new home. It was a wonderful switch of roles. For years I'd responded to phone calls to pick him up here or there by some pre-appointed landmark. I turned the tables and it was he who traveled to pick me up.

He's fine, thanks. The apartment contains those familiar pieces of furniture contrasted by a new television set of his own purchase.

He'd come to fetch me from the home of nice folks in Darien, where I visited with their friend and mine. Generous, natural hospitality there, I recommend them as fun hosts, though their sons might not be wild about giving up their room regularly.

And through a Danbury connection, there was an opportunity to harvest Uncle Larry's potatoes. That may carry no clout for you. But for me it was comparable to participating in the Mardi Gras. I fancy myself a country girl. There are probably good reasons I don't have charge of a herd of holsteins, since we can guess who'd start a stampede.

But, boy, do I appreciate a good garden. Uncle Larry has one of those, not to mention a wife, Ollie, who translates the goods into prize winning jars of tomatoes displayed on her kitchen sideboard.

Something else they have is a granddaughter, one of a group and still one of a kind. Her name is Rachel. And I tell you when I saw the pigtailed delight sauntering home from school in her good pink dress, I saw something familiar. Eyes wide, missing nothing, willing to talk, but preferring to study strangers, Rachel conceded she was not in Kindergarten nor the first grade but in "Transition." What a coincidence.

Anyway with the likes of Larry's younger sister, my friend's mother, along with her husband, there were discussions of that town's school system, budgetary considerations, everything. And you know, we all have the same hoopla on our front pages. Same song, different words.

If I found new experiences in Connecticut, I reclaimed old ones in Maine. Brooksville, you may have gathered from earlier comments, is a primal need. The cottage is the headquarters for filling that need. And heading down the hill toward it as the sun set on Penobscot Bay just over the head of Castine, I found the unchanged, unagitated surroundings an old friend. I slept there that night in a bed so comfortable, I felt I'd swiped the best spot in the world.

You'll want to know Aunt Ruth is well into the necessary squares for the current afghan project. Aunt Lote was filling 29 orders for fresh crabmeat. And Gook's general store, which used to be my grandfather's, enjoys a late summer flourish of gas pumping and grocery purchases.

I return to work having seen only a few drivers who indicate their need for a vacation by use of manual/digit signals. I have fresh dug potatoes from two New England states.

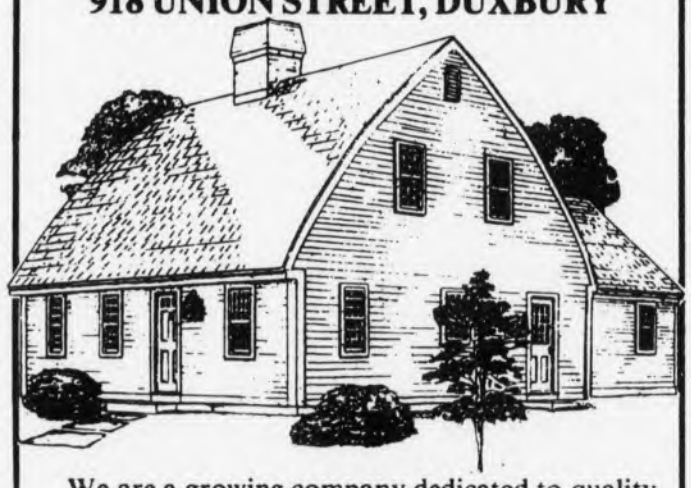
Tahiti surely holds its charm. But for the balm of glad and goodhearted people, I've found my own minor tour for a warm vacation.

An explanation of the 'degree day'

By Laurence B. Stein, Jr.

Over the years we have often heard people say, "Oh, hasn't it been cold this winter," or "This winter has not been as cold as last." Such remarks are based on hazy memory or sometimes wishful thinking. We seem not to have a suitable way of judging our capricious New England weather. It would be very useful to be able to measure "hotness" or "coldness."

Let us introduce the "fuel degree day," or, more commonly, the degree day. It is a unit commonly used by people in the heating business, climatologists, and others interested in putting numbers on long-term temperature variations. The degree day is used chiefly in the heating season and is a measure of how cold it is on any particluar day.



The standard temperature of 65 degrees was chosen as a reference, because heating is ordinarily not required when it is 65 or above. The degree days tell us how much below 65 degrees that day averaged. The number for each day is determined by subtracting the average temperature for the day from 65.

Let us take a typical January day as an example. If the coldest temperature had been 36 degrees at 4 a.m., and the warmest had been 54 at 1 p.m., then the average temperature was (36 plus 54)/2, or 45 degrees. Subtracting this from 65 gives us 20 fuel degree days. In other words, that day averaged 20 degrees below 65.

What good does it do us to have this information? The colder it is, the more fuel is required to heat our homes. A day which averaged 20 degrees below 65 (20 degree days as in our example), requires approximately twice as much fuel as a day which averaged only 10 degrees below 65. (We say approximately because effects of wind and sunshine are not taken into account.)

Degree days may be "added up." That is, if we wish to know how cold a particular week has been, we can add up the degree days for the seven days of the week. That should give us a measure of fuel consumption for the week. The same goes for the 30 days of a month, or, the ultimate, an entire heating season.

S.S. Art Center's fall schedule

The South Shore Art Center's fall schedule of classes for young artists includes something for all ages.

Registrations are now being accepted for the fall term beginning Sept. 26 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, 383-9548. Advanced registration is required for all courses.

Fundamentals for young adults is a foundation program for the high school artist to develop talents.

Fall term I, beginning Oct. 3 on Mondays, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., concentrates on drawing and Fall term II, beginning Nov. 7 at the same time concentrates on painting. Basic skills will be taught while exploring a variety of drawing and painting techniques.

Marjorie Vining's Portfolio Preparation Projects will have students develop specific illustration projects which can be used in a portfolio. The class which begins Sept. 24, Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon, is based on a pre-college course taught by the instructor at the Rhode Island School of Design.

Susan Rodgerson's junior high workshop beginning Sept. 30, on Fridays from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. will explore the use of a variety of materials used in combination with one another. Activities will stress individual expression and explore various art concepts. The course is designed for children 12 to 14 years old.

Other children's offerings are Syma's Clay and Sculpture, for children six to twelve years old, Sept. 26, Mondays, 3:30 to 5 p.m; Lisbeth Wyman's Art Workshop I, ages six to eight years old, Sept. 29, Thursdays, 3:30 to 5 p.m; and Susan Rodgerson's Children's Art Workshop II, nine to 12 years old, Sept. 28, Wednesdays, 3:30 to 5 p.m.

For a copy of the complete fall schedule of courses, workshops, seminars and trips and to register call the Center, 383-9548.

OTHER WORKSHOPS

A workshop for "people who can't draw a straight line," a course dealing with creative anatomy or a two-day seminar in video production work highlight the South Shore Art Center's fall schedule of courses offering some 30 different selections for young and old, artist and non-artist.

The center has a selection of courses in drawing, painting, design, photography, critical studies and children's art for the fall semester commencing Sept. 26. Advanced registration is required for all classes and a copy of the class schedule may be obtained by calling the Center, 383-9548.

For those who have always wanted to learn to draw but have shied away from art courses, Albert Abany will instruct a workshop "for people who can't draw a straight line" beginning Sept. 26 and meet Mondays from noon to 2:30 p.m. The introductory course is for people who thought they could never learn to draw. Abany will cover line, form, proportion, perspective and structure.

Walter Hawk's creative anatomy is designed for the student who wants a better understanding of the human form. Beginning with studies of the skeletal system, Hawk will progress to the form and function of the muscles and their interdependence. Students will work directly from live models. The course begins Sept. 28 and meets Wednesdays from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m.

Other offerings under drawing and painting are Virginia Moore's Basic Drawing for beginning and intermediate levels, Sept. 26, Mondays, 7:30 to 10 p.m; Constance Pratt's Pastel Portrait for advanced artists, Sept. 27, Tuesdays, 1 to 4 p.m; Clement Micarelli's Portraiture for intermediate and advanced levels, Sept. 27, Tuesdays, 7:15 to 10:15 p.m; Mary Ann Patrick's Watercolor Paintings, all levels, Sept. 28, Wednesdays, 9:30 a.m. to noon; David Tandy's Introductory Drawing for beginning and intermediate levels and his Introductory Painting, all levels, Sept. 29, Thursdays, 7:15 to 10:15 p.m.

A two-evening workshop geared to planning personal spaces will meet from 8 to 10 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 4 and Oct. 11. Mary Benson will work with her class on how to plan a particular space either in the home or the office. The first evening will be devoted to a talk on furniture placement, use of textures and colors and the best way to use space. The second session will be "hands on" planning of one area.

John Packard's two-day workshop Intro to Video will meet from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 5 and Nov. 12. The workshop offers an opportunity to learn video production work. Students will learn how to plan, shoot, sound record and assemble a short video piece using portable color cameras and recorders.

The first session will concentrate on equipment use and project planning; equipment and consultation will be available during the week. The final session will be devoted to editing.

Other special workshops beginning in September are Mary Good's The Figure in a Painting, all levels, Sept. 28, Wednesdays, 12:30 to 3 p.m; Joseph Burbank's Experimental Workshop for beginning and intermediate levels, Sept. 28, Wednesdays, 7:30 to 10 p.m; and Eleanor Avakian's Oriental Brush techniques, Sept. 29, Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Burbank's experimental workshop will include instruction in whatever area of drawing and painting a student has a particular interest. Various techniques will be explored with teacher guidance.

A special one day fall and holiday workshop Saturday, Oct. 29 from 10 a.m. to noon will be conducted by Marion Bush. She will show new ideas for wreaths, fall and Christmas gifts, ornaments and house gifts.

The photography courses scheduled for fall are Paul Fortin's Beginning Photography, Sept. 26, Mondays, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m; and John Goldies' Beginning Photography (darkroom) and his Intermediate Photography (darkroom,) both beginning Sept. 29 and meeting Thursdays, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

A survey of painting, sculpture and architecture from pre-history to the Renaissance will be explored in Beverly Stanley's Survey of Art I, starting Sept. 29 on Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The major achievements of each period will be examined with emphasis on the study of art as a record of man and his society. Museum and collection visits will be arranged.

Louise Kalish will lead nine half-day tours to galleries and museums from September to June on the third Thursday of each month. Emphasis will be on contemporary art and places to be visited are in Boston and Cambridge.

Two design classes are offered for the fall term. Louise Kalish's Color and Design, all levels, Sept. 30, Fridays, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and Bill Bell's Calligraphy for beginners, Sept. 26, Mondays, 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Bell's Calligraphy will concentrate on chancery cursive and italic script and will emphasize individual stroke exercises to learn how to make a structurally sound character.

The center's fall open house Sunday, Sept. 18 from to 6 p.m. will give visitors an opportunity to meet instructors, learn more about the courses and register for the classes. Information will also be given out on the many travel opportunities offered by the South Shore Art Center.

Registration may be made by phone and may be charged to either Visa or Mastercard.

Send your children to the right colleges.

Finding the right college for your son or daughter (and then getting in) is harder today than ever before. Where do you start? Parents say our seminar is the best place.

We'll look at the criteria most important in your college selection. We'll show you financial aid options, and how students can best market themselves. Above all, you'll discover the key to success is learning to think the way teachers and admissions people think.

Seminars are small. They're held at the nicest inns and hotels outside Boston. And they're led by the former admissions counselor at Weston High School and Phillips Academy, Andover: Donald Dunbar. For complete information on seminars or individual counseling services, call 617-262-5380, Donald M. Dunbar, Director, School and College Counseling.

Mariner sports

At the Rec Dept.

The Cohasset Recreation Dept. is accepting registrations for a six-week program which will include modeling turns, make-up, grooming, poise and posture, personality improvement and manners.

Two separate classes will be held Wednesdays from 3 to 4:15 p.m. for children 11 to 13 years-old. Thursdays, children from 14 to 17 years-old are invited to enroll in the Town Hall auditorium class.

Classes will be taught by Kathy Chiasson of Scituate, who is a former teacher and model. Mrs. Chiasson has done modeling in the South Shore area for seven years and is a certified modeling instructor.

Registration fee will be $23 per student for six 1¼ hour classes scheduled to begin Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 12 and 13.

To register call the Recreation Dept. office at 383-6791.

Classes will be limited in size. Non-residents will be registered on a space available basis.

Sports roundup

Football

Cohasset football could be a team with a lot of potential once many injuries heal and all players return.

Leone said, "We have the biggest turnout ever this year, but we are still small in number because we have so many injuries."

Seniors captain center Peter Caruso and captain Keith Townsend will return to practice this week. Captain Lee Wilson was elected before he injured his knee so that he will not be able to play.

Leone said, "Out biggest problem is that we were counting on our leaders to go both ways (play offense and defense) and they aren't going either way yet."

Senior Pat Leonard, the fastest runner on the team, has caught the ball well at defensive end. Seniors Chris Colburn, David Barcomb, Junior Mark Lahide and sophomores Rodney Best and Bob Cochery all "look good" said Leone.

Field hockey

The varsity field hockey team lost their first two games to Duxbury and Hanover but they are still working to replace eight open starting positions.

Goalie Lisa Schumaker is the team mainstay. "She kept the score down in the last two games." said coach Gino DiGirolamo.

Cathy Corbett and Jeanie Bailey will co-captain the team this year.

Girls soccer

Girls soccer rolled along to a victory over Hingham 4-3 and Cohasset boy's junior varsity 2-1 last week.

Coach Kennan Startzell said, "This is a young team but things are coming together."

Players this year are: forwards Janet DiGirolamo, Sara Seave and Jill Nedrow, midfielders; Amy Duncombe, Krissy Pompeo, Carla Lucas and Ginger Ralff; fullbacks; are Carol Lord and Tracy Fitzpatric; the sweeper is Joanie Chisholm and the stopper is Tara Stanford; the goalie is Tracy Keating.

Cross country

Julie Hoogeveen shone as the cross country teams bright spot when she crossed the finish line first for the girls against East Bridgewater.

Coach John Mika said, "She is a go-getter." Although the girls do not have a team, Hoogeveen has been elected a co-captain of Cohasset's co-ed team.

Mike Bergenheim and Jim Reillv finished in the top ten of the race. Freshman Scott Fitzsimmons is reported to be one of the team's best runners.

Yacht Club ends season with race

The Cohasset Yacht Club concluded its 1983 racing schedule Sept. 10 with the Chowder Race and awards ceremony.

Chowder Race winners were: Impossible Trophy (210's) — Tom Hamilton; Laser — John Bryant; Sprite Chowder Bowl — Com Crocker; Small Boats — John Bryant; Barron Memorial — Ross Sherbrooke; Rookie Bell — John Manning.

and better
a new approach to single family living

We've had a great many visitors at The Meadows in Hingham since our opening, and we're pleased at their reactions to the spaciousness and detailing of the homes ...and to the very private feeling that has been achieved.

Over and over we hear... "this is just like a single family home...only better!" "The floor plans are great—so functional—and there's no wasted space"... "Your two bedroom home is larger than the three bedroom house I have now!"... "and everything is new: kitchens are fantastic"... "The cathedral ceilings make the rooms seem twice as big"... Everyone is pleased by the unusually shaped swimming pool ... the whirlpool ... the clubhouse and tennis courts. There's no way you can have all of that in the typical one-family home.

"There are people to care for the lawns ... the snow shoveling"... "I like the private courtyards—just big enough to do some creative gardening—but not so large as to be a chore"... "There's much better security here than I've been used to"... "and we still have full basements ... and a two-car garage." "Ownership is just like my old home ... you can mortgage your property, sell it when you want... get the same tax advantages."

The Meadows in Hingham is a wonderful place to live... the country-styled two and three bedroom attached single family homes are located on rolling meadowland covered with wild flowers. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500

Don't smoke? You could save a pack of money on your homeowners insurance.

One of our consumer-minded companies, The Hanover Insurance Company,* believes that homes where all the residents are non-smokers (cigarettes, cigars, or pipes for at least a year) are better fire risks. So they give you a break on your insurance.

It's a discount on your premium that really helps. And if you're a careful homeowner, you may qualify for further discounts.

Ask us about it.

Estate of MARGARET E. HITCHCOCK AKA, BETH HITCHCOCK late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that ELIZABETH ANDERSON of Gibsonia in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be appointed Executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on October 5, 1983.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the seventh day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-three.

THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 190635-T2

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Alf E. Anderson late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first to seventh and final account(s) of Bank of New England and Alf E. Anderson, Jr. as Trustees (the fiduciary) under Article 4, Trust A of the will of said deceased for the benefit of Emmy K. Anderson, et al have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection of said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the twelfth day of October, 1983, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this fourteenth day of September, 1983.

Sign up for CCC's fall programs

There is still time to sign up for the Cohasset Community Center's Fall Program. Twelve week courses begin next week, with workshops scheduled throughout the next few months.

This year, the center would like to draw attention to some new courses offering special expertise, taught by interesting, skilled professionals.

Andrea Kaplan is a model who gives common sense courses in confidence and poise. She concentrates on speech, posture and grooming, and projecting each person's unique assets in the most positive light. Age levels include Grades 4-6 and Grades 7-12. A course in manners and social skills will also be offered to children in Grades K-3.

Several new teen-adult courses are offered.

In addition to the "Exercise for Total Fitness" by Joanne Sheppard, two new exercise programs will begin.

Judith Boyle offers a vigorous "Evening Exercise Program," and Deborah Ketch will lead a "Fitness Program for Pregnant Women" Monday and Wednesday mornings.

"Bicycle Maintenance," "Recreation Riding" and "Fitness Training," by Jeff Mullaley of Cohasset Cycle Sports, teaches students a wide range of cycling maintenance and troubleshooting. This course will be held Thursday evenings.

Laila Roukanakis teaches a knitting class (six weeks) in constructing an Icelandic sweater, Tuesday CPR, taught by Dr. Michael Equi and Linda Farrag, R.N., will be run on a new schedule: Wednesday evenings, Sept. 21 and 28, from 7 to 11 p.m. American Heart Association certificates are awarded upon completion of this eight-hour course.

More students will also be accepted in many of the programs. "Interior Design," "Landscape Design," "Antiques," "Stencilling," "Oriental Rug Making," and "Furniture Refinishing" are courses which will encourage students to express their talents and individuality. Computer courses for various levels are offered, as well as "Beginning Bridge" and "Riding for Adults."

"SAT Preparation" should be valuable for any junior or senior student.

"Cartooning" and "Dungeons and Dragons" can enhance a child's cerative and imaginative capabilities, as "Gymnastics," "Karate," "Jazz," "Ballet," "Creative Movement" and "Bowling" should develop important motor skills and discipline.

Pancake breakfast

The Beechwood Congregational Church Sunday School will hold its annual Rally Day Pancake Breakfast at 9:30 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 25. All students who are interested in joining our Sunday school and their parents are invited to attend.

Sunday school Grades K-8 is held from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Church services begin at 10:45 a.m. Child care is available.

Amateur Gardeners to meet

Members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Sept. 27 at 1 p.m. at the Rockland Trust Community Room to enjoy a slide show of Caribbean flowers. The hostess will be Evelyn Pearson and the co-hostess will be Jean Koopman.

LWV meetings

The League of Women Voters of Cohasset will discuss national security issues Sept. 29 and Oct. 6 at 9:15 a.m. For those unable to attend the morning meetings, evening sessions have been scheduled Sept. 27 and Oct. 4.

A committee led by Sherry Becker will present a brief history of arms control, descriptions of major arms control proposals and possible criteria for judging arms control limitations.

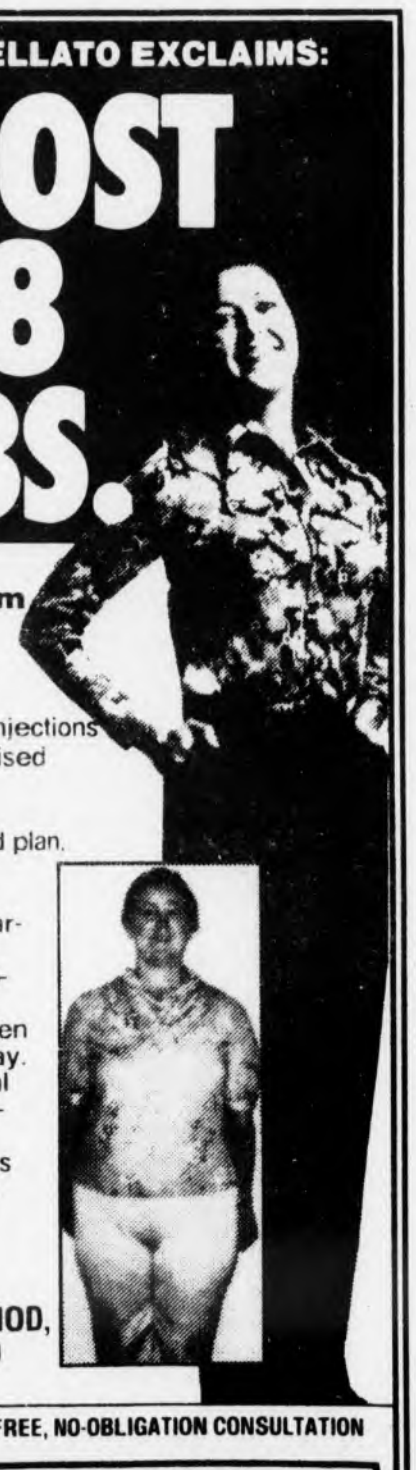
The meetings will be held: Sept. 27, 7:30 at Marie Caristi's, 11 Black Horse Lane (by reservation only;) Sept. 29, 9:15 a.m. at the Unitarian Parish House; Oct. 4, 7:30 p.m. at Debbie Cook's, 281 King St. (by reservation only,) and Oct. 6, 9:15 a.m. at Grace Donohue's, 221 Forest Ave.

Babysitting will be provided at the morning sessions in the Unitarian Parish House at a $2 cost per child.

To make reservations for the evening meetings, please call Nancy Bettenger 383-0173 or Sherry Becker, 383-1971 by the Monday before the evening session.

Morgan Memorial donations

Don't throw out your grocery or shopping bags—Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries desperately needs them!



The agency needs bags for merchandise purchased at Morgie's Goodwill stores.

Cohasset and Scituate residents may donate bags to Goodwill at the new Brockton store, 2 North Main Street (junction of Rte. 27), or at the attended donation trailer in Hanover, at the Hanover Mall, Rtes. 53 and 3.

No other donations can be accepted at Morgie's Goodwill stores—only bags. Other merchandise must be brought to the attended donation trailers.

THE MARINER takes a closer look at popular South Shore Dining Spots

The South Shore area is blessed with many natural, beautiful resources. That's not news to you who enjoy our beautiful beaches, fishing, boating, and many other recreational activities our area has to offer.

But, we are also blessed with some really great places to eat, all within a short distance. On these pages are some of them, by no means all.

We hope you will enjoy a closer look, and save this guide as a reference the next time you treat yourself to dining out.

SINGLE On The South Shore
SUPPLEMENT

A very unique and informative look at the varied life styles of Single Adults on the South Shore

Watch your Mariner

OCTOBER 12 & 13, 1983

This publication is intended to present an informed, articulate reflection of the varied single styles of people who are alone by virtue of being widowed, divorced, separated, or never married.

Research and interviews are underway at the Mariner, and this supplement promises to be a blockbuster!

Topics to be included: alone vs. lonely, handling social pressures, sensuality, where to meet a "nice person," and other informative, sensitive topics. Maybe even a list of the most eligible single men and women on the South Shore.

To our knowledge this is a first for this area, and the interest and response have been overwhelming.

We at the Mariner are still interested in hearing from you, our single readers. All are invited to submit a "Single Perspective," a short essay on any aspect of being single. Contact Lois Martin, Executive Editor, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050 or call 837-5625 — 383-6731.

La Maison de Notre Père

Pembroke Center (Route 14) Pembroke

An elegant French Restaurant where memories are made

Amid the tree-lined streets of rural Pembroke Center rests an old two-story home which has been tastefully redecorated and made into an intimate, elegant French restaurant. If you have ever dined in fine old continental hotels in Europe, Quebec, or on board cruise ships . . . then you will enjoy this unique dining experience even more, for the elegance is only surpassed by the sincerity of this family's hospitality.

La Maison de Notre Pere has been designed for those who like to spend the entire evening in an unrushed, relaxed atmosphere where the diners set the pace for the 8 course meal around breaks in adjoining casual rooms for leisure, relaxation, and conversation. We are the only restaurant that offers you the table as well as the rest of our home for the evening. We offer a private place to escape in the quiet, unhurried atmosphere of candlelight and soft music. Come — partake and allow our home to be yours for the evening.

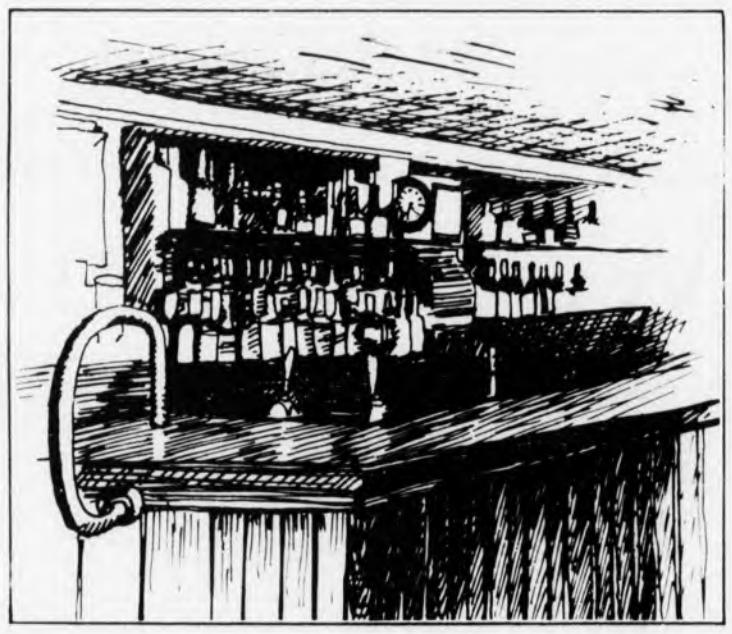
Whoever Heard of a Cozy Landmark?



The Milepost Tavern and Restaurant, a cozy landmark on Duxbury's Route 3A for over a half a century, offers a delicious, and a unique dining experience.

You see, the Milepost has undergone many transformations in the last 50 years, since it was known as Ma Pierce's: "the best location in town for the best food in town." But, the most welcome changes have taken place recently since Bud and Patricia Johnson acquired the restaurant. The Johnsons, Duxbury residents, have created an atmosphere of country charm in an historic setting, enhancing a delicious and creative menu - a welcome change from the ordinary.

The chef at the Milepost is known for creating simple dishes with a flair, and for orchestrating complex entrees with mastery. The bouillabaise combines generous portions of a variety of seafood, including mussels direct from Duxbury Bay. The Veal Piccata is tenderly sauteed and enhanced perfectly with lemon, mushrooms and a touch of something from the vineyards. The regular menu is periodically expanded to include such specialties as Oyster en Casserole, Roast Long Island Duckling La'Orange or Roast Spring Lamb, providing lunch and dinner selections for every taste. Also the "Early dining specials" offer diverse dinners for every budget. The Milepost combines all this with gracious service and warm, intimate surroundings in an historic seacoast town, creating a dining experience you will want to repeat.

This fall the Milepost will tempt you with Sunday Brunch. Choose from typical breakfast combinations as well as Eggs Benedict, Welsh Rarebit, and a variety of quiches. What a delicious way to spend a lazy Sunday - and our cozy fireplace and Bloody Marys are sure to keep away the Autumn chill.

Join us at the Milepost, historic Duxbury's dining landmark, for lunch, brunch, dinner or a quiet cocktail.

Special Town Meeting improves fiscal picture

Now that the Special Town Meeting smoke has cleared, Town Accountant Bill Signorelli has an improved financial picture as he and the Advisory Committee will begin planning the 1984-85 fiscal budget.

The Sept. 20 meeting appropriated from taxation $73,724 which Signorelli says is within the 1983-84 Fiscal Year limit.

Once the old bills ($52,000) are subtracted by the state Bureau of Accounts, Signorelli says the town may have a surplus revenue of $600,000. But he warned the figure may change and is only an estimate.

The cash reserve balance is $100,000 and that account is only used for emergencies.

There may be more good news for the town accounts when 100 percent revaluation is completed.

The town may have an additional $83,000 from additional building growth and construction. Again the $83,000 figure is a predicted estimate from Signorelli.

Fire Dept. rules need negotiations

By Mike Berger

The town must negotiate an entire set of Fire Dept. rules as a result of a state labor board pre-hearing.

The firefighters union had filed an unfair labor practice charge against the town and Fire Chief Martin Dooley for trying to institute 1956 management practices without consulting the union.

The charge concerned the practice of using rules and regulations adopted in 1956 rather than the practice of using the rules and regulations approved in the firefighters contract.

The town is set to renegotiate a new union contract and department rules, said Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

He said at a pre-hearing a state official said there was probable cause to the charge. Attorneys for the town and union agreed the town would negotiate a new set of rules in exchange for the union dropping the suit.

Regarding the department rules and regulations, Lanza said the union cannot negotiate working conditions, hours, wages, fringe benefits and standards of productivity. These, he said, are management rights.

Other developments

Selectmen discussed last week the hours of the fire horn which is used to summon off-duty and call firefighters.

A 30-day experiment will determine how effectively firefighters are summoned between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. Dooley will report back to selectmen.

Dooley shut off the horn two months ago after complaints from residents and the 64-unit elderly housing complex. Firefighters are expected to rely on scanners, CB radios or phone calls.

Dooley or the acting commanding officer has the authority to sound the horn in emergencies.

The chief acknowledged that half of the town's 24 call firefighters have responded to calls through a scanner or through telephone calls.

Ambulance Study Committee

Selectmen were expected to name a five-member study committee to investigate whether the town would be better served by a private ambulance service.

Three of the commmittee seats will be people with experience in medicine or health care and one Fire Dept. employee.

Chief Dooley, will be an ex-officio member but will not have voting power.

The committee will report back to selectmen Feb. 15.

Area health inspectors alarmed about cleaning chemical

State and area health inspectors are alarmed over a hazardous waste liquid which is flowing from a Rte 3A Cohasset stream into a Scituate water protection district.

A mustard colored liquid is flowing from a pipe at the rear of Dwyer's One Stop Cleaners in Cohasset.

The question is if the liquid is coming from the cleaners.

William Cashins of the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering feels the liquid is coming from someplace within the ground.

He added it may have been something which was thrown away on the property and is leaching into the ground.

Robert L. Dwyer, cleaner owner, wasn't available for comment However, he said in another published report the chemical, dichlorethylene, is not coming from his operation because he said the system is a closed loop which does not allow liquids used to drain out.

Cohasset Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos and Scituate Health Agent Walter Walsh are concerned and have written reports to DEQE.

Eliopoulous said the state response has been slow because of the Baird and McGuire hazardous waste problem in Holbrook.

Another problem has been the jurisdiction of the two communities. Cohasset is in Norfolk County and Scituate is in Plymouth County.

The chemical is one of the agents used in dry cleaning. Cashin said the concentration of one part per million was relatively low given the distance the stream travels to reach the Scituate water protection district.

When asked if the chemical was serious, Eliopoulos responded, "The chemical in the brook does not belong there. As for the health impact, that's a question. It depends on the means of exposure."

Eliopoulos was told of the problem when a neighbor of the cleaners noticed a liquid flowing from the pipe. Eliopoulos conducted a test and the state followed up a month later.

Walsh was not available for comment but Eliopoulos said Walsh has been notified and is also concerned about the chemical.

The state has listed the chemical as a hazardous waste contamination.

Cohasset's week . . .

Playground site

It's tentative now but Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said plans are in the works to build a play area on the land once occupied by the Beechwood Fire Station.

Lanza said the area will be leveled for a basketball and volleyball area.

Nearly $1400 from interest and proceeds from the Beechwood Neighborhood Trust Fund established in 1978 and a town appropriation will fund the construction. The proposal is tentatively slated to go before the April, 1984 town meeting.

The Beechwood station was closed two years ago and purchased this year by a Scituate couple who moved it on a trailer to Scituate.

Selectmen Appointments

Selectmen approved the following appointments to town boards recently. They are: Mark Kiley of Aaron River Road to the appeals board; Hubert Vanderlugt of Woodland Drive as an alternate member to the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission and Vivian McCormack and Katherine McGrath to the Council on Aging.

Home opposition

Pleasant Beach Association, a group of citizens on Jerusalem Road, are protesting the first stilt house in Cohasset.

The group is appealing to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and a long legal battle is expected.

The applicant is Donald Staszko of 172 Beach St. who needs several town board approvals before he can construct his home at the intersection of Atlantic Ave and Jerusalem Road.

The issues, said Davenport Crocker of Jerusalem Road, focus on barrier beaches, wave action erosion and flood control of Pleasant Beach, and the pollution impact of a health board approved septic system.

The Conservation Commission recently denied the application because of the Wetlands Protection Act and the instability of the beach.

The commission decided not to challenge the DEQE decision because the town has already spent thousands in litigation costs.

A hearing with DEQE is expected this week.

Dog hearing

Richard Poland told selectmen recently dog owner Robert McClellan allows his dog to wander in Poland's yard.

Selectman chairman Mary Jane McArthur said "The McClellan's dog does not have permission to be on Mr. Poland's property at any time. The town by-law is very explicit: every dog should be permanently restricted."

McArthur added, "If you think that you can control your dog and live within the by-law fine otherwise the town will have to take action."

McClellan's letter read, "Poland dumped dog mess on the (McClellan's) doorstep and car." McClellan said that he saw Poland kick his dog and other dogs.

McArthur said, "We can't deal with cruelty to animals here that is another complaint to be taken elsewhere."

The letter also said, "Mrs. McClellan fell and hurt her back while cleaning up a pile dumped in their driveway."

McArthur said, "This is another legal matter that should be brought elsewhere.

Dog officer Richard Yocum had been called to witness McClellan's complaints of "incessant" barking by the Poland's dog. Yocum said he had answered many of McClellan's calls and never heard the barking.

McArthur concluded that both owners should keep their dogs in their yards.

Assessor Update

In a written release, Brian Wilkin, chairman of the Board of Assessors, has updated the 100 percent revaluation project. He said the appraisal firm has notified the board that a major portion of collection data has been completed. Wilkin said there are some properties (mostly residential) which have not been inspected. Assessors suggest those property owners who have not had their property inspected should call the Assessor's office at 383-1640 no later than Friday, Sept. 30 and to leave their name, address and telephone number. Assessors said they are pleased with the cooperation shown to them and the appraisal firm during the revaluation process and want Cohasset residents to know their cooperation has "greatly contributed to the success of the revaluation efforts."

Bus license request

Jeff Miller a South Shore Bus Tours Inc. representative asked selectmen for a license to run the bus and approve of specific stops in town.

Results of a survey in Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham showed that 85% of over 1,000 boat commuters want more transportation to commuter boats.

Marshfield already granted South Shore Bus Tours Inc. to operate. Miller will soon ask Hingham and Scituate for local licenses.

Selectman Clifford Mitman said, "This bus company is a terrific idea but I have problems with the three proposed stops and parking for commuters."

Selectman Frank England said, "I would think a stop at the corner of Rte. 3A and King St. would be dangerous."

Miller said, "We hope that the police chief and the captain will advise us on which stops will be safe."

Miller's company is ready to start as soon as local licenses are approved. "I have busses ready to go and if in two days we need another bus it will be there."

England said, "I think the license should be for a specified time and not granted indefinitely" Mitman agreed, "Until bus stops are approved the license should be given temporarily."

Chamber meeting draws enthusiastic response

The revived Cohasset Chamber of Commerce met last week to discuss goals and objectives, and by reports was a "successful reality."

The meeting drew Town Counsel Richard Henderson and John Slater who volunteered their help.

A nominating committee to elect six board members will be held at the next Chamber meeting Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 5:30 p.m. at the Cohasset-By-the-Sea Motor Inn.

Guest speakers at the meeting were Warren Noble of Nobles Camera Shop, Hingham, and Terry Fancher, Development Manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

They informed the business community how a chamber is formed and how it will benefit both the town and community.

Other guests at the meeting were Richard Henderson, and John Slater of the Thaxter, Beckworth and Henderson law firm. They were greatly impressed by the turnout and volunteered their legal services to the chamber.

The meeting was held in the Smith Room at Hugo's Restaurant.

Noble told how a Hingham group got motivated enough to forge ahead and become a well respected and successful group.

He is past president of the Hingham Merchants Association and vice president of the Community Development program for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

He concluded his talk by explaining the valuable resources the South Shore Chamber has to offer the Cohasset Chamber as an organized group.

Fancher, Community Development manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce spoke of the various programs the South Shore Chamber has going — from professional lobbying to programs involving the students in the schools.

The meeting ended by Frank Smith of Flemings thanking the guests for their support and thanking the people of the Steering Committee who were helpful in making the meeting possible.

Also thanked were Dan Leahy of Hugo's for sponsoring the meeting and donating the wine and cheese, Mrs. Roy of Cohasset-By-the-Sea for her support and the use of her office equipment, Frank Smith and Mandy Burgoon for the initiative and the time needed to start the organization, and Mr. and Mrs. Wood of Peterson Real Estate and Insurance, Mr and Mrs. Straley of Cards and Shards, Mrs. Travette of Carousel Antiques for their considerable energies and support.

The Chamber's Steering Committee message is to remind all business, "If we didn't reach you, and you missed our first meeting, we would like to extend an invitation for you to join us on Oct. 26 at 5:30 p.m., at Cohasset-By-the-Sea Motor Inn. If there is anything you would like to know, contact Mandy Burgoon at Carousel Antiques, 383-6513 or Frank Smith at Flemings, 383-0684.

Two new businesses which have recently opened in Cohasset are: the Bavaria Shop, 83 S. Main St. and Sea 'N Cheese, Cushing Plaza, Rte. 3A.

Town debt

The Bank of Boston recently published the "Massachusetts Municipal Data Base" and it includes a town by town survey of total debt, unfunded pension liability and a bond rating by Moody's Investor Services." Cohasset , according to the survey has an "A" rating, fourth highest in nine categories, a total debt of $3,679,000 and unfunded pension liability of $4,426,000.

Correction

Last week the Mariner reported health board members and Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos said they do not want Landfill Supervisor Joe Laugelle to leave the landfill. It should have said Laugelle should not leave the landfill without first notifying the bulldozer operator. This would require the operator to leave the machine and go to the bin area.

Fire Dept. rules need negotiations

The following report from the Marshfield Mariner and written by Judy Cooper details private ambulance service there.

By Judith Denzer Cooper

Selectmen will enter into negotiations with Shore Ambulance Company of Rockland to establish private ambulance service for Marshfield by Nov. 1.

According to a proposal presented by Town Administrator Richard Agnew and Police Captain William Sullivan, Shore will provide the town with two class-one ambulances. They will also supply trained, certified emergency medical technicians (EMTs) to operate them. There will be one ambulance on duty 24 hours a day with a second ambulance in town during the daytime.

Shore will cover all emergency trips to either South Shore or Jordan Hospital and will also provide private non-emergency service. They will bill all customers at the standard third party rate and they will accept Blue Cross, Medicare, Medicaid and other group insurance payments.

Selectmen announced that removing the ambulance service from regular police duties would not call for any reductions in the police force. Also, all certified EMTs on the force would continue to receive their salary differential. Sullivan pointed out that police officers still need the special EMT training as they are first responders in all cases.

At one time the Marshfield police force numbered 58 officers. The present force has positions for 45 men and women. The reductions occurred as budget restraints were applied. The private ambulance service will mean more police "on the street" said Sullivan. It will allow the police department to devote its energy to police work.

Paul Corkery, who headed the campaign for the purchase of the present town ambulance, said that he wished the town could continue to have police ambulance service but he recognized that a private service was the only practical financial solution.

Corkery said he would like to speak to the Selectmen about a payment plan used in Wareham. Under this system every household is asked to pay $25 a year for ambulance service. The Selectmen said they would appreciate Corkery's input as the one year trial is completed and a permanent contract with the private company is established.

The town wil continue to maintain its four year old ambulance as a back-up for the single night-time Shore ambulance. There is also a suggestion for a volunteer group of EMTs to operate the town ambulance for these back-up calls. Agnew said details for the volunteers would be worked out after the ambulance contract is signed.

The private ambulance service will be under the direction of the police department. And the town will still provide the communication link to the public. Emergency calls will still come to the 911 telephone number.

There were four proposals sent to the town by private ambulance companies. Both Shore and Metro ambulance offered a no cost contract. Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance and Bay State Ambulance proposed a fee of $100,000 to $150,000 per year. Agnew and Sullivan agreed that the Shore proposal looked best for Marshfield.

Single supplement deadline draws near

Writers for "Single on the South Shore," the Mariner's Oct. 12 special supplement, are almost down to the wire.

There are though, several more important contacts we want to include in the issue. We have talked with hundreds of single men and women. Interviews are nearly complete, not quite.

We would like to talk with: people who have experiences with dating services (your privacy will be maintained); men and women who are absolutely nifty, who are strong achievers and who happen to be single; people who have verified statistics of any kind, dealing with the single population.

Anyone who meets the above qualifications or knows someone who does is asked to call or write Lois Martin, executive editor, Mariner Newspapers, Box 682, Marshfield 02050, 837-5625 or 383-6731...this week.

People have readily contributed personal expression of their lifestyle in interviews, some of which are to be published without use of their names. We know from our preparation that this is the first time such an effort has been made by a weekly newspaper. Further, this is expected to be the best read supplement/issue ever published. Married people have a natural curiosity about the single style. And...for once singles get to read about themselves.

'Meats and Sweets' no longer in Village

"Meats and Sweets," will not move to Cohasset, said the owner of Ebenezers's a new ice cream shop in North Scituate.

Atty. John Whitten had received an approval from the Cohasset Sewer Commission to locate a store in Cohasset Village, in the vacant and former shoe store on South Main street.

This prompted many merchants who had earlier applied for sewer permits to protest against commissioners.

Whitten said the cost of the Cohasset location renovation and special plumbing costs were expensive. He is negotiating a lease with a North Scituate landlord for across the street from his 788 County Way location. This location formerly housed the Bound Brook Hardware Store.

Another part of the decision was the proximity of the Scituate store to Cohasset villages, a distance of a mile-and a half.

Whether Whitten will expand his store to across the street will depend on the lease and also on a site plan with the Scituate Planning Board.

If the gourment shop or delicatessen becomes a reality, Whitten is planning delicatessen meats and cheeses and party platters. A fruit and green salad bar are also being considered.

Happy birthday to Sean Stanford of Cohasset

10th Cong. Council wants Studds out

By Lois Martin

A grass roots but experienced dozen people are organizing a political action committee to provide concentrated clout for a Republican candidate to oppose U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds next fall.

Called the 10th Congressional Council, the steering committee meets in Hyannis tonight to take a straw poll to gauge the Republican strength for the upcoming election. That starts at 8 p.m. at the Sheraton-Regal Inn and will embody voters from Plymouth and Bristol Counties as well as from the Cape and the Islands.

Sarah Young of Scituate is a prime organizer in the group, which was originally billed as the Southeastern Alliance Political Action Committee (SEAPAC). Ted Pratt, a Selectman from Marion is chairman, pro temps.

The council has bi-partisan backing for, as yet, an unnamed Republican candidate to oppose Studds.

"We finally realized the seat can be ours," said Young. "Studds is vulnerable. Whether or not he decides to run isn't the issue. The Primary will take care of that."

Young says the steering committee is made up of seasoned workers of former campaigns. She worked for Reagan-Bush ticket and for Jack Conway who unsuccessfully opposed Studds last year.

"The intent is not to go out and find a candidate," she said, "and it is not to manage a candidate. The intent is to provide a ready-made organization for the candidate of our choice."

The council has not yet set its own guidelines for picking its Republican candidate. The straw poll tonight is to serve as an indicator of where Republican strength is for a match against Studds should he decide to run.

As for Studds representation, Young said, "He's done an okay job. He's a loner and he's taken credit for things he hasn't actually done. But he has a way of persuading people."

Asked what work Studds has received credit for that others did, she said it was Hastings Keith who formed the 200 mile limit legislation along with the California representative Magnuson. "Studds took it and ran with it," she said. "No one talks about his spending."

The council organizers have contacted state and local Republican officials in the process of organizing. They met first in August and will hold monthly meetings for the general council with the steering committee in session between those times. Right now the group is getting money by "passing the hat for $2 a person," or more if that's offered.

Young, a 24 year-old graduate of Nasson College in Maine, said the censure of Studds for the homosexual affair he confessed to having had 10 years ago was "despicable. What he did was reprehensible and he's arrogant."

"How effective can he be now?" she asked. "He lost a lot of his power. If his colleagues don't respect him, how will he represent constituents ?"

"This," she said, "is our opportunity to replace Studds and for the Republicans to get back the seat we lost in 1972."

Dogs attack Summer Street sheep

Animal control agents are looking for dogs who have attacked sheep in the past few weeks on Summer Street, Norwell, near the Cohasset and Scituate lines.

Several weeks ago, Rick Merritt lost four sheep from his home at 342 Summer St. He and his veterinarian suspect that dogs killed the animals.

On Sunday, Nancy Latady of 302 Summer St. lost a five month-old, 70-pound ram to a dog which she saw leaving the pen. She described the dog as "a yellow mutt with confirmation features, like the head, tail and back, that looked like a German Shepherd." She said residents in the Summer Street area should be aware the dog is around "because there are a lot of other animals on this street."

She said the dog attacked the ram and tore the skin and muscles from its back leg. The animal was able to stand up after the attack, Latady said, but had to be put down because it could never use that leg again. She said she called a friend in to shoot the animal, one of eight sheep she has.

Latady said shepherds and huskies are "natural killers and should be kept in control at all times." Breeders will deny that trait in their dogs, she said, "but it's true." She said people think their own dogs are wonderful "but on the loose, they're not."

She said the dog crawled under the fence and went across the street toward Scituate after attacking the ram. She suggested that residents of that end Scituate and Cohasset should also be aware that such a dog is on the loose. Anyone who can identify the yellow dog is asked to call the Norwell Animal Control Officer at 659-7992 or Latady at 545-1076.

Historical Society to close museums for the year

The Cohasset Historical Society will close its three museums at Cohasset Center for the remainder of the year Friday, September 30.

The Maritime Museum, Capt. John Wilson House and Independence Gown Museum will shut their doors until next year's summer season, beginning June of 1984.

The Maritime Museum, once the Bates' family ship chandlery, houses a unique collection of artifacts from Cohasset's seafaring days as well as a general collection of early Cohasset historical items.

The Capt. Wilson house contains antique furnishings, representative of a typical early 19th century home, collected from the town's early houses. The Independence Gown Museum displays 19th and early 20th century costumes, gowns and accessories.

For the remainder of this season the three buildings will be open each afternoon, excluding Monday, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The curator will attend to guide visitors through each museum. After-season tours may be arranged by calling the society at 383-0773 or 383-6930 and can be pre-scheduled at convenient times.

Admission to the museums is 75 cents for adults or $1.50 for all three buildings and 25 cents for children, six to 12 years-old.

☐Scott F. MacKinnon, son of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. William MacKinnon of 34 Arrowwood St., and a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School, has been accepted to the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester for September of 1984.

Scott has maintained Dean's List status all through college at University of Mass. and has been accepted to the Medical School as an "early decision" candidate.

☐The Girls High School Association of Boston will hold its 131st annual luncheon meeting Saturday, Oct. 22 at 11 a.m. at The Great Hall of the Quincy Market at Faneuil Hall Marketplace in Boston. A total of $14,500 in scholarships was given this year to 10 selected graduates of Boston. Girls' High, the oldest vocational school for young women in the nation, closed its door in 1981 but the tradition of alumni gatherings will continue. Some 2,500 invitations have been sent out to graduates of the South End of Boston school. Members of the 50th year class are urged to contact Mrs. Blanche (Chandler) Thompson at 56 Oak St., Box 207, Cohasset, 383-0518.

☐A highlight of the week-long activities of the 1983 Marshfield Fair 4-H Show was the Annual Awards Night. Special awards were presented to various exhibitors from the area. Alix Ash of Cohasset won the champion dairy goat award. Ash also placed second in the Diary Goat Sweepstakes.

☐A mixture of fabrics, flowers, fruit, antiques and bric-a-brac, wallcovering and the like, will be blended into an exciting array of design for the upcoming Oct. 30, 1983, March of Dimes benefit Third Annual Gourmet Gala.

This year's gala will feature the appearances of a number of local and national celebrities and celebrity chefs, icluding Richard Herd of the new ABC television program "T.J. Hooker" and Sara Edwards of NBC's "Evening Magazine."

Twelve talented greater Boston interior designers have been selected to create attractive and innovative decor for each cooking station. Each designer will incorporate the Gala's theme, "cranberries and apples" into their design work.

Also serving as Gourmet Gala designers will be Marie Johnston of Johnston Interiors in Cohasset.

Persons wishing an invitation to the Third Annual Gourmet Gala, to be held at the Copley Plaza Hotel, should call the March of Dimes, 329-1360, or write the March of Dimes, 865 Providence Highway, Dedham, MA 02026.

☐Marilyn Adams of Cohasset has joined the Cohasset office of Gallery 360, Gallery of Homes as a sales associate. She will be involved in residential sales and listings for the South Shore real estate firm, according to Thomas H. Hamilton, principal of the Cohasset division of Gallery 360.

Adams formerly owned and operated a puppet and craft business, featuring handcrafted pinatas at Quincy Market Place, and fulfilled commissions for local retailers.

She is repeating her popular course on the art of pinata making, a Mexican-style gift-bearing mobile, at the Cohasset Community Center this fall.

She completed the Gallery of Homes Successful Practices and Advanced Listing courses.

A Martha's Vineyard native, Adams held positions as assistant research analyst and administrative assistance for New York City investment and securities firms prior to her return to Massachusetts.

Her education includes studies at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Quincy Junior College, and psychology and sociology seminars at Radcliffe.

A Cohasset resident for 11 years, Adams has been involved in a number of civic organizations, including the Junior League. She served as Chairperson of the Board of Deacons of the Cohasset Congregational Church and participated in early fundraising and re-organizational efforts of the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School. She resides with her family — Douglas (Yeager) 21, Abby 13, Willy 9, and Christopher 7 — on North Main Street.

Gallery 360, Gallery of homes provides commercial and residential real estate services through its 10 offices on the South Shore; regional headquarters are in Marshfield.

☐It is scout time in Cohasset. Fall means that the girls and boys get together for their troop meetings, with all sorts of community events planned. The Boy Scouts made a grand opening effort by holding a car wash to benefit the Nardo family!

The girl scouts began last week, and they are in need of uniforms. Those who either own, or know of an old girl scout uniform, pass it on! Bring it to troop meeting or bring it to Cohasset Village Real Estate office between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. (See Ellen Watson.)

Louise Smullen is a leader again this year. Talk about dedication. The Junior Troop will meet every Monday at the Congregational Church for grades 4 to 6.

☐Lillian Pierce had a real surprise in store for her last week. Forty of her coworkers planned a combination surprise party for her, a real celebration! Lillian turned 70 years old and began her 50th year working at Hugo's. Dan Leahy, owner of Hugo's was a big part of the surprise as he "kept Lillian in the dark" until the party was organized. Lillian was truly surprised for the first time in the fifty years of working there! She is now the proud owner of a lovely new watch and a "Nantasket Handbag," with the scrimshaw done by one of her fellow workers.

☐Janet Protulis had a real surprise for her husband, Robert, on his birthday . . . she gave birth to their son, Robert Jr! Not only was he born on Dad's birthday, he was named after his father and even looks just like him. Congratulations to the Protulis family.

☐While you are out for your foliage drive this fall, be sure to stop at Cohasset's own little complex on Rte. 3A. Bound Brook Artisans, Bowman and Co., and The Country House are included in the building across the street from Highway Motors. Antiques, clothing and crafts are all there. Look for the cart full of mums out front, then stop in!

☐Rich Evans was home for the weekend.

Junior League to sponsor Very Very Bazaar Bazaar

South Shore Junior League members will be joining their fellow members from all over the Boston area next month to sponsor the Junior League's Very Very Bazaar Bazaar at the Cyclorama in Boston.

From Hingham Kathy Norman, Suzy Cummings, Gretchen Condon and JoAnn Mitchell will be working on the three-day bazaar that opens with a preview party Tuesday, October 4. Judy Mittleman from Norwell and Linda Henderson from Cohasset are also assisting in the effort that will benefit both the Community Program Trust of the Junior League and the Children's Museum.

Co-sponsors of the event at the Cyclorama at the Boston Center for the Arts, 539 Tremont St., Boston, are the Associates of the Children's Museum.

After the preview party on October 4, shopping days are Wednesday, October 5 and Thursday, October 6, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Friday, October 7, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets are $4 pre-sale and $5 at the door. Pre-sale tickets can be obtained by check or money order and sent with a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Junior League of Boston, 117 Newbury St., Boston 02116 by September 30.

But those are just the bare bones of what will be a very exciting way to get a head start on holiday shopping in the midst of a collection of unique gifts and displays.

Retailers who will be displaying include:

Flights of Fancy, from the Hamilton Collection in Springfield. Buy a birdcage modeled after an historic building or have one built to match your house.

Robert Seamans Antique Prints of Rehoboth, Del. Find something different to put on the wall of dining room or den from their collection of antique prints, maps and paintings.

Elain Glassman Stationery of Washington, D.C. offers a complete line of fine stationery and correspondence accessories. Personalized stationery has been in the news lately, after all.

Creative Critters from Montchanin Mills, Del. has needlepoint never seen before, together with very special ceramic jewelry.

Lee Collins of Shaker Heights, Ohio, includes fine wearables including classic appliqued cashmere sweaters, elegant lingerie and hand-knit layette and baby items.

Hannah Robinson Collection from Wayland has custom-made clothing and accessories with an imaginative touch.

Mohegan, Inc. of Newtonville will sell imported blankets from around the world, featuring natural fibers and spectacular designs.

The Trunk Line of Longmeadow lives up to its name with a line of decorative antique trunks, refurbished and handpainted with sporting scenes and floral patterns. Spice up a living room or bedroom with one.

Chamber revival

There's some positive news to report lately and that's from the Cohasset business section. And we do mean all of Cohasset.

Merchants are reviving the former Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and that can mean only good news for Cohasset.

The attitude of Rte 3A versus the Village can't exist anymore. Cohasset needs to be promoted and any division between the merchants based on history and past practice needs to be healed.

From reading the accounts of the first chamber meeting at Hugo's, some positive and exciting results occurred.

It was good to see Town Counsel Richard Henderson and John Slater volunteer their legal expertise for the chamber.

Now what's needed is support from the selectmen, other "town fathers" and civic groups.

Good news will abound when people cast aside differences and work together. Applause for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. The group is sorely needed.

Studds defense?

It is disappointing if not unpalatable, that a trust fund is established to allow people to contribute toward paying the attorneys' fees incurred on behalf of U.S Congressman Studds.

Rep. Studds has the approval of the Federal Elections Commission to establish the fund. And it is to his credit that he has said he will make known the names and amounts of contributors, though he is not required to do so.

Any of us apparently has the right to ask for and accept money to pay for legal battles. Studds shares that privilege.

But it is no privilege for a constituency to chip in for attorneys who had to defend the Congressman on charges of a homosexual affair with a Congressional page.

Mr. Studds is not a wealthy man. But the action for which he met verbal comeuppance and loss of clout in Congress was based on a choice he made which was clearly a threat to his position and to his pocketbook. Ten years ago or now it would be cataclysmically contrary to public trust.

That aside, done, commented on in full many times and places, there is only the disappointment, not that he is financially pressed, but that the fund is necessary. It hardly competes with more familiar community causes for a library, for Dwyer Farm or donations for a child's medical care.

When pets have the children

By Claire McDonough

"It's one thing when the children have pets," the Dragon observed. "It's quite something else when the pets have children."

We were looking at the four adult cats, the Belgian shepherd, the poodle, and the type of dog charitably referred to in notices from dog pounds as a "shepherd mix," all of whom now share our home.

"Well," I asked, "which ones do you want to get rid of? How about your poodle?"

He fixed me with a basilisk stare. "I'm going to pretend I didn't hear that. Why not that one?" He pointed.

"That's Tanya's cat, Claws. It could be traumatic if anything happened to her pet."

"How about my trauma?" he demanded. "And anyway, what good is Claws to Tanya? She lives in Weymouth and he lives with us."

"They don't allow pets in Gaslight Village," I explained reasonably. "And Tanya can play with Claws when she comes to visit us."

"That's a clever grandmother's ploy to get them to visit more often. What about that cat?"

"Honey," I began, "ever since Larry moved out I've been worried that he isn't eating properly. If he comes home once a week to see Athena, I can feed him a good meal."

He sighed. "A clever mother's ploy."

"How about Borameer?" I asked.

"Get rid of Pat's dog? I couldn't do that to him," he admitted. "Besides, he has such appealing brown eyes. The dog, not Pat," he said.

"I know we have to keep Flip," he went on. "She's Skipper's dog. But why did we ever get her in the first place?"

"Don't you remember? Helen Gray brought her over and said if she didn't find a home that day the dog's time was up. She said Flip was much too nice a dog to have put to sleep and we agreed."

"Right. How about the gray cat?"

"You wouldn't!" I gasped. "That's Brieda's cat, Cat. And anyway, there's no danger that he'll have kittens."

"How about Roxanne?"

"She's old," the Dragon said firmly. "She can't last much longer anyway. Furthermore," he added sheepishly, "I like that cat."

We looked at each other. "It seems hopeless," he acknowledged.

"Never mind," I told him. "It could be worse. What if we still had the four kittens?"

He shuddered. "How did you get rid of them?"

"Easy. I took them to the Democratic Town Committee yard sale and told everyone they were all named Kitty."

Town Meeting attendance critical

Letter

To the Editor:

Our recent Town Meeting was called to order over a half hour later than the advertised time for the same reason that has plagued our Town Meeting for years—lack of a quorum of at least 200 voters. Attendance at and participation in a local Town Meeting is not only a right of every citizen—it is a privilege! How many times do we hear different citizens complain about this expenditure, or that policy change which has been decided at a Town Meeting?

Yet, more often than not, these are the very same people who refuse to take the time to spend a few hours to make the very decisions that they complain so much about. For shame!!

If these people can't or won't make the time to participate in the implementation of the Open Town Meeting process of government, then I feel that they have voluntarily surrendered their right to complain about decisions made at these meetings.

What was most upsetting about the attendance at Tuesday's meetings was the mass exodus of at least one-half of the 319 people who did make the effort to attend, immediately following the vote on Article 12 which addressed the highly controversial sewer question.

The very next article for consideration was about the anonymous gift of $10,000.00 to estahblish an athletic scholarship in honor of William Ripley, Jr.

It was a fitting and long overdue tribute to a wonderful man who has given so much of himself to the town over these many years. Mr. Ripley was in attendance and was visibly pleased, both by the gift and the reading of the resolution honoring his many years of service to the town.

As pleasant as this presentation was, it must have been disheartening to Mr. Ripley to see all those people walk out—indeed even as the Article was being read. There were only four questions left for consideration, and one of them had already been publicized as being postponed. What would it have cost for those people to spend another few minutes at the meeting, instead of walking out in the middle of the tribute to this fine gentleman?

As it is up to the discretion of the Board of Selectmen to decide the order in which the articles appear on the warrant, perhaps it would be a good idea to place any controversial articles at the end of the warrant.

Maybe it would prevent "special interest groups" from leaving as soon as "their"article has been acted on. Each and every article appearing on a warrant is important, not only those serving a particluar interest.

Yours very truly,
Patricia Litchfield

State DEQE responds to sewer issue

(Here is a letter sent to town officials from the State regarding the sewer issue. Ed. Note.)
Dear Mr. DeSantis: (Charles DeSantis, Sewer Commission Chairman)

The Division of Water Pollution Control, in response to your request, has reviewed the "Preliminary Study of Alternatives to Current Facilities Plan for Wastewater Management — Cohasset, Massachusetts" prepared by Ward Engineering Associates (WEA).

This report has been supplemented by additional information and by investigations in Cohasset and Hull with DEQE personnel Sept. 19.

Our review concentrated on three areas: on-site rehabilitation, connection to Hull, and expansion of the existing Cohasset treatment plant. Our comments are as follows:

ON-SITE REHABILITATION

Due to the adverse soil conditions and site constraints in Cohasset, major variances of Title 5, the State Environmental Code, would be required, such as:

— distance between leaching system and surface water supplies or tributaries; — distance between bottom of leaching system and seasonally high groundwater, particularly in areas of extensive ledge;

— slope requirements; and

— percolation rate.

Even though under certain conditions minor variances, such as setbacks from property lines or cellar walls, have been allowed in the past in isolated instances, the protection of public health and the need to provide sound environmental solutions preclude the issuance of the above described variances in Cohasset (minor variances in the outlying areas of Cohasset may be viable alternatives).

EXISTING TREATMENT PLANT EXPANSION

The report evaluates the possibility of expanding the existing 0.072 MGD treatment plant at James Brook to approximately 0.250 MGD in order to service the proposed Phase I area. The Division will not approve this option for several reasons:

— Expansion at the existing site would require the filling and permanent destruction of additional saltmarsh. This would be in direct contravention of Mass. General Law Chapter 131 section 40, and Executive Order No. 1190, May 1977.

Additionally, the US Fish and Wildlife Service has expressed opposition to siting facilities in wetlands. It should be noted that the recommended alternative in the approved facilities plan will not involve the destruction of significant wetlands, since any temporary disruption due to construction will be mitigated by restoration.

— Due to low flows in James Brook and the consequent lack of assimilative capacity, an ocean outfall off Pleasant Beach would be necessary if the treatment plant were expanded. The additional impacts of a freshwater discharge into a saltwater body such as Cohasset Cove, particularly on lobster, also mandates the elimination of the existing discharge point.

HULL CONNECTION

The report concludes that if public sewerage is required, then a regional sewer connection with the Town of Hull is the cost-effective solution. However, the Division cannot approve a Hull connection for the following reasons:

— Although the Hull wastewater treatment plant, which was designed for 3 MGD, currently has an average flow of 1 MGD, the flow increases sharply during high groundwater/storm periods. In particular, inflow is a serious problem. Surcharge conditions have occurred in both the influent and effluent pumping stations to the treatment plant and in the collection system; these conditons have been acknowledged by Hull in the past. Additional flow from Cohasset will exacerbate this situation.

— Only approximately 30 percent of those users who have access to the Hull collection system are actually connected. Therefore, even if the collection system is not expanded, flows to the Hull plant will increase as additional users connect.

— DWPC and EPA have previously funded a rehabilitation program in Hull to remove sources of infiltration and inflow. This work has not been successful in significantly abating the extraneous flows within the system. It is our opinion that the effectiveness of any further rehabilitation is questionable.

Therefore, it is the opinion of this office that the alternatives proposed in the preliminary engineering report are not approvable. The Division will not fund any further studies. The town must proceed with the recommended plan as contained in the approved Metcalf and Eddy Facilities Plan. If the town does not immediately begin to implement the approved plan but instead chooses to conduct further studies and thereby continue with its NPDES Permit violations, the town's action will be considered as further grounds for contempt by the Attorney General's Office.

Very truly yours,
Thomas C. McMahon

Murray's memos

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

A bill has been signed into law designed to protect the privacy of sexual assault victims and encourage them to bring their assailants to justice.

This measure, a priority of the Massachusetts Caucus of Women Legislators, protects victims from unnecessary humilitation and embarrassment by prohibiting the introduction of the victim's past sexual history into the court trial. Such a protection already exists for a charge of rape, and must be extended to cover victims of sexual assault.

The nature of the plea bargaining system often results in many alleged rapists being charged with a crime other than rape, such as indecent assault and battery. Further, some sexual assaults are not technically defined as rape.

The new law assures the protection of sexual assault victims by expanding the Rape Shield Law to include the crimes of indecent assault and battery on an adult or child.

Statistics indicate that a rape occurs every six minutes; the FBI reports that rape is the fastest growing and least reported violent crime. Over 15,000 Massachusetts residents will be raped this year. The victims are people we know - our mothers, daughters, sisters, friends and neighbors.

Historically, the Massachusetts Caucus of Women Legislators has worked diligently to assist rape victims. The Caucus was instrumental in passage of the 1980 Rape Staircasing Law which streamlined a classification system for the crime of rape, and for the unprecedented inclusion of $10,000 in the FY'84 budget for services to assist victims of sexual assault.

The Women's Legislative Caucus, composed of twenty-one women in the House, four women in the Senate and twenty male legislators is actively pursuing passage of a further measure to protect the privacy of sexual assault victims. H. 4237 - An Act Amending the Law Relative To Privileged Communications, is presently in the House Ways and Means Committee. It exempts rape crisis counselors from testifying (or having their records subpoenaed) in court to anything that has been said in counseling sessions with a victim of sexual assault.

Rape victims need immediate therapeutic intervention to mitigate the devastating effects of rape.

Evidence demonstrates that trust and confidentiality are essential for the sense of security and free flow of information crucial to a rape victim's recovery. Passage of H. 4237 will insure rape victims of the absolute confidentiality necessary for their recovery.

We commend the Governor and the legislature for their support of expansion of the Rape Shield Law to victims of sexual assault. I have urged them to continue their demonstration of concern for rape victims by supporting H. 4237.

Our mutual goal is to provide for the protection of our citizens; we must continue to look seriously at improving the abysmal 15 percent conviction rape for rapists. Assistance to and support of rape victims are essential ingredients in combating the incidence of rape. State leaders have a responsibility to assist rape victims and encourage them to report their attack and follow through in court. I note that the new law and passage of the pending legislation, H. 4237, will help create a climate where victims will pursue their attackers in court.

Commission draws praise

To the Editor:

On a number of occasions I've heard critical comments concerning the Cohasset Conservation Commission. Some believe that the Commission is too rigid in the discharge of its duties. I personally had occasion to request a permit from the Commission to replace a water pipe which passed through protected wetland. Upon being notified that the pipe which was to be replaced was the main water supply to my home, the Commission moved as quickly as possible through the various stages of the process mandated by the governing statutes.

In addition, the Commissioners themselves at the public hearing on the request provided invaluable information and suggestions as to how the construction project itself could be done on a basis that was advantageous to me and less disruptive to the marsh. The chairman at the time (Robert Maki) and the current chairman (John Hubbard) were exceptionally helpful.

Evening Magazine, Channel 4, aired Boston's official theme and theme song, "Boston, the Only Place For Me," Sept. 28. The big band swing song is a love Boston theme rather than an historic landmark theme. The reason, says writer, Rik Tinory, a Boston native and now Cohasset resident, is because the song is aimed for national exposure. A lyric about historic landmarks is much too regional. Tinory not only composed the song but performed it. Evening Magazine filmed the show on location in Tinory's Cohasset studio.

Deadlines approach for Art Center trips

Deadlines are approaching rapidly to register for the South Shore Art Center's trips to the Berkshires, New York City at Christmastime and Mexico in January.

Registrations along with deposits are due in to Cerel's Travel in Natick by the end of September. The Center, 103 Ripley Road, has joined in with other museums and art centers to sponsor these trips for the members.

The Berkshires fall foliage trip comes Oct. 22 and 23 and the cost is $125 to $144 depending on the type of accomodation. Co-sponsoring this two-day trip with the Center is the Brookline and Newton Art Centers.

The motorcoach tour through the Berkshires includes stops at the Clark Art Museum, the Bennington Museum, the Great Barrington Pottery and Chesterwood, the estate of sculptor Daniel Chester French.

The two-day art and theater trip to New York City is for Dec. 10 and 11 and costs range from $172 to $204 depending on type of accomodation.

Co-sponsoring this trip with the Center is the Boston Center for Adult Eduction and the Brookline Art Center.

Highlights of the Christmastime trip to New York are tickets to Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs," a visit to the Metropolitan Museum of Art to view its Christmas tree display, a stop at the new Fulton Market at South Street Seaport and a dinner stop at the Spindletop Restaurant.

Free time will give visitors a chance to view the famous Christmas windows of Saks Fifth Avenue, Lord and Taylor, Altman's and Macy's plus see the giant tree at Rockefeller Center.

The trip also offers, for an additional fee, a three-hour personalized art tour of the Soho district noted for its fine galleries, unusual boutiques and quaint restaurants and cafes.

The nine-day trip to Mexico and Merida is planned for Jan. 6 through Jan. 15, 1984 and the price is $839 for a double, $795 for a triple and $119 for a single supplement additional cost.

Joining the South Shore Art Center in sponsoring this trip led by primitive art expert Dr. Russell Doucette is the Massachusets College of Art and the Danforth Museum.

Highlights of the five days in Mexico City are a sightseeing tour of the city, a trip to the Museum of Archeology to see its collection of pre-Columbian art and tours to the Quetzalcoastl Temple, Temple of Teotihuacan, Pyramids of the Sun and Moon and the shrine of Guadelupe.

The four days in Merida, colonial capital of the Yucatan, will include a tour of the city, a trip to Chichen Itza to view its spectacular ruins and a stop at the mysterious Mayan City of Uxmal.

Prices for all these trips include a tax-deductible donation to the South Shore Art Center. For complete information, call the Art Center, 383-9548.

Diplomat lecture series to begin Oct. 6

The Diplomats-off-the-Record Lecture Series, sponsored by the World Affairs Council of Boston, will open its Fall Program with Ernesto Rivas-Gallont, Ambassador of El Salvador to the United States, reports Committee Chairman Mrs. John M. Bleakie of Cohasset.

Ambassador Rivas-Gallont will discuss current U.S./El Salvador relations at the Country Club in Brookline Thursday, Oct. 6 at 6 p.m.

The series will continue with three other diplomats who will also offer interesting off-the-record information about current foreign policy matters affecting the relationship of their country with the United States.

The second speaker in the series will be Ken Taylor, former Ambassador of Canada to Iran (1977-1980), and, now, Consul General of Canada in New York speaking Tuesday, Oct. 25 at 6 p.m. Dr. Ashraf A. Ghorbal, Ambassador of Egypt to the United States will speak Tuesday, Nov. 15 at 6 p.m., and the series will end with Mircea Malitza, Ambassador of the Socialist Republic of Romania to the United States speaking Thursday, Dec. 8 at 6 p.m. All of the lectures are open to the public.

This is the 30th annual Diplomats-off-the-Record Lecture Series to be hosted by the World Affairs Council of Boston and the 10th year to be chaired by Mrs. John M. Bleakie. The World Affairs Council of Boston is a non-profit, non-partisan organization dedicated to increasing public awareness and understanding of peoples of the world. Throughout the year the Council provides a wide variety of activities, including seminars, films, lectures and international evenings for the residents of the Greater Boston area.

Members of the Diplomats-off-the-Record Series Committee are: from Cohasset, Mrs. John M. Bleakie, Mrs. Francis M. Chase, Mrs. Donald J. Evans, Mrs. William E. Haynes, Mrs. Arthur W. Johnsen, Mrs. John F. Keane, Mrs. K. Prescott Low, Mrs. Eli Manchester, Mrs. N. Frank Neer, Jr., Mrs. George J. Rabstejnek, Mrs. Raymond A. Remick, Mrs. Charles H. Remington, Mrs. Philip Shockman, Mrs. Charles L. Smith, Jr., and Mrs. Richard L. Yake.

South Shore Hospital needs beds, president says

By Kenneth B. Ross

Without at least a 100-bed expansion at South Shore Hospital, the hospital is doing a disservice to the 15-plus communities that use the facility, according to hospital President, William Clark.

Clark, speaking to the Norwell Chamber of Commerce at the Alewife Tavern last week, said the hospital is consistently at or above 100-percent occupancy. "The state says that if you go above 90-percent occupancy, you are doing a disservice," he said, citing the need for emergency treatment space.

South Shore Hospital was recently denied a request for a 110-bed expansion by the state Public Health Council. The council's reasoning for denying the requested expansion was the fact that other hospitals in the same service area, Milton, Quincy City and Jordan Hospitals, have an excess of vacant beds.

The council did approve a 60-bed expansion, but with special conditions that Clark referred to as insults.

"We asked where the 60 came from because we found it didn't fit any of their formulas (used in determining the scope of expansion,") Clark said, noting that the formula would call for 100 beds.

The three conditions placed on the 60-bed expansion are a $16-million ceiling on construction spending, a $6.5-million ceiling on operation costs due to the expansion and a $10-million equity contribution to start the project.

"The last insult was that to build a $16-million project, we had to put up $10-million," Clark said. The average down payment is under 15 percent of the project cost according to Clark. "Who are the losers? You are."

In 1981, South Shore Hospital filed a request for a 153-bed expansion, a request that is now part of a legal suit because the state failed to act upon it in the required nine months. The recent 110-bed request that was denied is being appealed and Clark said a new request for 100 beds has been filed with the Public Health Council.

"We need 130 beds, so we're asking for 100," he said of the latest request.

At the beginning of his talk, Clark said, "A speech should contain both grace and salt. I don't know if I can promise salt unless you get me wound up talking about my favorite subject, fighting bureaucracy in Massachusetts." Later, discussing the 153-bed request made in 1981, he said South Shore was in the same above full occupancy dilemma. He said that by law, an application is to be reviewed within nine months.

"Two years later, our application had not been worked out. This is an almost verbatim quote, they said 'the medical school in Worcester has excess beds and there are excess beds on the North Shore.' "

Clark described the Public Health Council as having "cumbersome" application steps.

"They just don't do anything. Typically they lose it (the applications,) at least twice," he said.

Since the 1981 request, Clark said 900 patients have been transferred from South Shore's emergency room (the third busiest in the Commonwealth) to other hospitals due to a lack of beds. He said patients being transferred will choose facilities in Boston, avoiding closer alternatives. He said the upcoming work on the Southeast Expressway will only magnify the problems of inadequate space at South Shore.

Clark joked that passage into Boston will be impossible "unless you're going to put patients on the T."

Although Clark continually referred to the state's lack of recognition of expansion needs at South Shore Hospital, he stressed that the hospital is a quality facility serving more than 15 communities, stretching as far south as Plymouth.

He said their intensive care unit is a showpiece for the Hewlett Packard Company, the manufacturer of the monitoring systems and that South Shore was a pioneer in outpatient day surgery, which is now a popular treatment method used in nearly all hospitals.

"We want to be the leader," Clark said. "The future of South Shore Hospital is hopefully like the past—we're going to grow."

At the Community Center

Last spring's cooking event of the season, a workshop in Gathering and Preparing Mussels, will be repeated Wednesday, Oct. 5, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Anna Abbruzzese and Carol Walls of Celebrations Unlimited will again lead students to the mussel harvest, and return to the Community Center to dry off and concoct mussel delicacies, including a main dish and two hors d'oevres.

Two basket workshops will begin next week, both taught by Donna Darling Kelly. There will be a three session workshop, Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m., beginning Oct. 5, making a New England Square Bottom Basket.

This is an unusual multi-colored flat reed gathering basket, featuring half round rim and handle. Some prior experience is necessary.

A two session workshop on an Egg Basket begins Friday, Oct. 7, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. This is a handsome, round egg basket featuring the Godseye four fold lashing style and slatted rib construction with flat reeds.

Continental Knitting with Laila Roukanakis will be held Thursdays Oct. 13 and 20, from 9 to 11 a.m. Laila will teach students this rapid method of knitting with the yarn in the left hand.

Furniture Refinishing will be offered as a five week program, Wednesday evenings, beginning Oct. 12. Albert Meallo teaches this beginner's course covering basic techniques as well as professional finish work.

Beginning Bridge with Marilyn Alexander, starts Oct. 4, Tuesdays, from 10 to 11 a.m. There is still room left in this 10-week course.

More participants are also welcome in two courses beginning this week: Bicycle Repair and Maintenance (Thursday evenings) and Oriental Rug Making (Tuesday mornings or Thursday evenings).

All courses and workshops must be pre-registered. Call the Center at 383-0088 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

NEW MEMBERS NEEDED

The Center Program Committee at the Community Center is looking for new members. This committee meets periodically to plan and search out new program offerings. Volunteers are needed to help. Those who are interested in contributing some time and imagination please attend the first Program meeting Monday, Oct. 3, at 7:30 p.m., at the Center.

Bowling is re-opened for the year at the Cohasset Community Center. Hours are: 3 to 5 p.m., weekdays, and 1 to 5 Saturdays; evenings: Friday and Saturday and Sunday from 7 to 10 p.m. Several leagues bowl during the weekday evenings and mornings, including a senior citizen's league. Consider joining an existing league or forming a new one.

Bowling is a healthy, fun way to exercise during the colder months. The alleys are also popularly used for children's birthday parties. Call the bowling supervisor during alley hours with questions on leagues or private parties.

Around Town

☐Speaking of meeting challenges and success stories, Brian Sullivan, son of Fred Sullivan of Pleasant Street, is an intern at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York.

☐Pleasant Street makes the news again this week, as it is reported that Nancy and Tom Anderson celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary last week. Congratulations.

☐A Cohasset tradition is no more, as a result of Bernie Mulcahy's purchasing a new Oldsmobile. Who will recognize him out of his famous Pinto? A Red Gate Lane landmark is history . . .

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home . . . now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Special Town Meeting wrap-up . . .

Town Depts. return money

Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said $150,000 was returned to the town treasury from the Assessors, Police, Tree and Park, Fire and Highway Depts.

Legal fees

Legal fees for the town's lawsuit with Cohasset Heights Landfill have hit $17,235, said Town Counsel Richard Henderson. Other legal fees are $3,084 for general counsel and $4,619 for the sewer litigation.

Mason hired

Town meeting approved hiring a full-time mason to repair work at the high school and Osgood School. The amount approved is $16,000. The mason would work as a school custodian when the weather is inclement. Resident Daniel Wigmore suggested the money should be used to repair window caulking and painting at the Osgood School. But his motion failed. School Committee Chairman Dick Conley said the candidate for the job had excellent references and wanted the steady job to avoid the commute from Plymouth to Boston.

Former school board member Patricia Anne Walsh said there was sufficient funds in the school budget to cover the $16,000 cost.

The School Dept., she said, has been able to spend less than what was anticipated in the following categories: Spanish teacher, over $5,000; elimination of one bus route bus costs and driver, over $10,000; replacement of resigned maintenance man with a less experienced replacement, at least $2,000 and fuel oil savings, $7,000 to $15,000. The combined savings is $22,000.

Conley acknowledged the savings but added the savings may have to cover some "unforeseen emergencies."

Other approved articles

Other approved Special Town Meeting articles are: $800 to replace the tide gates separating James Brook from Cohasset Harbor. These gates prevent pollution from the Elm Street sewer plant from flowing directly into the harbor; $1,550 for the Government Island repairs; creation of three grades of library pages, $3, pages, $3.35 page clerical and $4, page-typist; $300 to maintain Call Fire Dept. radios and $2,000 to install a culvert and catch basin on Ledgewood Drive.

The town also voted to accept an anonymous $10,000 gift to establish a "William Ripley Jr. Athletic Fund." Article 11, a request for $10,000 for water saving devices and Article 16, a request from the health board to transfer landfill management to the selectmen were postponed. Town meeting also voted to close Town Way to vehicular traffic with $500 to close the way with a fence and cement posts.

State water grant

The Water Commission will be returning to the April, 1984 annual town meeting with a request to finance water pipes on Border Street, Joy Place and sections of Jerusalem Road, Nichols and Beach Street.

Commission Chairman William Montouri said the state approved $224,000 but the town must match the amount.

In April, Montouri announced a $221,000 matching grant to replace old water pipes along Atlantic Avenue.

The town approved the matching grant but state funds have been witheld until the state Communities and Development office accepts Cohasset's low income housing agreement.

South Shore legislators meet

For the first time Legislators on the South Shore have met to organize for purposes of collectively representing the specific concerns and interests of South Shore residents.

Suggested several months ago, the group met recently to organize and discuss purpose and direction to be known as the South Shore Legislators' Caucus; the group will formally meet once a month at the State House. The Caucus is comprised of the six senators and 18 representatives from South Shore districts—an area from Quincy and Milton in the north to Plymouth in the south and to Brockton in the west. At its initial meeting, the Legislators elected Rep. Frank Hynes (D—Marshfield) and Sen. Edward Kirby (R-Whitman) as co-chairmen and unanimously concurred that the first order of business would be to meet with the Governor regarding the transportation concerns of South Shore residents.

The Caucus members have scheduled their next meeting for October at which time they plan to meet with Gov. Dukakis and members of the Department of Public Works to discuss South Shore transportation issues.

Field hockey is intense at CHS as the expressions of these two players show.

A cold spot has a warm spot in kitchen history

By Lois Martin

There is in my kitchen an unheralded appliance that'll never make it to antique status. It is 12 years old, freezes lettuce if that's left in its middle, and is missing the little tabs that used to support the vegetable bins.

In fact my Sears Coldspot refrigerator looks awful. But when I think of duties it has performed in the name of feeding its family over the years, I'm driven to cite its service record.

It has held in 12 years leftovers bespeaking great masses. Lasagna by the potful, plucked from its innards to be reheated at all hours through the late 70s. And chicken, no refrigerator in the state, perhaps in the Eastern seaboard, has seen the storehouses of partially devoured roasters my refrigerator has known.

There is, of course, a certain format one follows in the handling or not handling of leftovers. If you like what you're saving, you wrap it carefully and it's toward the front of the appliance where the door opens. If you don't like it, you stick it back farther, unprotected and pretend you don't notice it when there's a chance to use it up. Within several days, you get your chance to gasp, when the leftover has 'gone by,' taken a different form or switched shades of color.

Even as we meet, my broccoli leftover is in the rear of the second shelf. Tonight I get to throw it out, after I, aghast, discover it's no longer palatable. It should have been hurled immediately, but that would be wasteful.

I'm trying to break myself of the habit but it's one of the things I do well so I hate to give it up.

Then there are the remnants from that spell I had several years ago of buying cafeteria size containers of mustard. I'm down to my last plastic ice cream holder of that.

The apricot jam is still there. It suddenly looked wonderful a year ago when I was shopping. I had some once. Therefore it's still there and I swipe off the cover when I clean the refrigerator, which some might snidely say coincides with the diennial census.

There's my once-used good oil for my Fry-Grampie if I ever choose to do that again. But, to my credit I stopped saving bacon fat.

I'm an admirer of the contents of friends' refrigerators. Butter is under "B." Pickles are orderly arranged in priorities, your better dills back to the sweet mixed.

My arangement is potpourri, far more challenging, closer actually to an adventure.

I keep milk as a courtesy to the cat and people who use it in coffee. And in the freezer I happened upon my expedient way to create bread crumbs when I put the pot roast on top of the hamburger buns. A little ingenuity, is all.

Oh, the announcements that have been posted on the door of that refrigerator. The federal government should have such a memo system. There have been reminders of errands, threats to people who wouldn't clean their rooms, cute messages or honors through the years.

But she's wheezing on me now. The refrigerator and the washer and dryer are the same age. While the freezer whistles when it goes off, the washer can be heard coughing into its spin as the dryer thrashes.

On the exterior of the vessel the brand name is listing. It's been glued once but that impact transpired. On top I keep my basketful of coupons I'll never use. I'd lay odds there's a coupon for Pampers in that assortment. Outdated savings.

But that brings to mind the policy of a neat housekeeper who told me, "If you haven't used it in two years, sling it."

Makes sense to me. In 1985 that broccoli's outta here.

Deaf rights bill supporters urged to contact their reps

The Massachusetts Senate recently voted to combine two existing bills related to the rights of deaf citizens of the Commonwealth. House Bill 6155, passed and engrossed by the House of Representatives on May 5, 1983, and reported favorably by Senate Ways and Means, has been amended with much of the content of Bill 56, "The Deaf Rights Bill." By combining the two bills, the Senate seeks to meet deaf and hearing-impaired people's needs for legislation in the areas of housing discrimination, telephone service, access to the legal and governmental systems thorugh provisions of interpreters and the use of hearing guide dogs.

The original House bill, HR 6155, sponsored by Rep. John H. Loring, contains provisions which extend civil rights protection in the area of housing, currently available to blind persons with guide dogs, to deaf persons with hearing guide dogs. It would therefore be illegal to refuse to rent, lease, sell or discriminate against any deaf person because he or she is deaf or owns a hearing guide dog. The bill extends similar civil rights protection to deaf persons with respect to educational facilities in the Commonwealth.

Senate Bill 56, sponsored by Sen. Chester G. Atkins and two organizations in the Deaf Community (Mass. State Association of The Deaf and Mass. Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf), contained similar provisions related to hearing guide dogs, and in addition, addressed deaf people's problems in housing, telephone access and legal interpreting.

In addition to retaining the civil rights extension contained in House Bill 6155, the proposed amendments—1) require that hearing guide dog businesses be licensed by the Director of Animal Health of the Department of Food and Agriculture; 2) extend protections against discrimination in public places (restaurants, stores, etc.) currently available to deaf persons accompanied by hearing dogs, to hearing dog trainers conducting training of the dogs; 3) mandate the provision of interpreter services if deaf persons are involved in any governmental proceeding in the Commonwealth; 4) make telecommunications devices for the deaf available at a discounted price for those certified deaf; and 5) require telephone companies to provide discounted rates for within state calls made by telecommunications device users.

The bill with its amendments will come before the House Committee on Ways and Means in the next week. Supporters are urged to contact the committee and their own representatives to urge them to pass the bill.

For further information, please contact Cathy Cogen, 437-3064 or Barbara Jean Wood, 254-4041.

Transportation caucus meeting

The next meeting of the South Shore Transportation Caucus is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 29 at 7:30 p.m. at Barnes Auditorium, Hingham Town Hall.

State Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) and State Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield and Scituate) will host state transportation officials who are responsible for planning and coordinating the Southeast Expressway reconstruction project.

Pamela Wolfe, Southeast Expressway Coordinator and Michael Meyer, Director of the Bureau of Planning and Development, along with their Southeast Expressway Transportation Team will describe the scope of the entire reconstruction project and provide an update on all aspects of preparations being made for travellers of the Southeast Expressway during the two-year period of reconstruction.

McKinnon said, "Since the meeting of the South Shore Transportation Caucus in July, the transportation team has been working hard developing plans to address the anticipated inconveniences."

McKinnon continued, "Public input is vital in this effort to help identify problem areas and participate n using alternatives to traditional Southeast Expressway travel."

Hynes said, "After our meeting two months ago, the planning team has been assessing the needs that were identified at that meeting and are now able to provide the public with information on alternatives to be available during the period of reconstruction."

Single parent support groups

Family Service of Greater Boston will be offering two single parent support groups beginning at the end of September, 1983. One group will be held on Tuesday afternoons from 12:45 to 2:15 and one group on Wednesday evenings from 8:00 to 9:30 for ten weeks.

Each group will take place at Centering Psychological Services in Norwell and will be led by Anita Aherne, M.Ed. If you or any other single parent are interested in participating in either group, please call Anita Aherne at 659-4445 to reserve a space. Enrollment is limited to ten members per group.

There is no fee for this program.

VFW benefit dance

A benefit dance for Judith Stover and family will be held at the VFW Post 3169, Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Scituate, Oct. 15, from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Music will be provided courtesy of "Jimmy."

Tickets can be purchased at the Satuit VFW Post 3169, in Scituate, or the American Legion Post, in Cohasset.

Tickets are $5 a couple. There will also be a raffle held that night. Refreshments will be served.

The event is sponsored by the VFW Auxiliary and the American Legion Auxiliary.

Flu clinics

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Board of Health are sponsoring two Flu Clinics in October for Cohasset residents. Both clinics will be held at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

The first will be Thursday, Oct. 6, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The second clinic will be Saturday, Oct. 15 from 10 a.m. to noon.

A donation of $2 will be requested.

Immunization is recommended for those people over 60 years of age, and for susceptible high risk individuals with chronic illnesses.

Those who are allergic to eggs or egg products should not receive the flu vaccine. Persons with an acute respiratory disease or other active infection should postpone immunization and consult their physician.

For further information, call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Cub Scout pack meeting

The Cub Scout Pack meeting will meet Thursday, Sept. 29 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

Capt. Mark Trask of the Cohasset Fire Department will be the guest speaker.

Any boys still unregistered can register at the pack meeting. Registration fee is $12.

Volunteers are needed to lead third, fourth and fifth grade dens. Anyone interested can speak to cub master Jeff Forsdick at the pack meeting.

Marine Fisheries hearing

The state Division of Marine Fisheries Advisory Commission will hold two public hearings to solicit public comment relative to a proposed bag limit for recreational divers of 10 to 12 lobsters per day.

The hearings have been scheduled in response to a request from the Massachusetts Lobstermen's Association, who feel the effort of recreational divers should be restricted, consistent with recreational pot fishermen, who are allowed only 10 pots.

Currently, recreational divers may expend as much effort as a commercial diver, but may not sell their catch.

It is believed that a daily limit of 10 to 12 lobsters per licensed diver will not adversely affect the majority of recreational divers. However, this restriction may help to minimize potential abuses, considering the limited entry into the commercial fishery.

The hearings are scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 4, Mass. Maritime Academy, Harrington Auditorium, Buzzards Bay at 7 p.m.; and Wednesday, Oct. 5, Sawyer Free Library, Friend Room, Gloucester, at 7:30 p.m.

Quadrant softball championship

The first annual Quadrant Softball Championship between Weymouth, Hingham, Scituate and Hull will be held Saturday, Oct. 8 at the Hingham High School — "A" Field, Hingham. Rain date will be Sunday, Oct. 9.

Schedules will be 10:30 a.m., Hingham Best Chevy vs. Hull Pub 67, and noon, Weymouth Sponsors vs. Scituate Jamie's Pub.

This is a single elimination contest and the championship final will be held at 2 p.m. Refreshments will be available.

ASA rules will be followed and a $1 fee will be charged per team.

The benefactors of the 1983 championship tournament are Vincent and Eileen Nardo of Cohasset. Three Nardo children were killed in a tragic house fire in August. The Nardo's will receive all funds which are raised!

For information, call Mike Gilbert, 383-6218.

St. Anthony brunch

The St. Anthony Sociables is planning a brunch at Cohasset-By-The-Sea Oct. 9 from noon until 2 p.m.

For tickets, please call Cheryl Hale at 383-1194.

The Sociables is a non-profit organization designed to foster friendship by bringing people together through a variety of enjoyable functions and activities.

Our board members for this year are: Dan and Kathy Bonetzky, chairman; John and Anne Marie Sullivan, vice chairman; Ed and Dorothy Leptich, treasurer; Conrad and Cheryl Hale, secretary, and Bill and Mary Smith, membership.

The activities planned for this year include: Brunch (fall and spring), Wine and Cheese Party, Ski Weekend; Boston Pops, and the Sweetheart Dinner/Dance.

Only members will participate in these events. The board hopes people will take the opportunity to become acquainted with fellow parishioners.

For membership, call Bill and Mary Smith, St. Anthony Parish, Cohasset, MA, or at 383-1062.

By Joan Pinkham

It was the South Shore at its loveliest the day of the Cranberry Fair. Garden "clubbers" who came from all over the state to The Farm in Scituate wandered throughout the spacious grounds of the Arthur Crosbie's antique cape. Basking under a cloudless blue sky were beds of marigolds, dahlias, impatience and tubs of marguerites bordering the sparkling waters of the pool. Scattered under the huge shade trees were tables laden with the handiwork of these sixty members of the Scituate Garden Club; articles they had been fashioning all summer long.

Each member made loaves of cranberry bread and served on committees that offered dried arrangements for sale in the potting shed, fragrant sachets in the boutique, house plants, homemade foods and much, much more. To move all of this in just three hours (11:30 a.m. to 2:30) seemed to present no problem, for it was estimated that a thousand visitors came and few went away empty-handed. The committee that prepared the five hundred luncheons of croissants, soup and cake, were woefully short of keeping up with the demand, but it had taken this committee approximately 30 hours to ready this particular feature. Another popular table was the "Lunch for a Bunch" tasting table, the work of Mary Bailey and Claire O'Hara, chairpersons, and their committee: Agnes Woodburn, Marie Kerwin, Jane McCombs, Kathy Donahue, Mary Gallahue and Glenn Fields. After weeks of testing and testing recipes, they sold samples and recipes for Herb Stix, Spinach Balls, Harvest Soup, Steamed Cranberry Festival Pudding and Tomato and Cheese Spread. Here is their recipe for

HARVEST SOUP

1/2 lb. Italian sweet and hot sausage, casing removed
2 c. celery, diced into 1/2" slices
2 lb. zucchini, cut in 1/2" slices
1 c. chopped onion
2 cans tomatoes (28 oz. each), or approx. 2 lbs. fresh tomatoes
2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. each of oregano, basil, Italian seasoning and sugar
2 green peppers cut into 1/2" slices
1/4 tsp. garlic powder

Brown sausage. Drain fat. Add celery. Cook 10 min. Add remaining ingredients and simmer for 20 min. Add green peppers and simmer for 10 min. covered. Makes one gallon.

If you've traveled in England, perhaps you know the delights of their bed and board overnight stays. Now we have such a service for people sojourning here on the South Shore. Ward Collins Cramer calls himself the Innkeeper and he is also a gourmet cook you may have watched some time ago preparing the recipe below in the kitchens of Channel Seven. Since opening his home to those in need of bed and breakfast, he tells of meeting many new and interesting people. Former chairman of the Lexington Gourmet Guild, he notes there has been ample opportunity to practice his gourmet skills in creating a breakfast menu with more than 25 different items on it. Since the start of this new venture last January, Cramer has had some fascinating guests, among them Russians, English teachers from Italy, a charming poet from New Jersey and many others who came to Duxbury to attend a wedding, a christening, a family reunion, or who just happened to be passing through. Here, on the South Shore, where mussels are ours for the taking, is the recipe demonstrated on the "Look" show. This appetizer would serve each person four to six

MUSSELS MARINIERE

6 T butter
Clove of chopped garlic
3 T chopped shallots or onion
2 small leeks, chopped
Small bay leaf
36 mussels, (approx.), scrubbed and de-bearded
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3/4 c. dry white wine or sherry
4 tsp. flour (Wandra brand is suggested)
1/2 c. medium cream
2 egg yolks
Chopped parsley to garnish, if desired.

In a cast iron kettle or deep frying pan, heat 3 T of the butter. Add garlic and shallot, cooking 2 or 3 min. Cook leeks and bay leaf several minutes. Add mussels, salt and pepper. Pour wine over ingredients. Cover and simmer until shells open (10 to 12 min.). Remove mussels, discarding top shells, but arranging them in bottom shell on platter to serve as appetizers. Strain remaining liquid from pan and thicken with butter and flour. Beat cream and egg yolks together and add to liquid, butter and flour sauce in pan which has been removed from heat. Mix with spoon, reheat, but do not let it boil, or it will curdle. Spoon or pour sauce over mussels and garnish with parsley.

Musings. . .

By John H. Cutler

☐If the automobile was invented before the wheel, our roads would always be torn up.

☐The word may be spelled judgment or judgement, except in Judgment Day, which has no "e."

☐A compromise is the art of cutting the pie in such a way that each thinks he is getting the biggest piece.

☐It's time the Arabs and Jews settled their disputes in the true spirit of Christian charity.

☐A man who hits his thumb with a hammer really understands what freedom of speech means.

☐It's good exercise: Instead of jumping at conclusions, dig for facts.

☐It is sometimes easier to fall in love than to climb out.

☐Do you know why Prohibition failed? Simply because there are not enough policemen, jails, or courts to enforce a law which is not supported by the people.

☐In the long run, people who read Reader's Digest will be better informed than those who read the Atlantic or The Partisan Review.

☐What's the difference between talent and genius? Malcolm Cowley has his version: "Talent is what you possess; genius is what possesses you."

☐Teabag philosophies: Well-timed silence has more eloquence than speech.

The accent's on youth, but the stress is on parents.

September's end and some fine fishing

By David Cutler

This being September's end, your summer fun is officially over. Tans are hard to come by and the lawn furniture is beginning to get in the way. Don't bother about it because summer's end is the start of the serious fishing season.

Knowledgeable anglers know that fall fishing is best in both salt and fresh water. Pilgrims — that's how unkind knowledgeable anglers refer to their bretheran who don't catch fish — may think fall is for football and pumpkins. Should they decide to bring the tackle out one more time, they too will know better.

Unkind knowledgeable fishermen may suggest that Pilgrims who can't catch fish in September or October should trade in their tight lines for a more passive recreation. Being more charitable, we would suggest that those who don't know what they're doing read on a little before taking to the water: the following paragraphs are offered in that spirit.

In the Salt

The most noble of fish, the striped bass, is in serious decline in local waters and may have eluded the most expert of anglers this summer. The scarcity of stripers can certainly be attributed to pollution and may also be the victims of maurading bluefish who, being the greedy sort, are gobbling everything they can get their sharp teeth into.

If you are to succeed with the striper, you must do it in the next two or three weeks, as what's left of the species school up for the migration south. Try the mouth of the North River, in close off the Scituate and Cohasset coasts or in Plymouth and Duxbury Bays. If you're wealthy or know someone who is, get a boat — rugged —, and try the rips off Nantucket or Martha's Vineyard. Around Barnstable Harbor too. Hull Gut belongs to the blues.

Pogies, cut up or live, will produce as will Rebels and Hoochies trolled from a boat. Surfcasters will do best at night on the shores of Provincetown or the outer Cape. Throw back any fish that isn't at least 24 inches, and if you do succeed, count yourself among a skillful few.

A little luck and a little perseverance, will catch you a lot of bluefish. They are most everywhere and will be for at least another couple of weeks. If you have a boat, you will do better but you can score up and down the coast and at the mouth of the North River. Last week, we had four separate reports of blues chasing pogies on to the shore off Marshfield and Scituate. Use what you use for bass, but make sure you have a wire leader. Those bluefish teeth aren't kidding.

Cod are still offshore and will probably stay there until the waters cool, but there are still pollock around and the North and South Rivers are loaded with flounder. So is Duxbury Bay. Use seaworms and sharpen your fillet knife. We also have reports of tinker mackeral in the South River that are taking small jigged hooks.

The coho salmon is another noble fish, but it is even more scarce than the striper. Wise anglers rarely stalk the coho because they are so few in numbers. (The coho, not the wisemen.) But luck will intervene now and then as it did recently for one angler who caught an 11.5 lb. coho at the mouth of the North River and weighed it at Adams Sporting Goods in Hanover.

Coho are moving up the North River to spawn and will continue to do so through November. They aren't feeding but, on occasion, will instinctively chase a lure that goes by. Make it something bright and colorful.

You must go south, to the ponds of Plymouth and the cape, to succeed with trout (rainbows). Little Pond in Plymouth or Nickerson State Park in Brewster are both good bets. Locally there are some brookies around, but you'll do better in these environs with large and smallmouth bass.

Largemouths are most everywhere (Oldham Pond included) and are feeding, particularly at dusk. Try a jitterbug or any kind of surface lure. The fellow at Adams Sporting Goods said several largemouths in the four to five-pound class have been caught recently in local waters. The largest smallmouth weighed to date came in at four pounds.

The largest pickerel weighed in at Adams was 3 lbs., 14 oz. which is a healthy size for one of our most unsung fresh water fish. They are fiesty for their size and they are plentiful as well. Shiners will produce as will a small Rebel or a Mepps spinner.

Good fishing.

Senior Citizen news

The Cohasset Social Service League and the Board of Health are sponsoring two flu clinics.

Both will be held at Town Hall. The first one will be held Thursday, Oct. 6, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and the second will be held Saturday, Oct. 15 from 10 a.m. to noon.

A donation of $2 is requested.

Immunization is recommended for senior citizens 60 years-old and over and high risk individuals with chronic illnesses.

Social Service also sponsors the shuttle bus for senior citizens.

Scheduled trips are: Monday, Oct. 3, to Braintree Mall; Wednesday, Oct. 19, to Hanover Mall.

Call 383-0771 or 383-0821 for all information.

The Council On Aging board of directors will meet Tuesday, Oct. 11 at 10 a.m., at Unitarian Parish House.

Sixty Plus Club board of directors will meet Tuesday, Oct. 4 at 11 a.m., at Unitarian Parish House. The "Vista" will be printed in October.

Around Town

☐Michael, the chef at Hugo's Lighthouse, was on Sunday Open House last week making his super clam chowder. He was there to invite everyone to the Boston Common, where he and thirty other cooks held a contest for Clam Chowder. It must have been a super day for chowder lovers!

☐Had great news about Maureen Buckley last week. Maureen, daughter of Jack and Cleida Buckley, is a freshman at Bates College, where she tried out for a musical group. There are nine girls that are in the Merimanders, six of which were chosen this year. Maureen was one of the six new girls chosen, which tells you how talented she really is! Anyone who saw Maurren perform over the years for CHS knows what a super talent she has.

Participants may register for either class for $15 for the eight week session or may register for both classes for $22.50 for the eight week session (16 classes).

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation office at 383-6791. Non-residents may register on a space available basis.

MUSEUM TOUR

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Cohasset Historical Society will accept registrations for a guided tour, to be held Wednesday, Oct. 12 at 11 a.m.

The tour will meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street, Cohasset.

Residents and non-residents may register for a $1 fee, for the guided tour of the following Historical Society Museums at Cohasset Center:

The Maritime Museum, constructed circa 1790, is unique among museums in this area. Formerly a "ships" chandlery or marine supplies building, it originally belonged to fishing vessel owner Samuel Bates whose family maintained a maritime-related business in Cohasset for four generations. The first floor is devoted to Cohasset's "Age of Sail" (1750-1895).

Here can be found relics of the schooner fishing days, materials salvaged from old shipwrecks, unusual items brought back from the Orient by Cohasset's "deep water" sailors, shipwrights and whaler's equipment, as well as paintings, prints and photographs of Cohasset's maritime era.

The story of the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse tragedy and the engineering triumph of the second lighthouse are portrayed in artifacts, pictures and models. Beautifully detailed ship models of square rigged vessels are displayed, notably models of the ship "Tecumseh" (over five feet long) and the clipper ship "Stag Hound," carved and built by Cohasset seafarers.

The second floor of the Maritime Museum contains collections of a general historical nature; old carpenter's tools, cordwainer's (shoemaker's) equipment, Indian relics, a display of early apothecary's equipment, old Cohasset school desks and books, a part of the town's first Post Office, and military relics from America's several wars.

An old homemade piano is on display, as are a series of dioramas depicting various historical scenes of the town. Photographs and prints of local interest can be seen. These and many other interesting displays of historical nature can be viewed in the Maritime Museum.

The Capt. John Wilson House, dating from 1810, was given to the Society in 1936 and became its first museum. This old dwelling belonged to Captian Wilson, a seafarer and then to his descendants for more than a century. One can find antique furniture and furnishings to recreate an early Cohasset home. Chairs, tables, spinning wheels, old cooking utensils, even a collection of children's toys are featured. Old paintings of Cohasset buiidings and scenes can be viewed. The atmosphere is late 18th and early 19th century New England.

The "Independence" museum, formerly the town's first fire station, now houses the Society's Gown Collection. Here are displayed some of the extensive collection of fine gowns, costumes and accessories given to the Society by townspeople, representing American clothing styles from the early 19th to the early 20th centuries.

Featured at the "Independence" are a Bridal Room and a Children's Room. The actual uniform of an American ambassador as worn during his presentation to the English monarch is on display.

This collection is viewed annually by designers and students of fine fabrics. David H. Wadsworth, curator, and volunteer tour guides wil attend to lead groups and answer questions.

To register for the tour, please call the Recreation Department office, at 383-6791, as soon as possible. Tour will meet at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 12, at the Maritime Museum, Elm Street.

Art Center changes fall schedule

The South Shore Art Center has made a few changes to its fall schedule of classes.

The center, 103 Ripley Rd., has made a few changes in the starting date of five classes. Albert Abany's workshop for Those Who Can't Draw a Straight Line, Virginia Moore's Basic Drawing, Bill Bell's Calligraphy, Syma's Children's Clay and Walter Hawk's Creative Anatomy are scheduled to begin Monday, Oct. 3 with the exception of Hawk's class which begins Wednesday, Oct. 5.

Advanced registration is required for these courses and all other Center offerings.

Registrations will still be accepted in Clement Micarelli's Portraiture, Mary Ann Patrick's Watercolor Paintings, David Tandy's Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting, Mary Good's The Figure in a Painting, John Goldie's Beginning Photography and Intermediate Photography and the junior and senior high school workshops.

The two workshops have been combined into one class and will meet Fridays, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Hawk's Creative Anatomy has been designed for the student who wants a better understanding of the human form. Beginning with studies of the skeletal system and progressing to the form and function of the muscles and their interdependence, the student will work directly and more effectively from live models.

The workshop for People Who Can't Draw a Straight Line is a great beginning for those who thought they could never learn to draw. Line, form, proportion, perspective and structure will be covered in the course.

Good's special workshop, The Figure in a Painting, is for all level artists. Students will learn how to use the clothed figure as an important part of a painting in both exterior and interior settings.

For information on these and other center courses offered on the fall schedule, call 383-9548.

Do you need help in solving an interior design problem?

The center offers on its fall schedule a special two-evening workshop on Planning Personal Spaces.

Marge Benson, a South Shore interior designer, will lead this two-session interior design workshop Tuesday, Oct. 4 and Oct. 11, from 8 to 10 p.m.

She will offer expert advice on how to plan your particular space at home or the office. The first evening will be devoted to a talk on furniture placement, use of textures and colors and the best way to use space. The second session will be "hands on" planning of one area which participants would like to solve.

Advanced registration is required for this workshop. For further information and to register, call the center at 383-9548.

He formerly lived in Belmont.

Mr. Richardson was a World War II overseas Marine veteran and a well-known artist.

He was the husband of Anne Richardson of Cohasset and the father of Mark Richardson of Boston.

Mr. Richardson leaves three brothers, David Richardson of Hanover; Robert of Lexington, Kentucky, and Howard of West Gloucester, and a sister, Helen Thompson, of Natick.

Services were held Sept. 22 at the United Church of Christ (Congregational) in Norwell. Burial was held in Fairview Cemetery, Scituate Center.

New England telephone directories available

The new South Suburban New England Telephone directories have more to offer than listings of telephone subscribers.

They contain a wealth of information in the introductory pages, putting an array of telephone information at customers' fingertips.

New England Telephone Public Relations Manager Jacqueline Jung said, "The directory — now being delivered — features a new alphabetical listing of information such as area codes, assistance with annoyance call problems and even how to remove a wall phone.

"The directory also contains an expanded repair section "as well as an in-depth guide to making international calls.

"Tips on how to save money when calling long distance, plus instructions for using new optional custom calling features such as Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three-Way Calling and Speed Calling are also featured in the directory," she added.

Specialized workshops scheduled for Art Center's classes

Several specialized workshops have been included in the South Shore Art Center's fall schedule of classes.

Beginning Sept. 28 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, are two workshops, "Figures in a Painting" led by Mary Good and "Experimental Workshop" taught by Joseph Burbank.

Good's workshop meets Wednesday from 12:30 to 3 p.m. and Burbank's, Wednesday from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Eleanor Avakian's Oriental Brush Techniques begins Sept. 29 and will meet Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Advance registration is required for all Center's courses and workshops.

Good's course will concentrate on how to use the clothed figure as an important part of a painting, both interior and exterior settings. The workshop is geared to all levels of ability although students should have some basic drawing and painting skills.

Good, who lives and works in Randolph, won the 1983 Best of Drawing award at the Silvermine in New Canaan, Ct. In 1981 she took the best of show award at the Plymouth and South Shore Arts Festivals. She has an MFA from Southeastern Massachusetts University.

Burbank's Experimental Workshop for beginning and intermediate levels will work with mixed media with instruction in whatever area of drawing and painting a student has a particular interest. Students will explore various techniques with the instructor's guidance.

Burbank, who holds a BS from Mass College of Art, has taught for 20 years in adult education programs and at the Dover-Sherbourne School where he is currently art director. He took a sabbatical to study in Florence, Italy.

The Oriental Brush Techniques is a concentrated workshop to learn basic brush techniques which can later be applied to various media. Traditional Sumi-e (ink paintings) will be demonstrated on rice paper.

Avakian studied at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and with professors Hirosho Oda, Chung and Sheng-Chia Sun Lee for Sumi-e and oriental brush techniques.

A two-day interior design workshop geared specifically to planning personal spaces will be held Tuesday, Oct. 4 and Oct. 11 from 8 to 10 p.m. The first evening will be devoted to a talk on furniture placement, use of textures and colors and the best way to use space. The second sessions will follow with a "hands on" planning on one area each participant would like to solve.

Interior designer Marge Benson will run the workshop. She is an A.S.I.D. Associate and has run her own business for eight years, doing home and office spaces in Boston, N.Y. and St. Thomas.

A one-day two-hour fall and holiday workshop will be led by Marion Bush on Saturday, Oct. 29, from 10 a.m. to noon. She will demonstrate new ideas for wreaths, fall and Christmas gifts, ornaments and house gifts. Participants are asked to bring their own dried materials and other basic materials will be for sale at the center.

For complete information on these workshops and the other classes, trips and programs on the South Shore Art Center's fall schedule, call the Center at 383-9548.

PHOTOGRAPHY

The Center's fall schedule of photography classes offers something for everyone from the novice photographer to the more experienced.

Beginning the week of September 26 the photography schedule includes beginning darkroom procedure, a basic photography for the beginner and more advanced courses.

Paul Fortin's Monday night class from 7:30 to 9:30 beginning Sept. 26 is for the beginning photographer in color or black and white. This lecture course covers all the basics including F stops, shutter speeds, films, filters, composition, lighting and subjectmatter. Emphasis is recognizing elements of good photography and how to apply it to your work.

His intermediate/advanced photography, meeting Wednesday nights from 7:30 to 9:30, will explore various subjects including portrait, people, and landscape. Emphasis is how to train the student's eye and to learn to evaluate work. Both black and white and color will be used.

Fortin holds a BS from the University of Rhode Island and a diploma from the New England School of Photography. He is a freelance photographer, lecturer and reviewer.

The two John Goldie classes, both meeting Thursday evening from 7:30 to 9:30, Sept. 29, are geared to darkroom procedure. His beginning course emphasizes darkroom technique and explores the aesthetics of photography in an intensive time frame. The eight classes will be divided into four sessions each one dealing with a specific area of photography and developing.

His intermediate class is a demonstration-lecture-critique approach to working in the darkroom. Intermediate students will concentrate on sequences and projects toward developing a finer print. The more advanced students will explore special techniques to suit individual needs. Admittance is based on a portfolio review.

Goldie, an award-winnig photographer with Old Colony Memorial and Mirror newspapers, holds a AB from Harvard. He was formerly assistant manager of Northeast Color Research.

The center's darkroom is also available for use for two-hour sessions when the Center is open. The darkroom is for black and white film only.

For further information and registration, please call the center at 383-9548.

MUSEUM, GALLERY TOURS

Enrolling in Louise Kalish's series of half day tours to museums and galleries may provide a unique opportunity to visit some of the best exhibits in the Boston area.

The Center offers on its fall schedule of classes, workshops and special activities, a course described as "nine half day tours of galleries and museums." Advanced registration is required for this series.

The first tour scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 29 will take the group to the Institute of Contemporary Art to view "Currents," an on-going multi-media series of gallery exhibitions, lectures and evening performances.

The works appearing in the first "Currents" exhibit are Keith Haring's mural-size paintings of disruption and natural disasters and Jenny Holzer's bronze plaques of issues in contemporary art.

Kalish has arranged for a gallery talk by an ICA docent. The group will meet at the museum at 10 a.m.

All gallery tours are on the third Thursday of each month, excluding October. Kalish plans her tours around what is current in Boston and vicinity galleries and museums. She also includes tours to artist studios.

Kalish has studied at Mass College of Art, Brandeis and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. She exhibits extensively in New England and has worked in corporate collections. Currently she is a docent at the Rose Museum.

PSO fall meeting

The General Membership meeting of Cohasset's Parent School Organization will be Tuesday, Oct. 4 in Cohasset High School's Study Hall Cafeteria.

Refreshments will be served at 7 p.m. The meeting will begin promptly at 7:30 p.m. "Are We Killing The Arts?" is the topic for discussion.

Help needed for PSO yard sale

Jan Pyle and Steve Geary, PSO Fundraising Co-Chairmen, are planning Saturday, Oct. 22 as a repeat of last year's giant yard sale.

The sale will be part of the football homecoming activities.

The PSO needs help to assure a repeat of last year's success. Volunteers are desparately needed to work the sale. The PSO is also asking Cohasset residents to search their attics, basements and garages for any "treasures" they can donate.

Experience has indicated books, toys, bric-a-brac, and used sporting equipment are best sellers.

Any donations except clothing would be welcomed.

Remember that the PSO (Parent School Organization) is a tax-exempt organization and all donations are tax deductable.

The drop-off spot for donations is the Suhrbier's home, 178 South Main Street. Items may be left there or can be arranged for a pick-up.

Anyone volunteering to help or needing a pick-up should call Jan and Chic Pyle (383-0005) or Linda and Steve Geary (383-1071). Individuals wishing space at the PSO yard sale may do so by calling the above numbers.

Here's a scene from Stromberg and Cooper. The duo performed at CHS and the program was sponsored by the Arts Enrichment Committee of the PSO. (Rose Cundari photo)

Cross country

This is an off year for cross country.

They lost to Scituate and Middleboro last week.

Coach John Mika said, "We just have not been able to get the numbers that we usually have come out for the team. Not many juniors or seniors came out."

Mika looks at this year as a rebuilding season because most team members are freshman and sophomores.

Girl Scouts need volunteers

Who can teach a little girl how to swim, cook a hot dog, laugh?

For those people who have these special skills and a little extra time and love to give, the Girl Scouts need you as a volunteer.

Rebecca Bates-McArthur of Cohasset, Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Service Unit Chairman, said there are girls in the community who want to become Girl Scouts but can't because there aren't enough volunteers to serve as leaders, assistant leaders or members of the troop committee.

"This organization is dedicated to helping girls prepare for life," Bates-McArthur said.

"We couldn't do this without volunteers who give their time and energy to the different programs," she said.

A volunteer may be asked to plan a troop activity or work on adult education programs. Volunteering is easy and the requirements are few. Volunteers can be men or women of almost any age over 18.

For more information on how one can make a difference in a girl's life, call the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council at 848-1965 or Rebecca Bates-McArthur at 383-0362.

Purchases made in Europe frequently include a "value added tax" (VAT) which is similar to a sales tax. The rate varies but can be as high as 20%. Foreign visitors are usually eligible for a refund if their purchase exceeds a minimum price, which may vary from $50 to $100. While some stores will make an immediate refund, others will require visitors to fill out a two-part form which must be presented to local customs officers along with the purchase upon departure. The methods of repayment vary. Patience is required if the refund arrives in the currency of the country visited. Charged purchases will eventually show an adjustment for credit.

a new approach to single family living

We've had a great many visitors at The Meadows in Hingham since our opening, and we're pleased at their reactions to the spaciousness and detailing of the homes ...and to the very private feeling that has been achieved.

Over and over we hear... "this is just like a single family home...only better!" "The floor plans are great—so functional--and there's no wasted space"... "Your two bedroom home is larger than the three bedroom house I have now!"... "and everything is new: kitchens are fantastic"... "The cathedral ceilings make the rooms seem twice as big"... Everyone is pleased by the unusually shaped swimming pool ... the whirlpool ... the clubhouse and tennis courts. There's no way you can have all of that in the typical one-family home.

"There are people to care for the lawns ... the snow shoveling"... "I like the private courtyards—just big enough to do some creative gardening—but not so large as to be a chore"... "There's much better security here than I've been used to"..."and we still have full basements ...and a two-car garage." "Ownership is just like my old home ... you can mortgage your property, sell it when you want... get the same tax advantages."

The Meadows in Hingham is a wonderful place to live... the country-styled two and three bedroom attached single family homes are located on rolling meadowland covered with wild flowers. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500

Cohasset tackles Holbrook, 20-8

The Cohasset football team was down 8-0 at the half but they persevered and conquered Holbrook 20-8.

Dan Curran sent the third quarter in Cohasset's favor when he scored a touch down on a four yard run. Then Mark Lahive echoed a TD on a four yard run.

Curran chalked up another TD on a 24 yard run in the fourth quarter.

Rodney Best, back in action after an injury, made a two point running conversion after the last TD.

Holbrook could not score in the second half of the game as Cohasset held them to eight.

Other outstanding players were defensive tackle Jim Lydon, who made key hits and tackles. Linebacker Brett Wetzell also played well.

Cohasset's team had many injuries prior to their first league game but three captains and others recovered in time to play.

Captain Lee Wilson will probably be out for the season but "He goes to all games and practices and certainy shows leadership," said coach John Leone.

Leone was pleased with the last games performance. He said, "I could tell the team is in good condition because they got stronger as the game wore on."

This Saturday Cohasset will host Umaha Regional Technical High School of East Boston. Umaha is undefeated. "We will certainly have our hands full," said Leone.

Girls field hockey

The girls field hockey team has not yet celebrated a victory but twice they came close by tying Middleboro 1-1 and Arlington 0-0.

The team has an overall record of 0-2-2. "We have not been able to score. We are strong on defense but we have work on offense." said coach Gino DiGirolamo.

DiGirolamo believes that his team has potential. "Senior Nancy Walls (a captain center half back) should be our high scorer this year," he said. The other two captain seniors Kathy Corbett, a right half back and Jean Bailey, a right wing will be two more dependable pillars for the team.

So far, eighth grader, left wing Cindy Spooner scored Cohasset's lone goal for the season against Middleboro.

Boys soccer

Rockland beat Cohasset 3-0 but that did not knock Cohasset's confidence as they beat Middleboro 7-1 in the next game.

Goals were scored by: Chris Kirkendall and Bob Schultz assisted; Geoff Christensen and Dave MacDonald assisted, John Replogle and Mike DeSantis assisted, Mark Crough and Scott Duncombe assisted Coach John Anderson expects Scituate and Hanover to be close competitors. "Last year we tied Scituate in a non-league game and we beat Hanover by only one point." said Anderson.

Girls soccer

The girls soccer team played catch-up to Hanover to tie the score 3-3 last week.

Janet DiGirolamo scored two goals and Amy Duncombe scored the other, assisted by Sara Seave.

Coach Kennan Startzell said, "We made some mistakes against Hanover, one was not covering enough in front of the goal. However, we did make a dramatic comeback in the second half of the game."

Cohasset outshot Hanover 28-7. Neither team could get the ball in the net to break the 3-3 tie.

East Bridgewater dominated Cohasset 2-0, last week. "We held them better than we have in previous seasons." said Startzell.

John Vivian of Old Coach Road, is a recipient of the Social Science Award for Achievement and Leadership at Gordon College.

The criteria for the award is: the recipient must be a senior at Gordon College, and completed the junior year, a minimum grade point average of 3.25, promise for leadership in a chosen field and exposure to departments within the division. The selection of a winner is made by the members of the Division of Social and Behavioral Sciences.

Jim met all of these requirements and the Psychology Dept. has enrolled him as a student affiliate of the American Psychological Association.

Jim graduated (CHS) in 1979.

☐Tom Wigmore and his sidekick Chris Laugelle, had a great trip to Vermont last weekend, when they went to visit Tom's aunt. They filled many a bag full of apples to bring back to Cohasset. Tom and Chris are planning a foliage trip next time, in about three weeks.

☐Paul Buckley made his television debut this past weekend, as a player on the Unversity of Maine's football team. Played a super game, even got his name on the air! He's sure to continue his winning ways through a lot of hard work and tons of efforts.

☐Had great news from Steve Sinopoli last week, who wanted to be sure that everyone knew about Lou Von Karle's approaching marriage. A "confirmed bachelor," Lou ties the knot next month in Virginia. Best wishes to Lou and Anne-Marie.

☐Erik Waal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery Waal of Old Pasture Rd., had the distinction of being the youngest racer in the President's Club bicycle race held in Quincy recently. Erik is nine years old, and finished the race in fifty minutes as everyone applauded his efforts.

☐Had a nice report from the residents on Linden Drive. It seems David Holway and Larry Shultz put a nice tall barrell-full of marigolds in a spot for everyone to admire, making Linden Drive look fall-like and attractive. All of the residents love the idea, and are most appreciative of the time and effort these people took to make the street look attractive.

South Shore Elder Services hearing

By Diane Barke

Many benefits and services available to the elderly and goals for the next three years were outlined at the Coffee Hour-Public Hearing held Tuesday, Sept. 20 at the Catherine A. McGowan Senior Center, Scituate.

The South Shore Elder Services of Cohasset encouraged seniors to participate and speak out at this meeting.

Grants through the South Shore Elder Services were made available to renovate the fire station and complete the new senior center in Scituate.

Warren Dahlin, Executive Director, spoke of the programs available to help the elderly maintain their independence and remain out of nursing homes.

Peg Balboni, Home Care Program Manager, stressed the importance of providing home care and expanding this service to assist South Shore elders to remain safe and independent in their own community.

In long term illnesses, transportation to and from hospitals for treatments, may be available. Eligibility and guidelines should be discussed with Home Care Services.

Gena Leonard, Nutrition Director, said the agency's goal is to maintain the present level of congregate meals and to expand the weekend home-delivered meals program when these services are needed and not available.

Julie Kelley, planner, said homebound elders can obtain help with applications for fuel assistance. Legal services and representation are available to seniors who are unable to use existing legal services.

It was stressed that suspected physical abuse of the elderly should be reported and callers shall not be identified. Calls may be made to the South Shore Elder Services at 383-9790, Protective Services Division. The 24-hour hotline number is 1-800-922-2275.

The South Shore Elder Services, a private non-profit community based agency, is located at 430 South Main Street, Cohasset, 363-9790.

Historical society answers questions on Cohasset's past

The Cohasset Historical Society often is asked questions relating to Cohasset's past. Here are some of the questions most frequently asked, and the answers:

Q. When did the first settlers arrive in Cohasset and who were they?

A. During the mid-1600's Cohasset (then called Conahasset) was part of the town of Hingham, itself settled by English colonists from 1632 to 1640. Cohasset's land remained vacant until it was divided up among Hingham landowners in 1670. The first farms and homesteads were built in the new area of Conahasset almost immediately. The oldest house extant in Cohasset dates from 1695.

Q. When was Cohasset separated from its parent town of Hingham and why?

A. From 1717 to 1770 Cohasset was the 2nd or East Precinct of Hingham. After considerable agitation by Cohasset residents during the years of the Precinct, the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony "set off" the area as a separate District in 1770. That effectively made Cohasset independent of its parent town. Reasons given by residents seeking separation had included the difficulty of travel to municipal functions in Hingham, due to poor roads, and the tendency of the parent town to ignore its 2nd or East Precinct.

Q. When Cohasset, in 1717, had become the 2nd Precinct and Parish of Hingham, what administrative responsibilities were delegated to the new Precinct government?

A. The Precinct government was charged with the maintenance of its own school house and meeting house. Taxes were levied by the Precinct for these purposes. The precinct also hired its own teachers and the Parish its own Minister, both paid from public funds.

Q. What is the origin of the name "Cohasset?"

A. Cohasset, or Conahasset as it was called earlier, derives from the Algonquin name "Quonahasset," meaning "Long Rocky Place." The Quonahasset Indians, found here in 1614 by explorer Capt. John Smith, were a sub-tribe of the Massachusetts Indians, the dominant tribe in the area surrounding Boston.

Q. Cohasset was a seafaring town during the latter 18th and the entire 19th centuries. By the mid-1800's the town's dominant industry was mackerel fishing. Where did Cohasset's fishing fleet obtain its catch and why did the fishing schooners disappear from the local scene?

A. Most local fishermen voyaged to the "Down East" waters of Canada's Maritime Provinces to search for mackerel. Under treaty rights with Great Britain, signed in 1818, American fishermen could fish the coastal waters of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, also around the Magdelen Islands and waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It was there that Cohasset fishing schooners took their annual catch of mackerel. The decline of schooner fishing probably began when the railroad came to Cohasset in 1848; for that event started a major change in the town's pattern of living. By 1900, Cohasset young men no longer were turning their eyes toward the frontiers of the sea, and the town was well on its way to becoming a suburban community of Boston.

Q. During the late 1800's and early 1900's Cohasset was well-known as a summer resort for wealthy Bostonians. What first attracted numerous Boston families to the town?

A. A number of Bostonians first came to Cohasset to participate in the annual gunning sport called "Coot Shooting." That was the shooting of sea ducks with the emphasis placed upon the greatest number of birds that could be brought down each day. "Coot Shooting" parties were a high point of the hunting season. The hunters found Cohasset's ocean climate to be a zestful and invigorating change from the city and soon began to build extensive summer "cottages" along the town's shore roads for themselves and their families.,

Q. Which building, located at Cohasset Center, has the distinction of having been both the first Fire Station and first Police Station in the town?

A. The "Independence" building, now a gown museum, was the first Fire Station and the first Police Station. Built in 1848, the Independence originally housed a horse-drawn pumper engine, operated by the Independence Fire Company, a group of volunteer firemen. In 1912, two newer fire stations at Cohasset Harbor were combined to become the town's first Central Fire Station, and the old "Independence" was made into Cohasset's first Police Headquarters. In that year, Police Chief Thomas Bates was instructed by Selectmen to convert the building into a Police Station, with office and lockup, the cost not to exceed $500.

From the garden . . .

By Joan Pinkham

The summer sun is on the wane and the nights are ever cooler. The sumacs are tinged with dark red, fields are blanketed with goldenrod and purple asters and soon, the swamp maples will turn as scarlet as the bright red cardinal. Autumn's arrival is heralded by the hunter's moon, the full moon of October and is viewed with mixed feelings — for some, regret for the passing of summer; for others, a quickening tempo that they welcome. Marking the passage of the year is the last weekend in the month when daylight savings time ends and once again we turn back the clock.

Because this is the busiest gardening season, it's been said that spring begins in the fall. Now, when the pumpkins are a jolly orange, the bittersweet and bayberries ripe for the picking, our front doors are bedecked to herald the arrival of fall with swags of dried flowers, the traditional three ears of Indian corn, or wreaths of statice and straw flowers. Hardly a yard is without a pot or two of mums and we should keep an eye on the thermometer, for we can outwit Jack Frost by covering the plants with newspaper for the night, or slipping the pots into the garage before dark. So, before the falling leaves commit us to hours of raking, we should be planting our spring bulbs and for a good show, be generous in the numbers used. Our local garden shops are well stocked with bulbs of tulips and jonquils which must grow roots before blooming this spring. With spring in mind, we should all scurry around scattering grass seed, for there aren't too many weeks left for it to germinate; then run over to your perennial garden and divide your spring-flowering plants before putting it to bed with a thick mulch of leaves.

There are those of us who think the beaches are at their best now when we only share them with the seagulls. While walking the solitary sands, gather some salt marsh hay, wonderful for use as a garden mulch, for it has all sorts of trace elements. Keep an eye open for driftwood which burns with a bright blue flame after weathering in the salt air and David Clapp of Mass. Audubon tells us to look for shore birds, for the fall migration is well underway. Seen passing through on their way down from the Artic tundra have been the adult cormorants, brandts, blue herons and ospreys. Soon to follow, will be the ducks and honking geese, a farewell we all recognize. Birders are reported to have counted 19,000 hawks in just one day in the area of Mt. Wachusett in central Massachustts.

Vacation is over for our houseplants and though we may think they enjoy basking in the warm October sun, the dramatic drop in garden temperature when twilight comes, is more than they can take. Plants of tropical origin such as ferns, African violets, coleus and impatiens cannot adjust to cold nights, but before coming in for the winter, need a thorough going-over. To do this, carefully knock the plant from its pot and examine the root ball for insects before repotting in fresh soil. because some insects may still be clinging to the underside of the plant's leaves, spray gently with a hand mister and then, only then, find a winter home for them in the right setting. Give some thought to the amount of sun they will be getting, for flowering plants need direct sunlight during the short days of winter. An unobstructed south window is ideal, although coleus, wax begonia, impatiens and browalia will thrive in east or west windows, or even in a very bright north window.

It was a hot and windy day when Bev Litchfield led a group of birders in a walk out on the Glades and Third Cliff. These are two popular spots for the birds migrating to South America, stopping along the way to feed and rest. They fly at night and so Bev and others in her group spotted about a hundred knots, some sanderlings, dowagers, terns and warblers resting from their incredible journey.

Not all birds head south for the winter and so it is that more and more homeowners delight in luring them to feeders strategically located around their yard. Once again, the South Shore Science Center is handling bird seed orders and we have until Oct. 9 to call in our requests, or to stop by at their Norwell sanctuary.

Germany has an "Old Woman's Summer," England has "All-hallow Summer" and our "fifth season" is, of course, "Indian Summer," a bland and genial interlude when the Indians gathered their corn. Now when the field and garden flowers are still plentiful, take time out to dry some for winter bouquets and arrangements. A sunny day when the flowers are dry is the right time to cut blooms. Goldenrod, pearly everlasting and ironweed should be cut when the first flowers open. Roses, dahlias, mums, zinnias and calendulas should be cut when buds are opening. Wild grasses dry best when cut as seed heads are opening. Some may be sprayed with clear lacquer to preserve them, others such as cox comb, yarrow, pompom mums and herbs may just be hung in a dry warm place for 10 days. Some may be placed in silica gel, a good drying medium which you can buy at your nursery. When ready to arrange in a container, select one in harmony with the materials you are using. Simple shapes and dull "earthy" colors are best. Wooden salad bowls, slabs of drift wood, and a hollowed out pumpkin make good holders as do metal containers of pewter or copper.

These are glorious days for birders such as Warren Harrington who is so oriented to their ways that he took it as a sure sign of winter's coming when he saw flocks of white-throated sparrows and juncoes a week ago on Carolina Trail. In Mid-September, Harrington reports seeing many rareties along the Atlantic flyway, among them the marbled godwit, making the trek from Manitoba to South America. A Baird's sandpiper was spotted at high tide on Third Cliff, unusual because they are western birds. Over the course of five or six days, Harrington saw 25 species of shore birds, almost all the kinds that there are. Among them were semi-sandpipers, red knots, five whimbrels, two willets and five golden plovers. Get out your binoculars and join Harrington and members of the Brookline Bird Club on a birdwalk he will lead on the 22nd, leaving town hall at 9 a.m.

Inspector General to speak at brunch

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, a member of CO-OP 5, an association of Democratic Town Committees on the South Shore will host a brunch Sunday, Oct. 2 at 11 a.m. at Cohasset-By-the Sea Inn in Cohasset Harbor.

Guest speaker will be Inspector General Joseph Barresi who will discuss the role of his office in state government.

Persons interested in purchasing tickets may contact their local Democratic Town Committee Chairperson: Cohasset, Donna McGee; Hingham, Greg O'Meara; Hull, Anne Scully; Marshfield, Phil Johnston, and in Scituate, Joan Hefner.

FIVE YEARS IN REVIEW

By Patricia Anne Walsh

What is the most important thing that happened in Cohasset in the last five years? The answer depends on who you ask.

Your neighbors answered as follows:

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell: "A successful school system, able to operate in spite of Proposition 2½."

Advisory Board Chairman James Logrotteria: "Few problems equal what a sewer system could cost us. Something has to be done."

Advisory Board and Tri-Town Commission Member Fred Koed: "Going from three to five selectmen, but the jury is still out on it (as to whether it is an improvement)."

Firefighters Union President William Protulis: "Nothing sticks in my mind."

Ex-superintendent of Schools William Ripley: "I suppose the change in department heads: police, fire and school."

Water Commissioner Peter Pratt: "Five member

Appeals Board approves Yankee Oil variance

By Mike Berger and Patricia Anne Walsh

Yankee Oil and Gas will use the former Cox Estate as corporate headquarters if lawyers for the company and the Planning Board consent to a final agreement.

This means the board must agree to dropping a complaint filed against the appeals board for failure to issue a decision within 75 days of the company's application.

In addition, the planning board is concerned with the number of employees the company will bring to the former estate.

The board would also like a portion of the former estate, not used by the company, to be used by the town for either recreation or conservation purposes.

Because the appeals board did not issue a decision within 75 days, Yankee Oil and Gas automatically received a constructive grant variance. This means the company has the right to house their company there.

However, Atty. Chris Sullivan, representing Yankee Oil and Gas made it clear to the appeals and planning boards Monday morning, the company wants no part of litigation and may withdraw if legal problems persist.

Yankee Oil applied for a variance for 13 acres which includes over six acres of Cohasset Harbor.

By statute the appeals board must take action within 75 days and has another 14 days to file their decision with the town clerk. A 20-day appeals period follows.

Sept. 21, selectmen voted to appoint architect Mark Kiley as a full member of the appeals board to replace Chairman Robert Booth.

However, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said he has not yet been sworn into office because of the Yankee Oil and Gas application. Kiley attended the appeals board meeting Monday but sat quietly in the audience.

Monday's appeals board meeting at 8:15 a.m. followed several Planning Board meetings.

At 7 a.m. Friday morning the planning board met. At first it was announced as an executive session but later changed to an open meeting.

Attending were Booth and Barbara Powers, appeals board member, Yankee Oil President Paul Montle and his wife and Sullivan.

Also attending were Selectmen Mary Jane McArthur, John DeBassio, Rocco Laugelle and Town Counsel Richard Henderson.

After an executive session meeting Wednesday night, planning board members announced their intention to file suit concerning the Cox Estate before the expiration of the 20-day appeal period regarding the lack of action of the appeals board.

The board retained Anthony Feehereya of Goodwin, Proctor and Hoar, Boston attorneys to represent them.

In a unrelated development, this firm was also hired by the Sewer Commission to defend the town against the state suit.

Powers said appeals board member Atty. John

School Bd. settles class size issue

By Mike Berger

Some third grade parents are not satisfied but the School Committee decided Monday night to hire an instructional aide and not a classroom teacher to remedy a classroom crowding matter.

The problem is the third grade at the Osgood School. There are 81 students and three classrooms of 27 students.

About 15 parents who attended Monday's meeting are upset of the classroom ratio and because school administrators have not acted on the matter since late August.

But School Supt. Eugene Crowell has five reasons for his decision not to hire another classroom teacher.

Leading the list are money and enrollment figures.

Crowell estimated it would cost about $5,000 to hire an aide and $20,000 to pay a begining teacher's salary. Crowell and School Committee Chairman Dick Conley both stressed there is no money in the school budget to pay for a new teacher.

Crowell predicted last school year there would be 24 to 25 students per section in Grade 3. He was off by three students.

"Our contention is that it isn't critical. If we hired another teacher we would have sections of 20 students," he said.

The teacher's contract, said Crowell, says the student - teacher ratio should not exceed 28 students.

He also said it was unfair to upset Grade 5 students and parents now. Crowell said if the Grade 5 teacher was transferred, probably Grade 5 parents would storm the school board meeting.

Parents argued that there are 16 special needs students in Grade 3. But Crowell said besides the three classroom teachers, there are two specialists for the

Inspector General speaks

Joseph Barresi of Cohasset, the new State Inspector General is normally a listener, rather than an extensive talker.

However, at the Democratic Town Committee brunch at Cohasset By the Sea, Barresi told all.

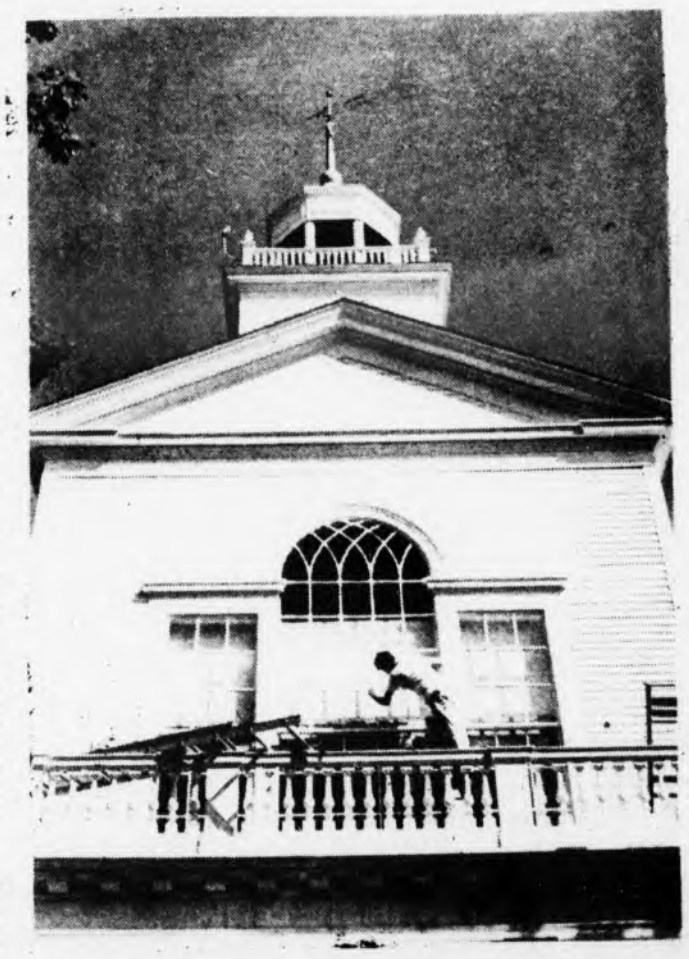
Barresi even discused his boyhood in South Boston, living in a three-decker as the son of immigrant parents. He attended Boston Latin School and Boston University for both graduate and undergraduate work, but finds his new job means he may have to advise B.U. officials their plans to take over adjoining Commonwealth Armory may be illegal unless provisions of the new state law are followed.

He advised Boston College and Beth Israel regarding simmilar acquisitions of public lands.

Barresi formerly headed the private Boston Municipal Research Bureau under Mayors Hynes, Collins and White.

In 1975, when New York City was having problems regarding city bonds, Scudder, Stevens and Clark employed him to do municipal bond investigations. He was there five years as Vice President in charge of municipal bonds.

He says he became unhappy with that job, and saw an advertisement for the position of the newly created Inspector General.



He said at his final interview three offiicals were present, but he had only met one, Governor Ed King, briefly previously at a party.

He says King told him later he was the only one that did not vote for him, but he would completely support Barresi.

In his first few weeks Barresi was criticized in media reports for moving slowly. Barresi explained that he came into an empty office, with no employees, and his first few months were spent in hiring competent staff and laying out procedures. He has 40 cases under investigation.

His defined mission is to prevent and detect frauds, waste and abuse in procurement of construction, services and supplies. His office has jurisdiction over every city and town in the state and local funds. His 30-member staff includes former FBI, IRS and Assistant special needs students.

Cohasset Arts Council Grant

The Arts Lottery Councils in Hingham, Weymouth, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, and Marshfield will receive a total of $28,789 in the January 1984 Arts Lottery distribution.

The money will be used by the local councils to develop and support cultural programs in their communities. The awards are made bianually in January and July by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council using proceeds from the sale of arts lottery tickets.

McKinnon said, "This money is vital to the local arts councils, enabling them to continue existing cultural activities and develop new programs, all for the benefit and enrichment of the community."

The Cohasset Arts Council has $850 available for grants from the State Arts Lottery.

Artists and organizations interested in applying for funding may pick up grant applications at the selectmen's office. Applictions must be completed and returned to the selectmen's office no later than Oct. 21.

Grants from the previous funding period were made to the Cohasset Recreation Deparmtent, the PTO and Folio.

National Merit Semifinalists

Cohasset is fortunate to have three youths qualify for National Merit semifinalists.

They are John Lualdi, a student at Milton Academy, Gerald McNabb of Xaverian High and Diane Mullen of Cohasset High School.

These students are among 15,000 students across the country who scored well enough on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT), National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (NMSQT).

They represent the top one-half of one percent of high school seniors across the country.

These three students have to reach the next step — National Merit Finalist - to be considered for a scholarship.

Wastewater Advisory Board

The Citizens Wastewater Advisory Committee which will advise the sewer commissioners with regard to the Facilities Plan voted under Article 12 of the Sept. 20, Special Town Meeting, will be established.

All sections of town should be represented.If interested, please call the sewer department office at 383-6630.

Curriculum Update

A new and revised Curriculum Update Program is available from the school superintendent's office and will be made available at the library. This program evaluates the elementary school curriculum, goals and objectives. School committee member Jack Langmaid suggested there should be more concrete goals for reading and a reading list developed throughout the grades He also said there is a need for improved composition skills, both from a creative and critical aspect.

PSO President Sue McNamara suggested parents, teachers administrators and School Committee members met to evaluate the CUP as they discussed the Absence and Tardiness Policy over the summer.

Monday is Columbus Day

Next Monday is a holiday, Columbus Day.

The Mariner work schedule will be unaffected by Columbus, with all due respect. But since the Post Office is closed that day, people who wish to mail in copy or advertising for the Oct. 13 issue should be advised earlier mailing insures delivery/ publication.

To be ahead of the game, get releases and advertising copy to the Mariner by Friday at 5 p.m.

Souther cleared

A District Court of Appeals cleared John Souther of Hingham, a former Cohasset resident and member of the town's Cemetery Space Study Committee. He was charged with being a disorderly person during a confrontation with Executive Secretary Mark Lanza in Town Hall in May. Souther had been a member of the committee for four years before being discharged from the position.

Tri-Town appointments

Tri-town Commission appointments were designated by selectmen for two sub-committees.

Donald DiMicheal was appointed to the regional waste and disposal committee. Martha Gjesteby will serve on the transportation committee.

Selectman John DeBassio said, "We should make these appointments and continue to look for one more person for each committee."

Correction

The Mariner reported last week the Fire Dept. rules need renegotiating. Within the article Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said the union cannot negotiate working conditions, hours, wages, fringe benefits and standards of productivity. These, he said, are management rights. The opposite is true. The above subjects are not management rights but mandatory subjects of collective bargaining to be negotiated in the next firefighter's contract.

'Legislative leadership out of control'

By Patricia Desmond

Barbara (Proposition 2½) Anderson has an elegant way of explaining the complicated issue of legislative rules reform:

"The issue is control. The people have no control. The legislative leadership is out of touch, out of control."

Anderson had those words and much more to say Tuesday night at a party at the home of Polly Logan in Hingham as she encouraged local political leaders to become active in the petition drive aimed at forcing rules reform on the reluctant leadership.

Logan called the event "A Party to Bring Back Democracy to Beacon Hill." Whether they want it or not is the main idea.

The 75 or so people assembled in the Logan home could all be called political activists. They were the sort of people who can walk through their community and be recognized without a name tag.

They are now charged with going door-to-door, supermarket to supermarket and gathering signatures from 3,000 registered voters by November 23.

The group at the event is called the South Shore Coalition for Legislative Reform. Eileen O'Brien of Hingham is the coordinator for the South Shore. She explained that the lines have been drawn roughly along the senate districts. Statewide 61,000 certified signatures must be gathered by that November date to put the question on the ballot next fall.

Logan, as most everyone in the region knows, is the Republican National Committeewoman from Massachusetts. She is also the State Committeewoman from the district and the executive director of the Republican Club.

But the gathering at her home was hardly a Republican promotion. Sen. George Bachrach, D-Watertown, was one of the chief speakers during the "party."

Then there was Elizabeth Fay of Common Cause. In my memory Common Cause has never been a front for Republicans. Other organizations banding together for legislative rules reform are: Citizens for Limited Taxation, CPPAX, Democrats for Rules Reform, Americans for Democratic Action, the Republican State Committee, Citizens for Handgun Control, the League of Women Voters and others.

As the current rules go, power is left primarily in the hands of the speaker of the house and the senate president.

"Over the years, reform-minded legislators have attempted to change the inner operations of the legislature but their efforts have consistently been rejected by the majority of the members. This refusal of the legislature to reform itself, coupled with two particular events, provided the fuel for the petition drive, according to the coalition.

"In December 1982, during the lame duck session, current rules were exploited by the leadership and certain members to pass several pieces of very controversial special interest legislation, including what many consider to be excessive pay increases for leadership and committee chairs. The igniting spark was provided at the Democratic Issues Convention this spring, when the leadership pulled its supportive delegates off the floor to prevent consideration of a rules reform amendment as well as several other popular amendments to the party platform.

"The initiative petition, as drafted, will provide for popular selection of leadership and committee assignments, more open committee procedures, more orderly and democratic floor action, more equal legislative salaries and more public financial records.

"The purpose of the event was to acquaint interested persons with the petition drive and to enlist workers to help gather signatures. In explaining why legislative reform is a priority of her organization, Elizabeth Fay of Common Cause stated that "For the last ten years, Common Cause has worked for legislative reforms which would shift control over committee appointments and the fate of bills from the leadership's stifling grip into the hands of the rank-and-file members. That ten-year effort to bring about reforms from the inside—and they should be done—has failed. The only remedy left is a ballot question put to the voters of Massachusetts."

"Anyone who would like to help collect signatures or contribute to the fundraising effort should call Bernice Jones at the Coalition office, 367-3176."

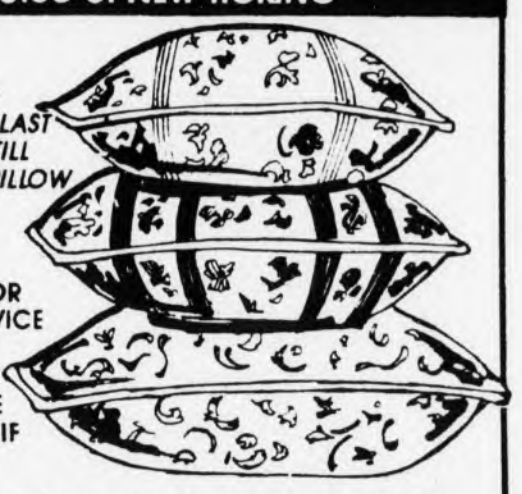
Area legislators vote on rules reform

The Senate dealt with eight rules reform issues so far in the 1983 legislative session.

The roll calls, as related by CPPAX, showed Sen. Allan R. McKinnon of Weymouth favoring the popular election of four members of the Rules Committee which then would have been empowered to select committee chairmen, something new done by the Senate President. McKinnon also voted for a bill to provide a mechanism for releasing bills tied up in committee upon petiton of a majority of senators. Both those attempts were defeated. McKinnon, and 34 other present senators, voted for the official rules reform package last March. The package somewhat reduced the hold of Ways and Means, put pay raises on a necessary roll call procedure, reduced the ability of leadership to hold night sessions and created a steering and policy committee.

McKinnon voted against other reform amendments to: put strict limits on night sessions, require monthly meetings of that steering and policy committee, require Ways and Means action on bills, mandate roll calls on any state pay raise bill and reduce the restrictions on Senate roll calls.

Sen. Anna Buckley, D-Brockton, was absent on the vote to reduce roll call restrictions. She voted for the official reform package - which went through unanimously. And she voted against every one of the other six amendments aimed at expanding that package.



There were 30 votes in the House on rules reform. CPPAX has provided a roll call for nine of what that organization considers were the important ones.

Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray, R-Cohasset, was absent on four of the votes. She came out against an amendment to provide for confirmation of committee positions - currently the posts are given out by the Speaker of the House. She favored four others to: allow radio and t.v. coverage of the House (it passed,) reduce night sessions, provide for roll calls in joint committees and bring the open meeting law to the legislature.

Rep. William Flynn, D-Hanover, was absent for one of the nine votes and was against all the others.

Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, wasn't elected until after most of the votes took place. He did vote for the amendments to bring the open meeting law to the legislative process and the amendment to provide for roll calls in joint committees.

Legislative leadership ...

There was a pitch for donations from Chip Faulkner of CLT who explained that it cost $20,000 for the petition drive to put the tax limitation question on the ballot.

Brian McSweeney of Hingham asked why Democrats should join the coalition. He wanted to know why they shouldn't work from inside to change the rules.

Sen. Bachrach, who has sponsored amendments before the legislature to change the rules, said that he's tried to work inside the party and failed.

"No one gives up power willingly," he said. He added that 23 of the 40 senators have committee chairmanships - now handed out at the discretion of the Senate President William Bulger. Committee chairmanships bring bonus pay.

"I would love to see the legislative leadership come to its senses and allow rules reform," Bachrach said. "But I suggest it will take an awfully big stick."

Bachrach said his attempts have been beaten down not just by Senate President Bulger but by liberal Democrats and Republicans.

School Bd. settles...

Crowell said he didn't know about the definite enrollments until the Labor Day weekend. He also said the Grade 3 students have scored 80 percent or better in national standardized tests. "We felt the class was not in jeopardy," he said.

Some parents said the class was given an aide two years ago. Crowell said Prop. 2½ cut back the aide last year but he feels this is a "compromise position."

Friday, he sent extra custodial help to help move the Grade 3 classes into larger classrooms. With the addition of the aide and larger classrooms, Crowell and most of the school committee members feel the situation is relieved.

The lone member to vote against the compromise was Martha Gjesteby who said another teacher was needed to strengthen reading and language skill instruction.

School board member Joe Nedrow who sat silent through the discussion said at the conclusion an aide is very qualified and was a good solution to the problem.

Appeals Board approves Yankee Oil variance...

Rousseu, has until Sept. 29 negotiated conditions for a permit. He is a laywer with Goodwin Proctor and Hoar.

Conditions

The conditions of the agreement are a concern with the planning board. Rousseau says it provides for a 25-year variance on the property, 50 employees, parking for 29 employees and maintenance of the house and grounds.

The Yankee Oil application says, "Under the bylaw the required number of parking spaces for the property as an office will be 190 spaces. Because there will be less than 20 employees and visitors at this site at any one time, literal enforcement of the provisions on parking would be excessive and might be detrimental to the overall purpose of the bylaw."

Yankee Oil refused to begin the variance proceedings all over again as planning board members asked.

Sullivan said since the company had achieved the unconditional variance, the value of the property has increased. He said the firm owed an obligation to the shareholders of the publicly owned company. Montle said there are 2500 shareholders and five million shares.

Planning board members are also concerned when the appeals board reached their decision. Booth indicated it had been reached at an August hearing.

But since the application's public hearing, the appeals board has not officially voted to accept the variance.

The planning board later voted against the variance. O'Toole, speaking as a private citizen, had asked if it would not be better to acquire the property for a public use.

Sullivan said his firm had written the proposals for the conditions of the variance. He said it was common practice in Cohasset, Hingham and Brockton for the applicant's lawyers to draw up the conditions to save legal fees for the municipality.

Powers said negotiations over the conditions has delayed the filing of the appeals board decision.

It was announced at the appeals board meeting Yankee Oil agreed to drop the 50-year variance to 25 years. This means if the company decides to sell, the new owner must apply for a new variance. The property reverts back to a single family residence.

O'Toole told the appeals board, we (planning board) do not object in principal to Yankee occuping the buildings as headquarters.

He added the board is recommending the terms of the occupancy should be determined in conjunction with the attorneys.

O'Toole said it wasn't the intent of the board not to prolong the negotiations but the board has some definite concerns.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the appeals nor the planning boards have the right to demand Yankee Oil give the town any land.

However, a town meeting vote to take the land by eminent domain, could nullify Yankee Oil's ownership. Yankee's right under eminent domain, is adequate compensation.

If Yankee withdraws, the permitted zoning uses for the former Cox Estate are a nursing, retirement homes or religious and educational institutions. The difference is these institutions would be taken off the town tax revenue.

District Attorneys, as well as an engineer and architect because it takes special talent to investigate "white collar crime." Barresi said there is a lot of "paper work" investigation and said there is a need to employ another engineer.

The office has a 24 hour, seven-day hot line for people who want to report cases for investigation. Sources of case studies include newspaper reports, referrals and department heads, Barresi said.

Perpetrators who may be guilty can be taken care of in two ways. Some are prosecuted and others are recommended for managerial action (the results of which must be reported to the Inspector General).

Managerial action may include dismissal, demotion, suspension without pay, etc., Barresi said.

Recently Barresi has turned his efforts to prevention. His office has issued a handbook dealing with state law and he encourages discussion with his office to prevent future problems.

Barresi's appointment is for five years, and he may only be reappointed for five more under the statute. He is not involved with any political campaigns.

My policy expires (date)

On January 1, your phone won't turn into a monster.

If you're like most people, you've heard that the Bell System is breaking up. And that, after January 1, 1984, you'll have to look to separate sources for local phone service, long-distance phone service, and equipment.

If you're like most people, you're concerned that this will turn your phone service into a monster.

It won't.

New England Telephone will still be your local phone company. We'll still provide you with the same good service New Englanders have counted on for the last 100 years.

Divestiture will mean some changes. For individuals, for business—and for the future.

We think most of the changes will be for the better. And, as they happen, we'll tell you about them. Because the more you know about change, the easier it is to handle.

Some things won't change.

New England Telephone will still provide local phone service. All you have to do is pick up the phone and call. The way you always have.

You've probably heard that the cost of local calling will increase after divestiture. That's because long-distance charges will no longer pay part of the cost of local service. However, the cost of long-distance calling may be reduced. And New England Telephone also offers options—like Measured Service or Unlimited Service—to help you control the cost of local service.

Some things will change.

Among the things that are changing are the ways you obtain equipment and repairs.

New England Telephone will no longer provide home telephone equipment. If you want to buy phones, you can buy them from any number of suppliers. So shop around. Compare prices, features, and service warranties to get the best buys for your money.

If you prefer to lease your phones, simply keep the ones we've provided. But after January 1, you'll automatically be leasing them from AT&T.

Whoever supplies your phones will be responsible for their repair. Of course, New England Telephone will continue to maintain and repair your phone lines.

A short course on long-distance options.

After the break-up, New England Telephone will continue to provide you with long distance service within your area code. And we'll give you access to long-distance service outside your area code. So you can still make and receive long-distance calls.

Your current long-distance service will continue after January 1.

However, if you want to choose a new long-distance company, check your Yellow Pages for a complete listing. Then compare rates and services and make your choice.

What lies ahead?

New England Telephone's been in the forefront of changes in telephone service and technology for the last 100 years. And that's just where we intend to stay.

We're managing today's changes, and we'll continue to offer you new options, all geared to making your phone service the best it can be.

There's been a lot of noise about the Bell System breaking up, but just remember New England Telephone's got it all together.

If you have any questions about the ways these changes will affect you, call our special, toll-free "Let's Talk" number. It's 1 800 555-5000. Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Selectmen return 'no confidence' vote to union

Fire Chief Martin Dooley hired a personal attorney to continue meetings with firefighters to resolve their vote of no confidence, Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur said at a Sept. 28 meeting.

McArthur first read her letter addressed to William Protulis, who presented the vote of no confidence at an Aug. 10 meeting.

The letter said, "In response to that vote and other complaints brought to selectmens' attention informally by members of the fire department, attempts have been made by this board to address and settle these matters through meetings and discussions between firefighters and Chief Dooley."

McArthur's letter concluded, "Obviously, these meetings have not produced the intended result as demonstrated by the firefighter's recent unwillingness to meet with Chief Dooley."

Dooley and his attorney plan to meet with town counsel, the executive board of the union, and the board of selectmen.

Selectman John DeBassio said, "The board has continually tried to set up dialogue between Chief Dooley and the firefighters. I am receptive to any attempt to get parties to discuss these difficulties as an ongoing practice."

The board will not act on the vote of no confidence. But they will continue to meet with all parties involved.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson wrote a letter to the board that said, "While it is not expressly stated in Mrs. McArthur's letter of Sept. 9, it is the board's position that they cannot accept or act on the resolution without specific written allegations supporting the unions position."

Selectman Clifford Mitman said, "We reject the vote of no confidence because it has no substance."

Selectmen said that in the meantime the board will not hear charges, on this matter, informally. All charges must be written and transcribed by a certified stenographer.

Five named to ambulance study board

By Cindi Bondi

Selectmen appointed members to serve on the Ambulance Study Committee at a Sept. 28 meeting.

The five members are: Arne Gjesteby, Roy Fitzsimmons, firefighter Mark Trask, Dr. Steven Golden, and nurse Pamela Johansen.

Under the guidelines that one member is fire service employee, at least two members shall be professional or employees of the medical field or health service and two members shall be drawn from the community at large.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley will serve on the committe as an ex-officio who will not vote.

The final recommendations of the committee will be reported to selectmen by Feb. 15, 1984. An interim report will be due on Dec. 15, 1983.

The purpose of the Ambulance Study Committee will be to research and evaluate all methods of ambulance service delivery such as: The current method of ambulance service delivery by the Town., Replacement of the current method, in part or in whole, by Cohasset contracting a private ambulance service., A regionalization arrangement with one or more neighboring towns. and Allowing individuals to contract a private ambulance service

The committee will also focus on: The method which provides the optimum response to the community service needs, The most cost effective method, The impact on current town employees and Contemplated state laws, rules and regulations relating to emergency medical service.

Water Commission chairman William Montuori: "On the negative side, the saddest thing is the fire in which all three children of the family died, recently. On the positive side is that we can have nice democratic discussions at town meeting and people can differ on issues, but not hate each other."

Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle: "Five selectmen."

Former candidate for State Representative Ted Ford: "The town's decision on the sewer issue."

Town Accountant William Signorelli: "The biggest innovation was the purchase of the central computer system. This will be very beneficial to the town. Town Counsel Richard Henderson: "The sewer project."

Police Sergeant and Recreation Commission Chairman Richard Barrow: "Five selectmen."

Board of Assessors Chairman Brian Wilkin: "Due to Proposition 2½, the revaluation, because the town is limited as to how much it can spend, it is important to have a good revaluation and keep it updated."

Conservation Commission Chairman Patricia Buckley: "The sewer issue."

Former Chairman Democratic Town Committee and only women elected to nine-member former Charter Commission Helen Barrow: "Five selectmen - an eventual fulfillment of one of the Charter Commission's objectives."

Donna McGee, Chairman Democratic Town Committee and Chairman Structure of Town Government Committee: "The establishment of the position of Executive Secretary, which has brought a level of professionalism to Town Hall."

Julie Guild, Chairman Republican Town Committee: "The five-man Board of Selectmen and the sewer — both are equally important."

around town

☐Congratulations to the Trask family. Janet Trask, wife of Fire Capt. Mark Trask, gave birth to Shannon Leigh Monday morning at 12:22 a.m.

Shannon weighed seven pounds, 11 ounces. Paternal grandparents are Harry and Joan Trask of Bancroft Road. Maternal grandparents are Don and Marilyn Clark of Ashburnham.

Julie Gailinas

☐Cohasset sales associate Julie Gailinas has exceeded one million dollars in property sales this year for the Jack Conway Co., according to office manager Muriel Desmond. For the ninth consecutive year, Julie has reached that exclusive million dollar status among brokers. She began her real estate career in the Hingham office of Jack Conway Co., transferred to Scituate, and has remained in the Cohasset location for the past five years.

Prior to her Conway association, Julie was assistant to the president of Putnam Fund of Boston, and later worked in mutual funds and brokerage for Kidder Peabody of Boston. A graduate of Northeastern University with a major in real estate, Julie's great love is selling real estate as investment property. A self-described entrepeneur, Julie frequently deals in investment sales for the Conway Co. in Cohasset and neighboring communities.

Julie has earned her Graduate Realtors Institute (GRI) designation, and is a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS.) She and her husband, Paul, have two children, Paula, of New York, and Phillip, who resides on the North Shore.

☐Penelope J. Paton, a junior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Paton of 364 Jeruselem Rd., has been named to the dean's list at Wheaton College for the second semester of the 1982-83 school year.

☐Received a phone call from Walter Sweeney last week. He wanted to let everyone know that he is to appear on the television show "Good Morning America" Wednesday, Oct. 12. Walter and his wife, Nanci, will be driving to New York, and plan on driving to Cohasset after his interview on the air. Be sure to tune in, he will be talking about his drug and alcohol program. Watch for him around town, as he plans to stay for a while and introduce his wife to the area (Nanci is a California gal who hasn't ever been in New England. Timing should be perfect, foliage and all!).

☐Walter may be here for a gala event that is in the works. Hull is planning a reunion of the two football teams that started the rivalry which still goes on today. The four teams (yesterday's and today's) will meet for breakfast before the Hull-Cohasset game, scheduled for Oct. 29.

☐Ann Pompeo's dog, a black Lab named Soot, gave birth to six puppies last month. Three of the puppies are black, three are brown; the last bulletin on the "babies" was that there are still a few pups left! See Ann for details.

Boy Scout Troop 28 raised more than $400 for the Nardo Family at a car wash. L to R: Michael Lelecas, Bill Anstead, David Farrag, Marsha O'Quin (of Pilgrim Coop), Nicholas Lelecas and Chris McLaughlin.

☐The committee that ran the 5th Annual Jimmy Fund Tournament at Hatherly Country Club recently reports that about $4,000 was raised. One-hundred and 26 people played, among them many of Cohasset's town officials. Three of our selectmen were spotted on the various tees, and rumor has it that next year Mary Jane McArthur will be there too. It really was a community effort, with (Hugo's) Dan Leahy supplying the "treats before the eats"; several gals, under the direction of Polly Litchfield, ran the halfway house and fed everyone with food donated by the George H. Mealy Post.

A lot of local businesses gave prizes for the raffle (which rasied over $600), including Carmen at the Strawberry Parfait and Peter at the Log and Line.

☐Hats off to Cohasset's only "Do-Dad." Each year the girl scouts go on a camping trip, with their Dads along to "help." This year they went to New Hampshire and Rocky Laugelle was the "Do-Dad." A super time was had by everyone.

☐Dennis Buckley, a 1962 CHS graduate, was recently promoted to Lt. Colonel. He worked his way up from an enlisted man. Congratulations to Dennis are certainly in order.

Caught up with a bit of college news last week!

☐Karen Ekberg loves her roommate, and loves college life.

☐Bob Meers scored his first touchdown last week (first of many is a safe bet).

☐Don O'Neill is going to try to get home next weekend.

☐Danny Bowen did get home last weekend.

☐Several of the students are counting the days until Thanksgiving!

Five years later, issues remain the same

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Some things change—often imperceptibly, but they do change. Other things seem to remain the same—at least for a long time.

A review of the front pages of the first six months of the Mariner brings those truisms into sharp focus.

Oct. 12, 1978: The story at the top of the front page titled "The Sweet Sounds of the Music Circus Fade," by Bucky Yardume, says but some sour notes linger regarding the appeal by 21 families concerning noise and traffic, records the counter suit complaint filed by the Circus in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham regarding adverse publicity and harassment for damages of $350,000.

The front pages shows Tara and Dean Volungis, children of Judy Volungis, a Community Center Board Member, at the Center's fund raising Oktoberfest.

The Center, which had been slated to close, was rescued through the efforts of former Mariner reporter Laura Doherty, her husband John, and current Selectman Rocco Laugelle and his wife Peggy.

They enlisted Jean Salvador to run the Oktoberfest dinner. Jean, who recently ran a reception for the new Fire Chief, Martin Dooley, is famous also for her Portugese dinner for all inhabitants of Cohasset with any Portugese ancestors, and being a prime mover behind the Haunted House—no longer continued—which raised thousands of dollars for Jaycee charities. Volungis was a recent candidate for school committee.

Oct. 19: School Superintendent John Maloney raps press coverage regarding incidents of violence between Cohasset and Hull.

Oct. 26: Alternate School at CHS made the front pages of both this and the Nov. 23 issue. There is also a picture of one of Salvador's "creatures" at the Jaycee's Haunted House on Beechwood Street.

Nov. 2: Feature story on Faith Bowker, Grade 1 Osgood School teacher.

Nov. 9: Mary Jeanette Murray with 2,189 Cohasset votes was reelected to House over Caroline Stauffer with 1,173 Cohasset votes. Gerry Studds, unopposed for Congress, with 2,735 votes, was Cohasset's top vote getter.

Williams Weeks and Thomas Lincoln received one vote each.

Nov. 16: Tragedies to two children were front page news on this issue and on the Nov. 30 issue. One child collapsed while walking to her school bus stop and died, and a powerlift garage door on Forest Avenue fell on a child resulting in fatal injuries. (Cohasset had a recent tragedy involving three children who died in a fire.)

Nov. 23: Sediment Discolors Cohasset Waters (it still does) by Nancy Burns. (Nancy is now Chairman of the Board of Selectmen in Hull.)

Dec. 7: The Village Fair—photo occupies top half of front page. (The Fair has recently been enlarged to be an ecumenical fund raiser for five Cohasset churches.)

Dec. 14: Story on CHS Basketball reports on 6 ft. 5 in. Co-captain Paul Farren (who recently made news accepting a pro offer from the Cleveland Browns to play football).

Dec. 21: Supt. Maloney files zero increase school budget (recently the schools have made news with their requests for thousands of dollars in excess of their budget requests at town meetings).,

Dec. 28: Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. returns after a five-day suspension without pay that was handed down last week by his father, Police Chief Randolph Feola.

Jan 4, 1979: Story titled Cohasset in '79—a look ahead mentions several Cohasset leaders who no longer are in office.

These were Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark; Civil Defense Director Lester Hiltz; Building Inspector James Litchfield; Water Department Supt. Edwin Pratt and Police Chief Randolph Feola.

Also mentioned but still in office are Treasurer-Collector Gordon Flint, and Town Accountant William Signorelli.

On the receiving end of "walkmans" are Heather St. Onge and Sarah Hamilton as they walk South Main Street.

Jan. 11: School Board Reduces Staff by Judy Epstein.

Jan. 18: School Board Chips Away at Budget: "Jack Langmaid suggested that the Math Department could survive without a new mini-computer and other video equipment."

Jan. 25: Supt. Maloney Raps School Committee—obtaining back-up copies of budget materials (John Langmaid and Patricia Walsh—).

Feb. 1: A rash of break-ins still plagues CHS (what else is new?).

Feb. 16: Rocco Laugelle and Doris Golden toss hats into ring for selectman's seat vacated by Mary Jeanette Murray.

Feb. 23: State Building Inspector Jospeph DeCiccio and Cohasset Building Inspector James Litchfield inspected Town Hall after Litchfield questioned eligibility of Town Hall to be renovated at all. (Laugelle is still an incumbent, and Town Hall has been redecorated)—but citizens still have to climb stairs to get to town offices. (Where is the promised ramp for handicapped?)

March 1: Cohasset and Hull Seek Joint Cleanup of Pollution-Ridden Straits Pond (haven't we heard that old refrain recently?).

March 8: Alcohol education program sponsored by South Shore Council on Alcoholism and implemented by the Social Service League begins with ADA meetings with students in-school on Mondays and Wednesdays at CHS instead of at St. Luke's Church in Scituate. (Parents: Do you know what your teenager drinks?)

March 15: Cohasset's Second Town Hall—a feature on the Log and Line Restaurant on Ripley Road.

March 22: Merchants Attack 3A Zoning Plan—requiring future business lots to be 40,000 sq. ft.

March 29: Irene Brown, Martha Gjesteby, John Kinchla and Gerard Reed enter School Committee race.

Community Center workshops

Several new courses and workshops are beginning at the Cohasset Community Center. Registration is weekdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., 383-0088.

Laila Roukonakis will share her knitting skills with her students in a two session workshop, Thursday, Oct. 13 and Oct. 20, from 9 to 11 a.m.

Continental Knitting is a method of rapid knitting using the yarn in the left hand. Students will learn to knit, pearl, increase and decrease, and make ribbing in these workshops.

Two basket workshops begin this week. Donna Darling Kelly leads an Egg Basket workshop on Fridays, Oct. 7 and 14, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. This handsome round egg basket features the Godseye four fold lashing style and slatted rib with flat reeds.

A workshop for somewhat experienced basket-makers, the New England Square Bottom Basket will be held in three sessions, Wednesdays Oct. 5, 12 and 19, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The first editorial

As Cohasset's own weekly newspaper, the Mariner (we sell no boats, so please not marina), will strive toward publishing news for and about the people of Cohasset.

Our credo is to leave the worldly reporting to the Boston Globes of journalism. We shall focus on what happens here — at the churches, in the schools, at town hall, along the harbor and around town — and if that prompts you to call us provincial, so be it. We plead guilty.

Our provincialism, however, does not mean we are so parochial to suggest that Cohasset wall off its borders and turn forever inward. This beautiful town, so rich in history, is no secret. Nor, as some might wish, can it be a hiding place.

Regionalization, a common weapon of bureaucracy, and the continuing flow of state mandated programs have already intruded here and will continue to do so. As part of one of the fastest growing areas of Massachusetts — indeed, in all of New England — Cohasset is as wedded to Greater Boston as Reading or Wellesley or Walpole. It is part of the MBTA District and pays a proportionate share of the huge MBTA deficit. It is part of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council and is profoundly affected by legislative action on Beacon Hill.

Despite adopting the Home Rule Amendment several years ago, the legislature, and state government in general, continue to have a firm hold on the fiscal health of cities and towns. As a result of collective bargaining and minimum salaries mandated by the legislature for example town meeting voters have relatively little control over local spending. The result is the town meeting syndrome that we so often see, as voters swallow the camel and choke on the gnat. It is not at all unusual for a multi-million dollar school budget to slide through without a murmur while debate drones on over the purchase of a new police cruiser. Town meetings can challenge spending for a cruiser; under the state's fiscal autonomy law for school committees, they have no say over school budgets.

In its coverage of town government, the Mariner will attempt to explain how much services cost and why they are needed. We shall keep a sharp eye on the tax rate and most probably watch it rise along with our readers.

We will devote space to all town government agencies — the selectmen, the boards of health and appeals, the housing authority, the recreation commission and the advisory board. We shall pay strict attention to the planning board and the conservation commission, because in any growing town that is where the action is.

When we talk of the building boom that gripped the South Shore in the 1960s and early 70s (and saw towns such as Marshfield go from a population of 6000 in 1960 to more than 21,000 today) the issue has been not so much one of growth vs. no-growth as it has with the quality of that growth. Quality of growth, even for a town so undisturbed as Cohasset, will remain an issue for the next 20 years. So far, Cohasset has been able to accept modest growth without sacrificing its charm, and that is a tribute to its people and the men and women at the helm of town government. The town is a Boston bedroom, of course, but not in the mold of Braintree or Randolph. There are still places here to

Oh, Oh, Jupiter crosses Pluto

By Claire McDonough

You say you've been feeling irresponsible lately? You say you've noticed that apathy is everywhere, and frankly you don't give a darn? You tell me you've longed to kick over the traces, but you don't know why? Well, were you aware that Mercury was retrograde for most of September? Did you know that even as you read this, Jupiter is conjunct Uranus and they're both semi-sextile to Saturn? Had you realized that not only is Venus conjunct Pluto but that they're both sextile to Neptune which is in the sign of Sagittarius? I thought not. Naturally, as soon as I noticed these planatary configurations I immediately consulted Madam Zolar in her chic little ashram on Third Cliff and begged for words of wisdom. Fortunately, Madam was in a good mood, and I didn't have to cross her palm with more than a piece or three of silver for her to impart the following:

Aries (March 21 - April 20): Your usual Martian energy has deserted you, possibly because Mars is presently dallying in Virgo, a singularly unenergetic sign. You would be well advised to spend the next month in bed, hoping that people will remember all the insults you threw at them last month when you were in better form.

Taurus (April 21 - May 20): Things are no better for you than they are for your Arien brothers. Scorpio opposes your natal house, and when Scorpio opposes you, you might just as well pack it in. Your stubborn persistence will be unavailing. Go on vacation.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): As usual, you are not one, but two frolicksom individuals. Both of you are in trouble. The knock at your door is not opportunity. It is a federal tax auditor. This is the month when you find out if your Swiss bank account was set up properly.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): When you read this, the Moon will just have completed a transit through your natal house, leaving you feeling weepy and somewhat tragic. Unfortunately, natives of the other eleven signs are all too distracted to pay any attention, so you will decide that histrionics are useless and impulsively buy a Moped.

Leo (July 23 - August 22): With Saturn squaring you and everyone else ignoring you, you will not feel you are getting the homage that is rightly yours this month. Your idea of hiring a skywriter to advertise your sterling qualities is brilliant, but unfortunately no one is looking up.

Virgo (August 23 - September 22): A wonderful month for you Virgo natives. There's very little energy going around, but you've got all that there is. You will spend the month doing things that you really enjoy — like straightening bureau drawers, cleaning closets, and feeling superior to all the lesser mortals who are just schlepping around the Zodiac.

Libra (September 23 - October 22): Three members of the opposite sex will propose to you this month. You will be unable to make a choice, and will instead take up Yoga and macrobiotic cooking. This will be a big mistake.

Scorpio (October 23 - November 21): You will have a wonderful month. Your talents for unearthing other people's secrets will earn you a phone call from Norma Nathan and an offer from "Sixty Minutes." While most of the other signs of the Zodiac are on vacation, you will have the opportunity to pick up most of the marbles.

Sagittarius (November 22 - December 20): This month natives of most signs will be lackadaisical, apathetic, and downright messy. For once you will fit right in with everyone else.

Capricorn (December 21 - January 20): A great month. You will find most people easy prey to your blind ambition and ruthless scheming. Enjoy it while it lasts. Next month comes retribution.

Aquarius (January 21 - February 18): There you go being zany and funloving again! This month, however, people are generally more tolerant and you may even go 30 days without a visit from the local police.

Pisces (February 19 - March 20): The windshield wiper on your new car will not work. This will be unfortunate, as every time you drive it will rain. You will have many plans, none of which will succeed. This will give you the opportunity to cry and feel sorry for yourself. Congratulations!

Note To All Signs: An unscrupulous sun sign astrologer will try to take advantage of your gullibility. Ignore her. She only does it because the newspaper for which she works pays her heaps of money.

Area voter league thanks survey responders

Letter

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Marshfield-Duxbury League of Women Voters, I would like to thank all readers who responded to our June Transportation Survey.

With the Southeast Expressway Reconstruction Project fast approaching, the call from the vast majority of those responding was for more frequent and more efficient transportation between their towns and Boston or at the very least, between their towns and the "T."

The survey results were tabulated and forwarded to Sen. Allan McKinnon this summer.

Special people review fifth anniversary

View from the schools

By Richard Conley
School Committee Chairman

We are all well aware that the last five years have been difficult years for public education in Massachusetts. Many communities have faced traumatic changes in their school systems as teacher layoffs and plant closings attempted to pare budgets to the Procustrean Couch of Proposition 2½.

Mandatory spending limits and the loss of fiscal autonomy by the state's school committees, heralded by many as a step toward financial accountability, brought with it a demand to maintain and improve quality and service level while making do with less spending power.

Declining enrollment throughout the Commonwealth muddied the waters still further as systems faced the dilemma of the need for new curriculum innovations and grouping techniques designed to handle these conditions as well as the political reality of a smaller parent support group.

In Cohasset, while the past years have seen considerable belt tightening, the delivery of educational services to the majority of the student body has not been drastically effected. In fact the last two years has marked an outstanding record of student achievement in terms of college placement, testing and co-curricula successes.

The effect of the cutbacks has been subtle with our teachers and administrators following the lead of their superintendent in keeping people and programs "alive and well" in order that our students will continue to receive much more than the basic of education.

Cohasset demands more of its schools than "the average." It is a college or post secondary school oriented community, proud of its scholastic record and background and quite aware of the fact that its young people are a precious commodity who must be provided a setting which will allow them to reach their maximum potential.

But the subtle damage which is inherent in all major funding cutbacks is slowly being felt.

The first visible signs are the report and renovation needs of our school buildings.

Roofs are 20 to 30 years old and need attention; brick work, painting, space conversion, cable TV, electrical circuitry. The list is endless and that list is growing because the dollars are being spent for educating children and not upkeep and repair.

New or replacement of equipment and new or expanded programs for the four years have been placed on hold! In the vital emerging field of computer literacy and instruction, this holding pattern is a little short of criminal.

Obsolete support equipment as well as dated instructional equipment is being made to do as a dedicated staff quietly finds ways to run quality programs for much less of our tax dollars.

All of this is fine but looking ahead to the increasing pressure from the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which calls for higher expectations and goals for all learners, the local communities must begin to ask themselves just from where the money is to come.

The facts support the premise that the public schools have borne the brunt of Proposition 2½. That being the case, there is little fat left in school budgets.

And five years of "making do" is fine but when you consider the capital investment that the towns and cities have in their schools, isn't an ounce of prevention still worth a pound of cure? Remember our New England bridges and highways!

U.S. Secretary of Education, Terrell Bell calls for higher pay for teachers as one of his obvious "quality improvement moves" but fails to remember that in states such as California and Massachusetts, Vermont and Maine, the teachers have lost between 22 to 25 percent of their earning power in the market place over the last decade.

In Massachusetts, Proposition 2½ prohibits town and cities from increasing their spending which means that reasonable staff salary adjustments must be funded over the bodies of "RIF'd" teachers, this in turn further compounds the quality question.

But to forestall further prediction of gloom, let us look at some "Pathways" for our Town. The enrollment picture is both good and bad. Good in the sense that declining enrollment will mean less staff, but bad in the resulting inefficiency inherent in a small school system. It is a fallacy to expect that as enrollment drops, the cost of educating each child will drop correspondingly. This is a mathematical impossiblity. Consider the formula for calculating the Cost Per Pupil Ratio. CPP equals Operational Cost, divided by Enrollment.

When the denominator of that fraction decreases and the numerator remains constant, or increases due to inflation, the CPP is bound to go up. There is no reason to believe that the nature of the Cohasset Community will change from its academic preparatory posture and this will mean that the system will have to expect small classes in order to run quality enrichment or remedial preparatory programs.

Its attempts to stay comprehensive and offer viable options to youngsters not going on to college, (shop, home economics, business courses, etc.) will also be more expensive as numbers get smaller.

But a look at the incoming kindergarten class shows an increasse of a dozen students, and if this trend continues, all three of your schools will be needed.

Therefore, substantial dollars for facility renovation and repair must be planned. The school budget can help with this repair, but cannot handle large "multi thousand dollar" projects.

Our crystal ball also shows a need for much more cooperation with other area schools and colleges and a working partnership with business and industry with mutually agreed upon goals and objectives.

Like our new athletic league which has been designed to accommodate the needs of smaller schools, our academic programs must also find ways to continue to offer top level preparation.

The next five years will require careful planning and some tough decisions on your School Committee's part. We feel that we have the courage and the experience to find the best path to continued quality for all our young people. With a dedicated staff and fine student body, we will continue to excel. We ask your continued support in achieving those efforts.

The Clergy speaks

By Rev. Edward Atkinson
First Parish in Cohasset

Cohasset is a place where people like to settle down permanently, the "Long Rocky Place" where a life may be built upon a foundation of stone. Outside the winds of rapid and revolutionary change buffet us, but here we seek a refuge, a snug harbor tucked behind the craggy ledges of Whitehead, an illusion of changelessness as symbolized by a granite lighthouse perched off our shores, a white steepled Meeting House gracing our Common, historical museums nestled in a quaint village center and lobster boats swinging gently at their moorings, images of a simpler age when values were clearer and the tempo of life as sedate as the movement of a sailing ship across the distant horizon.

We resist, even fear the changes that seem to threaten our rock bound sanctuary and yet as we witnessed five years ago in the fury of the 1978 Blizzard there are times when the waves crash over our protective barriers and we are forced to deal with the larger world.

All things change. Change is life. Cohasset is changing in spite of its deceptive image of changelessness. During the past five years 293 babies have been born to Cohasset families, 298 marriages have been celebrated and 275 of our residents have died. How deeply do we miss those men and women who dwelt among us only a short while ago! From more ducks on the Common pond and more goldfish beneath it to fewer bottles at Sandy Beach, Cohasset is changing.

From fewer children in our schools to more traffic on our roads Cohasset is changing. From a lot more water in our expanded reservoir to a lot less space in our town dump Cohasset is changing.

Since the maiden issue of the Mariner we have had two new police chiefs, a new fire chief, a new superintendent of schools, a new town manager, a Greek Orthodox congregation has been added to our religious institutions.

We now have five selectmen where there were three, five school committee members where there were six and Proposition 2½ limits our revenues and restrains the former fiscal autonomy of our School Committee.

What will the next five years bring? Many more significant changes. The Commonwealth and common decency demand that we do something about our waste water problem. In just a few more years the expanding use of computers and the introduction of cable television will revolutionize the exchange of information within Cohasset rendering it as easy to learn about meetings of the Board of Health and the size of our tax assessment as we presently hear of war in Lebanon and the magnitude of the federal deficit.

Cohasset will continue to change and the most important choice each of us must make is not whether or not our solutions will be conventional or innovative but whether we will work together and plan together for change. By helping us to stay informed and in touch the publication of the Mariner has and will contribute to that which holds us together.

The reader is most important

By Lois Martin
Executive Editor

The hometown newspaper that reaches the pinnacle of five years publication is one that takes time to celebrate.

The stories of those years, the photos, the remembrances are whipped out of files for two purposes: first to give direction in what events, people and places are of note, and second to create for the town an anniversary publication . . . for the record.

It is with good reason a community's business takes pause to celebrate. And this business, one of bearing news on the local level, has privileges not shared by all journalists.

The Mariner staff is given the opportunity of being part of the town it's charged to reflect, inform and inspire. When a "little paper" records events, it does not do so unimpassioned. It shares the moods, the highs and lows of the town it represents.

Thus in these five years, for all happenings published, we, as staff members, have participated rather than simply recorded.

The purpose of the hometown paper is unique. It has been our intent to be natural as we are obligated to be professional.

And warm. If there is one characteristic accorded a weekly that may escape the major daily, it is the chance to be part of a town.

And in the strata of important people, it is the reader who is most important. The advertiser invests his money, supporting the Mariner, because the families of Cohasset have found the Mariner to be a basic part of their week.

To kick off the next five years, the Mariner would reaffirm its goal of being part of this town by reflecting it . . . better and better.

We are appreciative of the men and women, residents, businesspeople, who have made room for the Mariner in Cohasset, as part of their lives.

So Watt's new...in political gaffsmanship

By Lois Martin

I have ordered Jimmy Watt's Christmas gift. Somebody has to be his friend. And while he has "every kind of mix you can have" on his celebrated commission, I have a variety of friends to which I need to add an underdog.

That'll be Jim. I have chosen for him personal stationary. It's a form apology letter. All he'll need to do is fill in the particular gaff for which he's apologizing, the place, the date, and he can send it.

No more tedious hours need to be taken from his position as Secretary of the Interior to come up with poignant regret and touching 'scuse-mes.

PATCHES

Envelopes will come with the good white paper, your classic Republican choice. It wouldn't hurt of course, if the President and minority groups and commission members had the foresight to send self-addressed envelopes to Mr. Watt for the pending apologies. That courtesy lacking, I'll include pre-addressed air mail, one-day service envelopes that'll deliver his apology the same day as his insults.

Wouldn't hurt for an aide to drop those in the mail the moment Jim starts his speeches.

But be fair. How much fun has George Schultz been, or George Bush for that matter? (George Bush is Vice President of the United States.)

In what might have been a glacine administration James Watt has enlivened the four years by hopping around on one foot while keeping the other in his mouth. No small feat even for a physically fit man.

His remarks, or offensive insults, have been termed "off the cuff zingers" by Time Magazine this week. In my mental meanderings I've liked to think Jim Watt said those things on purpose. They were notes on his little index cue cards. He's proud to announce the commission on public land coal leasing. The man who was really ticked was the one who wasn't a woman, a black, a Jew, or using Watt's insensitive word, "a cripple."

If you want to talk handicap, talk Watt. His mouth broke again that day at the breakfast speech. In fact his jaw has been a disability with frequency. It opens and embarrassments fall out.

Each of us has had moments in the middle of the night when we awoke to moan about a heedless comment we've made. It is worse, I'm sure, when the comment is clearly heard, understood and reported repeatedly verbatum.

The result is that James Watt hasn't had a night's sleep since he became a Cabinet Secretary. And when you're tired, it's easier to make mistakes.

I am uncertain about Mr. Watt's marital status. But if he has status with a wife, she must be dead serious every night when she says, "How did everything go at the office today, Dear?"

Perhaps Watt has ulterior or interior motives in his remarks. He gets more requests for public appearances than he can handle so he's subtly weeding out a few — the Indians (from an earlier gaff), musicians and people who like music (Beach Boys blunder); and now women, blacks, religious organizations and people who have physical or mental limitations.

If that isn't the case, he best keep my form apology stationary handy.

People don't want high ranking public officials to be insulting. They prefer to pay a comedian for political satire. And at the rate he's going, James Watt could have great royalties coming from those comics.

Brain teasers

More Brain Teasers to stretch your mind:

1. What word when spelled backwards sounds like a double rum? Its first three letters are the same as its last three.

2. And while we're on the subject of words, go ahead and reduce the following phrase to a four-letter word that begins and ends with the same letter; "A conglomeration of heterogeneous incompatibles which are edible."

3. What's the name of the device that helps people see through the brick walls of their home?

4. Heads up for this one: Would you rather be nearly drowned or almost saved?

5. In area, what is the largest town in Massachusetts?

6. We can think of six common words that end in sage. Name three and you can sit down.

7. Why don't people need an anesthetic when they undergo a tonsorial operation?

8. Why didn't William Howard Taft run for a third term as President of the United States?

9. What well known animal jumps when it walks and sits down when it stands up?

10. Could this be true: Portugal is not the country in which Portuguese is spoken by the most people.

Answers

1. Murmur.
2. Hash.
3. A window.
4. Nearly drowned unless your self destructive.
5. Plymouth.
6. Dosage, corsage, message, visage, usage and presage.
7. It doesn't hurt to get a haircut.
8. He wasn't elected to a second term.
9. A kangaroo.
10. It's true, because that honor goes to Brazil.

DON'T MISS IT!

Sections of Jerusalem Road may be sewered

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Hull Selectmen voted recently to authorize Chairman Nancy Burns to sign a grant application which may result in sewering a portion of Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

A portion of 6,500 feet of Jerusalem Road from Black Rock Beach to Hull St. will be sewered under the plan, if funded, with the effluent going to the Hull sewer plant.

Hull has made the grant application to the state Dept. of Quality Engineering under the Clean Lakes Program in an effort to restore and preserve Straits Pond where algae, insect and odor problems have plagued residents of both towns.

Leonard Hersch, Hull Selectman and real estate broker, said at a recent Hull selectmen's meeting, he feels the problem is so severe, it may have a detrimental effect on home values in the area.

The grant application says the extension of lateral sewer lines to the unsewered areas which abut the pond will elimiante raw sewage discharge into the pond.

The cost in 1977 dollars is estimated at $700,000 for Cohasset, and $2.4 million overall.

There is a warning included that these costs (which need to be udpated) are not based on an engineering field study, and the Jerusalem Road section "is mostly in a rock cut which upon investigation could be more expensive than indicated."

McCabe said he had prepared a document for the Cohasset selectmen's approval.

Cohasset Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis and Cohasset Sewer Plant Chief Operator Manuel Salvador said they had not heard of this grant application.

Cohasset Executive Secretary, Mark Lanza, said Monday he had discussed the grant with Cohasset selectmen at the close of a meeting "a couple of weeks ago." He said they had not voted on the matter, but had agreed to it. He said there was no reason for DeSantis to know, since he was not making the application, but "he knows now."

Hull Health Agent Jennifer Lamb wrote many of the houses on Richards and Eastman Roads (Hull) are not on public sewage and were erected prior to Title V Regulations. "Therefore, it is likely that nutrients from various sewage disposal systems are leaching into the pond. Since the pond has been a source of nuisance to residents of both Hull and Cohasset over the years, and most especially this summer due to various environemtnal conditions that existed, I would strongly recommend that all efforts be made to obtain public sewage for those houses on private systems that abut Straits Pond."

Guided tour of Society's three museums

The Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Recreation Department will co-sponsor a special guided tour of the Society's three museums located at Cohasset Center. This will be the final opportunity for area residents to view the Society's Maritime Museum, Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Independence Gown Museum this year, since they closed for the winter season Sept. 30.

The co-sponsored tour will be held Wednesday, Oct. 12 at 11 a.m. Admission to all three museum buildings will be $1.

To pre-register for this unusual event please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at the Town Hall, 383-6791. The tour will meet at the Historical Society's Maritime Museum, Elm Street, Cohasset. All South Shore area residents and visitors are invited.

The first editorial...

take the road less traveled by.

While Cohasset may never teem with people, it will continue to need foresight in planning and wisdom in conservation. We will make it a habit to support both.

In its news columns, the Mariner will devote considerable coverage to the schools, knowing that school spending represents so much of the town budget and that schools touch so many people.

We shall try to be a paper of record, noting births and deaths and a good deal of what goes between. As Cohasset's weekly newspaper, we will cover all of Cohasset from Beechwood to Jerusalem Road. We aim to be constructive, cohesive and friendly.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Proof that our column's recipes end up in some far-away kitchens is the note I received from Thelma Wilkinson of Stockton, Calif. She wrote: "You wrote amusingly about tomatoes, so I thought you might be interested in the following recipe. It is good with all kinds of meat, fish or fowl."

TOMATO RELISH

Peel approx. 24 tomatoes
Grind together 3 to 6 bell peppers, 6 medium onions
1 T cinnamon
1 T cloves
1 T salt, more or less
1½ c. sugar
1 c. vinegar

Put all together and cook slowly, stirring from time to time till thick, approx. 2 hours.

Some good old Yankee recipes might possibly be the reason for some heady aromas in a kitchen on the other side of the Atlantic in Shrewsbury, England. When Peggy Beals went abroad last month one of her "bread and butter" gifts was a cookbook compiled last year by the 350th Anniversary Committee of Marshfield's First Congregational Church. Peggy's English hostess had never heard of our custom of soliciting recipes for a cookbook as a profit-making venture for a church or club. It's pleasant to think that in some English kitchen at Christmas or Boxing Day they might be readying Alice Chandler's contribution to her church's cookbook called:

GRANDMA SINNOTT'S PLUM PUDDING AND SAUCE

12 common crackers or 1¼ c. other
2½ qts. milk
3 eggs
1½ c. sugar
1/2 lb. seeded raisins
Small piece of butter
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. salt, less, if saltines are used.

Roll crackers fine and soak overnight in a pint of milk. In morning add remaining ingredients with about 1 pint milk. Bake at 325 degrees for one hour, then stir and add more milk. Continue this process until all the milk is used, cooking about 6 hours in a 5 qt. greased bean pot or bowl.

PUDDING SAUCE

Mix 1 c. sugar, 2 T cornstarch, dash of salt. Pour into 1 pint boiling water. Add a little butter and vanilla extract after sauce thickens.

Next time you eye a watermelon, think of what William Jennings Bryan wrote about the mystery of its seed. "It has the power of drawing from the ground and through itself 200,000 times its weight. When you can tell me how it takes this material and out of it colors an outside surface beyond the imitation of art and then forms inside of it a white rind and within that again a red heart, thickly inlaid with black seeds, each one of which in turn is capable of drawing through itself 200,000 times its weight — when you can explain the mystery of watermelon, you can ask me to explain the mystery of God.

Not so far away, but new to Mariner territory is the town of Pembroke, once a part of Duxbury called Mattakeesett. Now that our weekly paper has become a part of their lives, I would remind our new readers that we welcome your taking part in this column by sending in your family's favorite recipes, sharing your ideas on cooking, or submitting any questions you may have. Just the other day, I met Helen Oshima when she spoke to our garden club on the subject of herbs. At her Fern Hill Herb Farm on Taylor St. she grows several hundred varieties of herbs used in cooking, making wreaths, for medicinal purposes and home dyeing. For a tea mixture Helen advises:

1 qt. dried leaves of angelica, lemon balm, costmary, orange mint, chamomile flowers, grated rinds of 1 orange, 1 lemon, 8 tsp. China tea, 1 tsp. ground cloves. Do not brew in metal container.

For a pleasant perfume in moth preventive:

1 oz. each of cloves, caraway seeds, nutmeg, mace, cinnamon and tonquin beans. Add an amount of orris root equal to the total of other ingredients. Grind to a powder. Put in little cloth bags among clothes and linens.

A five-year look at Cohasset statistics

By Gerald McNabb

Five years ago Jimmy Carter was president, no one knew what a Rubik's Cube was and E.T. was still in outer space.

Cohasset was five years younger and pretty much the same as it is now populationwise. In 1978 the population was 7,679 persons; currently it is 7,617.

In 1978, 54 people were born, 48 couples were married and 51 died. In 1982, 62 people were born, 41 couples married and 61 died.

One aspect which always changes is the cost of living and running a town.

In 1978 it cost $6,329,958 to keep the town going. Today we are spending $7,829,953 for fiscal year 1983-84.

Here are two comparisons:

	1978	1983
Fire	$213,954	$595,452
Police	$370,832	$516,659
School	$3,419,288	$3,724,287
Town Government	$204,595	$308,913
Libraries	$115,311	$151,836

The Police Department made 139 arrests in 1978 and 142 in 1982. Forty of these in 1978 were operating under the influence. In 1982, 24 persons were arrested for operating under the influence.

The library made 85,810 loans in 1978 compared to 97,651 loans made in 1982.

The high school graduated 155 seniors in 1978 and 135 seniors in 1983.

There is a decline in voter turnout at town elections. In 1978, 2,347 or 50 percent of the 4,679 registered voters went to the polls on election day. In 1982, 2148 or 46 percent of the 4,439 registered voters showed up to cast a ballot.

Captains Walk license approved

The Historical Commission received selectmen's approval to construct a Captains Walk in Cohasset, similar to Boston's Freedom trail.

People can tour the Captain's Walk in one half-hour on foot. Ten stations to mark specific historical sights will be designated by signs decorated with a silhouette of Minot's Light.

Each stop will have a porcelin map to describe the location and significance of that place.

The three main historical sights will be Government Island, Veteran's Park and Lawrence Wharf.

Noel Ripley said, "Our reason to create the walk was to bring more respect to Cohasset's harbor. Why don't we love the harbor like we love the common?"

One commission member pointed out that at one time Cohasset's harbor was one of the fourth largest mackerel harbors among New Bedford, Boston and Gloucester.

Pat Murphy, chairman of the Captains Walk project said, "The sign company will post signs right away. This does not cost taxpayers money. We have raised half of the money already."

Class II license granted

Bill Hapeman received the right to operate a Class II second hand license for the Atlanticar company.

Hapeman's company will be on Route 3A.

Mini-course approved for firefighters

Fire Chief Martin Dooley received selectmens approval to hold a mini-course put on by the Mass. Firefighting Academy, for two weekends.

The first weekend, Oct. 8 and 9 will cover: firefighter safety, self-contained breathing apparatus, ladders, and ventilation of roof operations.

The second weekend, Nov. 5 and 6 will cover: hosework, salvage and overhaul and ladder company and tools.

The program will be open to all firefighters. Attendance will be required of new and on-duty firefighters.

☐Erik Wall is back in the news, this time he completed a 25-mile bike race that was endorsed by the American Wheelmen. Erik was the only racer under 12 years old, with most of the boys he competed against being much older. Erik even won a trophy, the first of many, I'm sure.

☐Burt Pratt had one big worry during his recent hospital stay, that being how he'd manage to get home! After recent knee surgery, Burt was put into a cast to keep his leg straight, it goes from his hip to his toe. Being at least six foot, three inches tall, Burt couldn't find a car big enough for him to stretch out in the back seat. One of the problems of being too tall.

Two coaches root for two teams

By Cindi Bondi

There are two Scituate teachers who had the unusual opportunity to learn about the potential of both Cohasset's and Scituate's football teams over the past five years.

Scituate and Cohasset only line up against each other once a year on the football field but coaches John Leone and Phil Pisano have seen both teams through many practice sessions.

Leone is entering his fifth year as Cohasset's football instructor.

Five years ago he coached for Scituate. Pisano moved from being a Scituate line coach to a backfield Cohasset football coach.

In addition, both coaches have other sports duties.

Pisano coaches the Scituate softball team and Leone doubles as Scituate's baseball head coach.

The difference in school populations marks the most obvious difference between Scituate and Cohasset.

"Cohasset is only one-third of the size of Scituate. So coaches have to ask more of a Cohasset player," Leone added.

"Most of them have to play offense and defense so if they run out of steam on a warm day we will have far less reserve players than Scituate. And of course there will always be injuries."

Leone said, "Athletics is a game of numbers. There are always some extra talented kids in Scituate's, Cohasset's or on every team."

However, even with some outstanding players, Cohasset is always at a numbers disadvantage.

But that doesn't mean Cohasset didn't produce quality football players. Just ask Paul Farren who now plays for the Cleveland Browns.

Cohasset players also start playing football as freshmen. Cohasset doesn't have a youth program like Scituate's Pop Warner program.

"We often have to groom a freshman in a new position," said Leone.

"We can't put many freshman, who play for the first year, up against a senior on varsity, in our (Cohasset's) system." said Pisano.

When Scituate joined the South Shore league Cohasset football benefited from the two new divisions. Now Cohasset doesn't play against the largest teams: Duxbury, Rockland, Whitman Hanson, and Middleboro.

Leone said, "It is not realistic to ask Cohasset to go up against a team like Middleboro. Even though we beat them 27-21 two years ago, games like that are few and far between."

Cohasset will only play the small school division teams. Now they are not in the same division of the South Shore League. But Scituate and Cohasset have always scrimmaged against each other.

Scituate has a history of strong football teams. Within the past five years, the football team's greatest achievement was to win the Lynn Classical award at the Superbowl in 1979.

Leone also competed against some of his Scituate students as a Cohasset wrestling coach. "We beat Scituate once in five years," said Leone. Again, he said if more people go out for a team the better the team is likely to be.

Pisano will still compete against Cohasset as a Scituate softball coach. "The calibre and skills of players in girl sports has really increased over the past five to eight years," he said.

The year, 1979, showed another success to Pisano as a softball coach as well as a Scituate football coach. The Scituate softball team won the Eastern Mass Division in 1979.

Both coaches have seen a lot of changes in Scituate and Cohasset sports over the past few years. The biggest change this year will be facing their students on the playing field.

There are the guys who do the tough push-ups and the guys who tell them to do it. The SHS Sailors, above, were readying for practice with coaches on hand.

PSO weekly report

By Sue McNamara
PSO Resident

To all Cohasset teachers:

CTA President Christine Collins, in her letter to the Mariner, wrote, "It is the best of times for teachers to share their courage . . . " The PSO agrees and asks all teachers to share not only their courage but also their creativity and commitment.

The PSO would like to continue this year its contribution to the weekly school news page in the Mariner and we need the cooperation of all teachers to guarantee its success. In recognition of the interest of Cohasset readers in education, the Mariner has enthusiastically agreed to continue the school news page and to expand coverage to include not only the high school but also Deer Hill and Osgood.

Their staff will collate and print a weekly calendar of events and feature articles on classroom and extra-curricular activities. The PSO will provide volunteers to collect the data from teachers and to deliver it to the paper.

In the past few years, PSO effort to solicit news from teachers have met with mixed success. We believe that parents are very interested in knowing what's happening in the schools, especially at the high school level where no weekly menu/news sheets come home. In addition, in the 1980's, educational systems are more than ever subject to public scrutiny. Cohasset taxpayers, whether or not they are parents of public school children, should be made aware of the value of our schools and of the creative efforts of our teachers.

The PSO asks for your cooperation in the following procedure:

1. Every Thursday or Friday (although today you received it on Monday), a news form will be distributed in each teacher's mailbox. It will include space for a weekly calendar of events, for more detailed information, and for suggestions for features.

2. Please fill out the form with all appropriate information, for example, "Godspell" rehearsals, sports events, Math League competitions, Computer Club activities, dances, AFS meetings for the calendar, or a 6th grade Thanksgiving Feast or 9th grade Humanities Medieval Fair for the calendar and for a suggested feature.

Please provide all essential data like date, time, place, costs, etc. However, if your information will appear on the Osgood or Deer Hill menu, it is not necessary to repeat it as we will include the menus in our collected data.

3. Please place the completed forms in the PSO mailbox at your school by the following Thursday and a volunteer will collect them for delivery to the newspaper. For example, the information you submit this Thursday, Sept. 29, will be published in the Mariner the following Thursday, Oct. 6, and therefore should contain information for the week of Oct. 6 to 13, and so on.

Suggestions for features, or more extensive informatoin, like a description of winter sports, who's eligible, when and where tryouts occur, should be submitted earlier to allow for planning of space and time.

This cooperative effort should provide for teachers an excellent vehicle for communicating with parents, for requesting special publicity or photography, and for alerting the general public to the vitality of our schools and to the admirable job you're doing. Please take a few minutes to let us help you!

Anyone interested in helping with IMS correcting, library, art or computer room, please call: JoAnne Chittick, 383-9220, or leave your name and number in PSO mailbox in the office. Thank you!

PSO REMINDER!

The fall general membership meeting will be Tuesday, Oct. 4 at CHS Study Hall/Cafeteria.

HOMECOMING WEEKEND

Saturday, Oct. 22 will be Homecoming Weekend at the High School from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. "Drop Off" location is the Suhrbiers', 178 So. Main Street. For pickup, of if you wish to volunteer, call Jan & Chick Pyle, 383-0005, or Steve & Linda Geary, 383-1071.

COHASSET DANCE PARTY CLASSES

The Cohasset Dance Party Classes for grades 6 and 7 will be held this year at St. Stephen's Church Hall beginning Tuesday, Oct. 4. Class size is limited to 25 girls and 25 boys for each grade. Acceptance will be contingent on the order of checks received.

JUNIOR GREAT BOOKS AT DEER HILL

Critical thinking, group dynamics, reading comprehension, all of these will be the focus of a pilot program at the Deer Hill School.

This fall, Dorothy Hibbard's reading group will be using the Junior Great Book series.

This is a program of interpretive reading and discussion based on a method of learning called shared inquiry.

Dorothy Wandolowski, the enrichment teacher, will meet weekly with a small group of students to discuss a story that everyone has read in advance.

During each of the 12 sessions, the leader and students work as partners in a joint effort to uncover new meanings in each selection.

Works by Oscar Wilde, Hugh Lofting, and Charlotte Dixon are included in the program. Students are encouraged to express their own ideas and to suppot them with evidence from the text.

DRAMA WORKSHOP

Comedy comes to Cohasset High School Oct. 7 and 8 as the Drama Workshop begins its tenth year of existence with an evening of three contemporary one-act plays.

Since mid-July a group of 11 young performers has spent three nights a week rehearsing these examples of very diverse comedic styles under the direction of Ron Emmons.

"Definitely Eric Geddis" by Michael Snelgrove is a witty satire of the advertising world. Eric, untalented, mundane factory worker bored with his life, decides to seek fame and fortune by going to his firm's ad agency and persuading an ambitious executive to market him as a superstar.

It's a glimpse of the crazy, superficial world of finance and promotion where Eric, his family and the ad agency fall victims to the public's fickle nature eager to be duped by everything it sees and hears.

Featured in the cast are seniors Leah Hale, Kurt Hochkeppel, Tom Jones, Tammy Karcher, Chris Kuhn and John Replogle. Juniors Jillian Ayer and Sarah Muir and sophomore Jacqui Fahey round out the cast.

Widely produced, including presentation by New York's Circle Repertory Company, and also selected by Stanley Richards for inclusion in his "Best Short Plays" series, "My Cup Runneth Over" by Robert Patrick is a perceptive, ironic and very funny short play dealing with the suddenly complicated relationship which develops between two roommates when one (while hardly trying) is catapulted to success, while the other (who has been trying very hard) remains unnoticed.

Struggling to succeed as a writer, despite little to show for her efforts but rejection slips, Paula ignores the ringing phone, as she has disciplined herself not to interrupt her work before lunch. Instead her still sleeping roommate, Yucca, a happy-go-lucky rock singer, is aroused to answer it—and, as it happens, the call is for her, anyway. So are the many others which follow insistently thereafter, plus the TV crew waiting downstairs, and all because Yucca, who filled in for an ailing performer the night before, has suddenly been "discovered."

She couldn't care less, but Paula, while trying to control her anguish, cares a great deal—with results that are funny, ironic, very human and consistently entertaining. Appearing as Paula and Yucca will be seniors Jenny Mitman and Nancy Walls.

Finishing the evening's triple-bill is "Chinamen" by Michael Frayn. There are five characters in this farce, performed by two actors. She has invited a woman and her hippy boyfriend for dinner with some other guests on the very night he has invited the woman's deserted husand for dinner. The object is not to let the estranged husband and wife meet; how to dine in two different rooms alternately in such a way that either husband or wife is in one or the other room at all times. This play also features an all-senior cast with Kurt Hochkeppel and Nancy Walls playing the five roles.

To preserve a more intimate atmosphere, only 150 tickets will be sold for each of the 8 p.m. peformances on Oct. 7 and 8 at Cohasset High School.

Boosters selling sweaters and polo shirts

The Cohasset Boosters will be displaying their sweaters and polo shirts for sale or order at the Deer Hill School open house Wednesday, Oct. 12.

Cohasset sweaters in navy at $16 and the polos in navy or white with contrasting Cohasset monogram are $12.

This ongoing sale of popular sportswear is a primary fundraiser for the Boosters organization which provides several scholarships each year to CHS graduates as well as providing ongoing assistance as needed by the various sports teams during the year.

Any parents or friends of CHS athletic teams are welcomed by the Boosters either on a regular basis or to help out occasionally during the school year.

The next meeting will be held Monday, Oct. 17 at 7:30 p.m., at the home of Robin Suhrbier on 178 South Main Street.

football

The football team took on new challengers, from Umana Technical High School of East Boston and lost 18-2.

Umana gave Cohasset a rough start by scoring six points in the first 10 minutes of the game. They followed up with another touch down that boosted them 12-0.

Head coach John Leone said, "We fumbled on the first play if we scored second in goal it would've been 12-8. But Umana just never quit."

Quarterback David Barcomb had a few long throws.

Running backs Mark Lahive, Rodney Best and Dan Curran played well.

Leone said, "They didn't get any long runs but they controlled the line of scrimmage which made the difference. We had some long drives but we could not finish them."

Cohasset will play Abington at home this week.

Abington beat Hanover last Saturday.

Hanover will play Cohasset the following week.

cross country

Jim Reilly was first for Cohasset and Scott Fitzsimmons was Cohasset's second runner in the Holbrook meet last week.

Julie Hoogeveen placed as the second girl against Holbrook. She was the only girl to compete in the Duxbury meet.

boys soccer

The Cohasset soccer skippers seem to stay on an even keel with a 2-3-2 record.

They held Duxbury to a 1-1 score until the last 10 minutes of the game. Duxbury prevailed at 2-0.

Duxbury bolted into the game by scoring a goal in the first five minutes of the game. Two minutes later Cohasset's Dave MacDonald evened the score.

Freshman fullback John Reidy did a good job on defense for Cohasset.

Later in the week Cohasset tied Hanover, 2-2.

Hanover also jumped into the game by scoring within the first 45 seconds. Hanover scored again in the third quarter, leaving Cohasset 2-0.

This time Cohasset could not match the goal until after the third quarter. But, goals from MacDonald and Lee Reid made Cohasset catch up.

Meanwhile goalie Charlie Brady did not let Hanover fly to far ahead. "Brady made saves on tough shots." said coach John Anderson.

Anderson expects challenging games from East Bridgewater and Whitman Hanson, this week.

field hockey

The field hockey team celebrated their first victory, 1-0, in a close game against Scituate last week.

Junior right inner Vicki Spooner scored the lone goal.

The score could have been 2-0 if the second goal was not recalled. A Scituate player kicked the ball out of the net area and at first a goal was attributed to Cohasset. When Scituate coach Maryann Driscoll appealed the call the score went back to 1-0.

Sailing results . . .

Dream On skippered by Ed Littke recently won the tenth annual New England Corinthian Cup Race in Cohasset harbor.

Dream On won the 13 mile race with a ten minute lead.

The entire fleet sailed off to a lazy start as winds diminished during the first leg of the race. Dream On rounded the first mark, two minutes ahead of the second boat.

By the time the fleet reached the second mark, Dream On had a comfortable seven minute lead.

Crew members were: Jennifer Littke, Wayne Whitcomb, Michelle Whitcomb, Jim Wasoka, Jack Fitzgerald and Laurie Otico.

Whitcomb said, "We beat the other boats by an impressive margin."

Dream On is a new boat moored in Scituate. Littke began racing his boat this year.

He was invited to the Corinthian Cup because Dream On placed in the top five of the Performance Handicap Racing Fleet all summer.

Cohasset tied East Bridgewater 1-1. Senior right wing Janney Carlson scored Cohasset's only goal.

Cohasset will play at Holbrook, Friday.

After Hull Football Game

Vandalism Prompts School Action

The school committee directed high school principal Richard Streeter Monday night to consult with student council for possible solutions to the continuing harassments occurring between youths of Cohasset and Hull.

Trouble allegedly began two weeks ago on a Thursday night when Cohasset youths spray painted the sea wall near the Hull High School. On Friday youths from Hull retaliated by spray painting the new score board on the Cohasset playing field. Reportedly the hostility remaining after that Saturday's football game at Cohasset, which Hull High won 24 to 6, was so rampant that the bleachers were vandalized with paint and eggs.

These events touched off what is thought to be similar and related incidents in Cohasset, particularly the attempt to stone the Hull bus on the return home Saturday, and isolated reports of harassment and threatening behavior on Sandy Beach, downtown, and off Forest Avenue.

School officials do not believe that the instigators of the trouble are necessarily the athletes or students of either town. Last week Thomas Ballerino, principal of Hull High School, was reported to have sent students over to Sandy Beach to clean up, in an effort to right whatever wrongs were done there. But this precedent did not receive complete approval at the meeting Monday night.

According to Streeter the youths who have been identified by the police as trouble-makers are not high school students. Neither did the committee see the continuing occurence of malicious acts a week after the ill-fated football game as stemming from a cause of overzealous athletic rivalry.

Supt. Maloney said the police and administration are still working together trying to assemble a confusion of facts. He stressed the importance of remaining "careful, objective and reserved" in handling what he termed "unnecessary trouble." He doesn't see a moratorium placed on the athletic activities between the two towns as a worthwhile answer.

"Let's have some good, healthy, natural rivalry. Play good, hard, clean games with good, natural competition, and let the better team win."

Town Clock Strikes Another Chapter

By Judith Epstein

Thank heaven there are still marvelous old clocks around like the one which faces in four directions atop the First Parish Church on the common — the town clock.

And thank heaven there are still people in the world like Noel Ripley, chairman of the Historical Commission and local clock repairman, who engineered the project of renovating the clock. Ripley worked for over a year and a half with many others who contributed to this labor of love, particularly Arnold Weeks, long-time admirer of the clock and church, and students and staff at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School.

According to Ripley, the story of the clock's rejuvenation is another chapter in its long and classic history.

Experimental Dump Buys Town Dump Some Years

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Cohasset Heights on top of Bear Hill sounds like the name of a suave apartment complex, a tennis club, a residential area of one-acre lots with $200,000 homes tucked into the mountain. But it's not. It's a demolition dump.

Sixteen years ago, James Tversar (pronounced Tire) moved to Cohasset from Maryland. At first he dabbled ... excavation and landscaping. Then he began contracting for heavier jobs.

One of his major jobs was the Cohasset swimming pool. "I did everything but the pool and the building." He also did the excavation and sewage for the South Shore Publishing Co.

As a result of his construction business and his own need to find a convenient location to dump demmaterials after a jobstarted thinking in termsdemolition landfill in Cset.

In 1975 he purchasedacres on Bear Hill. "It lolike a wilderness whenpurchased it. It was a bigto prepare the area and it tothree and a half years tostate and town approvalsknuckled with my life savin and more."

Selectmen ready to name new fire chief

By Jane Lane

Selectmen are expected to name the town's new fire chief tonight. The choice is between acting fire chief Roger Lincoln and Martin Dooley of Hartford, Conn.

Following last Thursday's interview session, selectmen narrowed the field from five to two candidates. Originally, Lincoln had been excluded from the selection committee's lists of finalists for the chief's post.

There were three out-of-towners named to the committee's list. Voters at town meeting in August approved the expansion of the list to include eight applicants, including acting chief Lincoln.

After the conclusion of Thursday's interviews, selectman Rocco Laugelle said he would favor appointing a local person.

"I feel that the out-of-towners, almost automatic... look at the chief's job as a stepping stone. I ...ming a chief and before you know it,

Candidate Dooley has been with the Hartford Fire Department for 14 years. He also worked for the Garden City, N.J., department and volunteered for 14 years with the Washington, N.Y., fire department. He is also an instructor at the Connecticut State Fire School.

Frank M. Sylvester, was interviewed by selectmen, is a lieutenant with the Pawtucket, R.I., Fire Department. A 17 year veteran of the force, he is also head of the city's rescue squad.

In his interview with selectmen last week, Dooley emphasized the importance of awareness of fire prevention throughout the community. He said the ...nal process must begin in the elementary ...h programs should be available to ...thers within the town.

Delinquent water bills prompt a tougher line from commissioners

By Patricia Desmond

Water was shut off to 27 homes or businesses last Thursday — all owed more than $500 to the town.

A new batch of shut-off notices will be sent out in a week or so, according to Ben Curley, who runs the town water department.

"The phone was ringing off the hook for awhile," Curley said describing the water office after the taps went dry.

"They were notified since last February about the shut-offs. Actually, they shut themselves off."

It wasn't a case of town officials taking a hardline with a bunch of hardship cases. It was a case of the town demanding payment for continued use of water from people who could afford it.

Water went off at 2 p.m. to the lot. After the shut off, water officials began receiving large cash disbursements, making most of the group current.

"We did make arrangements with one for payments," Curley said. And there were a couple hardship situations in the lot.

But the overall process was one of even-handed firmness.

Most of the people in the over $500 category had been notified last winter their water would be terminated if they didn't pay up or make arrangements. They all made a payment back then. But regular payments were not made.

The bills continued to mount.

The water department went into the start of the new fiscal year, which began July, with a $70,000 deficit. The water commissioners decided to take a harder line.

Curely said he expects the attitude will continue to be stern.

"We have to keep applying pressure," he said.

The 27 water services were turned back on by 10 a.m. Friday, the water department being satisfied about the unpaid bills.

Curley isn't sure whether water service will be cut off to any in the over $300.

"The word is getting around. I think this enlightened everybody.

"We're not trying to hurt anybody. If someone owes x amount of dollars, they can make arrangements to pay so much a week.

"But these people have owed that amount for three years and maybe made two payments in that time."

2 1/2 would cut $350,000 from schools in first year

By Tanna Kasperowicz

School committee members, School Supt. Eugene Crowell and Business Manager John Raftery attempted to keep the "scare" out of their conversation regarding the impact of Prop. 2½ (if passed) on the Cohasset Public Schools at Monday's meeting...but comments like these slipped by:

"Under Prop. 2½ we would have to eliminate $350,000 from the budget in its first year...if we are allowed to keep our share of the shrunken pot. We could be made to absorb the entire brunt under 2½." — Vice Chairman Jack Langmaid.

"Out of every four people you would reduce — the town would have to add a fifth person to the town's budget to pay for unemployment." — Supt. Crowell.

"The only over-ride procedure is by referendum on the next state-wide election ballot in November 1982." — Raftery.

The committee voted to have Supt. Crowell and Raftery examine the ramifications of Prop. 2½ on the school system, in preparation of a yet unscheduled presentation to be made by the committee before November 4 elections.

In addition, the committee will attempt to schedule a joint meeting with the advisory committee and selectmen to discuss the Town's intention with respect to sharing the burden.

It was voted to have Langmaid officially represent the school committee at the League of Women Voters' rally against Prop. 2½ this week (Thur day, October 9, 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish ...se on North Main Street;...but the committee agr ... would prefer to also schedule its own meeting ... tax reduction plan, and hear from the ...'s proponents, as well.

TM $ requests on tenderhooks

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Proposition 2½ has a needle for every conceivable balloon, and it has been casting its ominous shadow over all money articles coming before voters at the upcoming October 28 Special Town Meeting... scheduled just seven days before November 4 elections and the "tooted" tax revolt of the Commonwealth.

Exactly how Prop. 2½, if voted, would affect any bond issues voted by this special TM is anyone's guess. But if the Commonwealth stands to lose, as predicted, $75 million in state revenues as a result of Prop. 2½'s passage through a renter income tax deduction, the Commonwealth may not be underwriting cities' and towns' bond issues so generously in the future.

At issue is the selectmen's article asking the town to purchase Cohasset Motors on 3-A for a multi-use town building, which could house two fire trucks and allow the town to close down its Beechwood Street and North Cohasset Fire Stations. The price: under $500,000.

A second article, by petition, asks the town to construct a new Beechwood Street Fire Station. The proposed funding for this article is still unknown.

Several town officials have expressed the fear that voters may vote down all special TM expenditures in anticipation of Prop. 2½.

Many residents do not appear to have made up their minds about either of the town fire station

Pirates pout after Skipper upset

By Rob Tis

For the first time since 1971, nine long years, the Cohasset Skipper football team, under the tutelage of Coach Leone, has beaten their arch rivals, the Hull Pirates. This was it, the superbowl, for no other game does Skipper team get as psyched-up for as Hull.

This victory will undoubtably linger in the minds of the players throughout the rest of their lives.

The scene was set, a perfect Autumn day. The largest crowd of the year lined Milliken Field. The Skipperschargedonto the field and took over quickly.

Not long into the first quarter the Skipper steel trap defense forced Hull to punt and who was back to receive it but Cohasset's answer to Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, Jack McNeil.

Behind some savage blocks by Miles Jones, Paul Buckley, Bob Fessler, Bud Howorth and Sandy Ayer, McNeil danced 73 yards to the T.D.

Q.B. Kevin Dooley then scampered in for the conversion and it was 8-0.

Sparked by McNeil, the defense took a tough hold and forced Hull to punt.

The Skippers took over on their own 20.

Unfortunately along with getting the ball the Skippers had some bad luck.

As Dooley faded back to pass on the 3rd down everyone seemed to be covered and with heavy pressure coming in Dooley attempted to dump the ball off to one of his backs to avoid losing yardage. But the ball went into the hands of a Hull lineman who ran it 17 yards for the touchdown.

Enraged by this turn of events, the defense stopped the conversion. In the second quarter Hull got a good drive together which ended up with a yard run by Kevin Greer for the touchdown, and it was now 12-8 Hull.

It was Cohasset's turn now and Skippers drove

Former leader Tanna Kasperowicz looks back

By Tanna Kasperowicz

(Former Mariner Editor Tanna Kasperowicz is no longer associated with The Mariner Newspaper group. Ed. Note.)

In the fall of 1979, after months of heavy negotiations about what my salary would be (or rather, wouldn't be) . . . I took over the reigns of the Cohasset Mariner and I've never regretted it.

I felt some remorse when I left . . . rather like my mother who told me shortly after the birth of my first son . . . "After two weeks of being with him and holding him, and loving him, I felt he was mine."

I don't think anybody leaves a newspaper . . . reporter, editor, stringer, whatever . . . without feeling a great loss. Newspapers may be the one thing in the world whose employees feel that way about them.

Last summer I read an article written by a former Herald reporter in Boston Magazine. (May issue - if you get a chance to pick it up in the library, do, it's really good) about the last days of Don Forst.

It was full ot pithy philosophy, quotes, funnies and sadness. Can't imagine former Digital employees ever feeling the same way. Having loved several newspapers during my lifetime, I knew exactly how they all felt.

Mariner Publisher David Cutler is a great negotiator, so in spite of the fact that he was going to "pay me in animal crackers," he offered me a challenge. He also offered me pretty much editorial freedom. In fact, during my tenure at the Mariner, David only shot down one editorial . . . one which supported Casino gambling in Hull.

The challenge at the Mariner in those days was to win the entire Cohaset territory from the Mirror. To meet this challenge, it was important for me to think of the Mirror reporters as E-N-E-M-Y . . . something I really never got the knack of. Fred Hanson (news reporter) was really fun to work with . . . attend meetings with, write notes to during boring meetings.

Thursdays Fred and I critiqued each other's papers . . . and when I got a compliment from Fred it meant something.

Do reporters and editors enjoy "their power" people sometimes still ask? I've always looked upon it as more of a responsibility. During my tenure with the Walpole Times and The Patriot Ledger I mostly ran around with knots in my stomach . . . wondering if I was right.

I remember standing in the Cohasset Pharmacy one day, making a purchase, when two women came in and grabbed the Mariner off the stands saying: "Now we'll see what the Mariner has to say about the sewer issue." The Ledger article (Wednesday night) had been incorrect. Mine was incorrect, also.

All three newspapers had missed the point the sewer commissioners were trying to make. Next week we all tried again. In the meantime, the sewer commissioners were running around town saying mean things about "the media."

One of the most delightful things about working at the Mariner during the years I served as editor were "my staff." During that year and a half, almost everybody I could trick became a columnist for a brief if not an extended period of time: Chet Ellis, Peter Barnicle, Larry Fone, Eric Pearson, Chet Magee, Fran Johnston, Rob Tis, Gilbert Tower (more willing than most,) and many others.

Karin Bartow, former Around Town columnist and newswriter, was my right hand woman during those years. She stopped me from quitting at least twice a week. She also aided and abetted me in running contests . . . usually poetry contests. We were always afraid no one would enter . . . our biggest poetry-suppliers were Osgood School teachers.

Trish Massa and Arlene Ferreira were Mariner ad reps who both happened to live in Cohasset. Both supplied us with news and views of our advertisers, the kind of stuff editors don't run into very much simply because of scheduling (night meetings, etc.)

What can the Mariner take credit for during my tenure? If you had asked me in the middle of it I probably wouldn't have been able to answer. Two years later, I think the Mariner can take credit for several things.

- We were the first to editorialize about the 3-3 votes on the Cohasset School committee. Because, or perhaps in spite of our editorials, a citizens group petitioned town meeting to reduce the school committee by one.

- We embarrassed the Troika into posting its meetings. They were not easily embarrassed, but ultimately they broke down and began posting.

- Our style of writing and editorializing attracted letter-writers, columnists (from the community) and even a front page Boston Globe article on The Cohasset Police Log by Susan Trausch. When John DeBassio (former Police Chief) came to town he screwed up the delightful and enchanting police log. He coded it.

- We invited The Cohasset Lamplight to publish on our pages . . . mainly because they didn't have enough money for very many independent issues. The Lamplight page is still a part of the Mariner and it's fun to read what students are concerned about.

- We always had a slew of features, by Karin Bartow, Laura Doherty, yours truly and stringers.

- We watched the selectmen carefully.

- We had fun. We also had knots in our stomach. But we had fun.

Some of the features and news I remember as being funny and/or pertinent (but not everyone took them that way) were:

"You're wrong about me Richard Hayes," in which I tried to make a case for not having turned in (on time) 13 library books.

"Riddle of the week; what to do with the old news store," written by Karin Bartow on behalf of the store.

"Never out of style," a funny, funny column by Chet Ellis on how New Englanders dress.

"Santa Clause comes to town,' . . . written by me. The Mariner scooped all other media that year when "she" came . . . Santa was none other than Karin Bartow (she really was a good sport) who gathered Christmas wishes from Log 'n Line regulars and others.

"I've seen the future and it doesn't work," by Chet Ellis.

"CHS Cheerleaders terrorized," a real suspense thriller and an exclusive from the Cohasset Police Department and the many, many officers who caught the hampster.

"The colorful species of prep," by Caroline Wampole . . . a classic. She's probably going to be famous someday, if she ever learns how to type.

"It's still 110 degrees in Saudi Arabia," by Fran Johnston, our man on the scene in the Mid East.

"Roger Pompeo resigns from health board," the mariner scoops the other media because Roger was mad at all the rest for some reason or other. It was a good story and it was nice to have the story first; thanks, Roger.

"Mariner Easter Contest announced" . . . the judges were named.

"David Turner, Lance Norris and Mike Thornton attempt to join girls softball team," by then Sports Editor Eddie F.

"Central Market says it's staying, contrary to rumors . . . the rumors were right. C.M. eventually sold.

"District Attorney agrees selectmen held illegal meeting."

"Toothless Norfolk County," Mariner is angry with Assistant District Attorney Charles Hely for not agreeing with it.

"Epidemic hits CHS seniors,—Senioritis,"—by David McCarthy on The Lamplight Page.

"Two local horsewomen meet at South Shore Hospital" . . . Mary Fairman and Kathy Morgan are stars.

"Columnist Chet Ellis threatened by lawsuit."

"Dog owners sit, stay and heel after 1st lesson with Pam Tillotson.

"Will it be a Moscow, U.S.A.?" By Eric Pearson. A column.

"Tent city tradition turning to tenment city" . . . this was by far Roger Porter's favorite article and I became his favorite reporter after it ran, even though: "You really didn't say anything that awful," Chet Ellis said. And of course, I hadn't.

"Town dump beleaguered by cone-shaped junk."

"Feola retirement date still unclear."

"Cohasset loses Minot Light to Scituate in softball game."

"She had to give her age under oath on national TV" - a story about Kay England, selected as a sequestered juror for The Bradford Pendergast trial, first time TV cameras were allowed into the courtroom. We concentrated on the big stuff, how her experience affected her family, her tennis partner and Kay.

"The Globe's view of the Cohasset Mariner's Police Report," by Susan Tausch, Globe staff. A really funny article, which ran front page in the Globe. We got permission to reprint the entire article in the Mariner. It began:

"Looking at the big picture is all well and good, and maybe even necessary, but I'd rather not. I'd rather read the weekly police report in The Cohasset Mariner.

"Good stuff in the Cohasset Mariner police report. Not cosmic stuff. Not vital to our national and world stuff. Sometimes not even vital to Cohasset stuff. Just good, solid, weird and funny stuff."

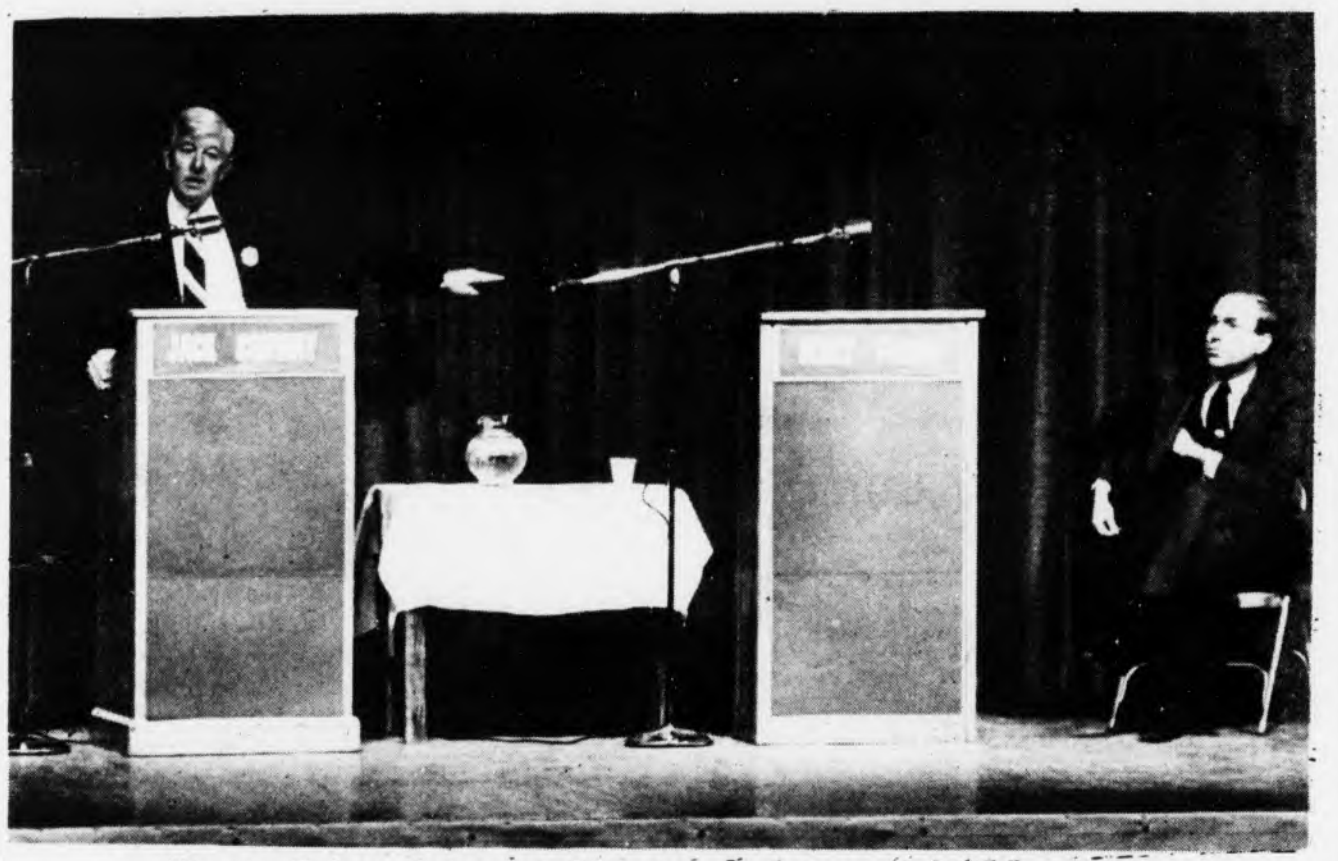
"A.J. says it's party time once again" - A.J. Antoine invites all to sign up for Cohasset-by-the-Sea party.

"Ford-Murray both forecast wins in state representative race."

"Resident sues stripper Corio for half million."

"Attorney General threatens action over sewer issue . . "sound familiar?

"Town common flag stolen."



"The peaks and valleys of Christmas," by two staff writers. "If You Can't Afford It, Santa Can't Either," Karin Bartow. "Finds Friends Success Really Depressing," Laura Doherty. Laura analyzed The Christmas Brag Letter.

Do I think I made a difference? (Mike Berger's question.) I certainly hope so. By the time I left the Cohasset Mariner I think I had truly become "an editor." I don't think I started off being one. I had always been a copywriter, a reporter, a writer of some sorts. What I did for the Cohasset Mariner may be questionable. What the Cohasset Mariner did for me was a whole lot of things.

I had the luxury of watching Karin Bartow develop, and almost over night with little help from me, into a very good reporter. She was always a good feature writer.

I watched The Lamplighters become real newspaper people. I loved it when Laura Doherty or Chet Ellis or someone unknown wrote some really good material for the Mariner. I encouraged it. I fostered it—having learned very quickly that the news hole was a big one, and the more others contributed the easier my job would be.

And I enjoyed the letters from the community . . . even the ones that disagreed or took me or another writer to task. They filled some more of the ever growing hole.

I left the Mariner to free-lance, commuted to Boston for about six months and hated every bus ticket I bought, returned to the Mariner for a job in advertising, and then left again . . . to pursue free lancing and my own writing business.

After I left the Mariner the second time I got involved with a "Troika" of sorts, into pushing for a five-member board of selectmen . . . which was successfully voted at town meeting twice. I'm pleased about that. But I will note here, for posterity, that the Cohasset Mariner editorialized against the five-member board petition, and Dick Barrow, Tony Fasciano and I felt the press at large gave us poor press, "took us out of context, didn't give us a fair shake," etc.

We didn't win the battle with the Mirror during my tenure as Editor of the Cohasset Mariner, but I think we were an important piece of that final battle.

The eventual "retreat" of the Mirror happened on several levels, and many Mariner people helped to make it happen . . . Nancy Burns, former editor of The Scituate Mariner and her staff; production people at the Mariner; Nina Belson, former advertising manager; and a host of others, including Publisher David Cutler who ran extra pages even when he couldn't afford it.

David looked upon each of his newspapers as a work of art . . . not a business. He came from the reporting ranks in life, and he wanted news, features, new people writing those features and news . . . and he rejoiced more than anyone over a really good letter to the editor.

One important thing he didn't do, he didn't criticize anything on a regular basis. His criticisms might pop out of the blue weeks after an article had run. He was more questioning than critical. He trusted his staff to do the right thing. Sometimes we didn't. When we didn't he got the phone calls . . .

It was a good place to work. It still is.

The Mariner family is a growing one . . . and the interesting thing about returning every so often, however briefly, is that everyone cares at The Mariner. They're all made to feel, and they are, an important part of a team. No one is boxed into a hole . . . sometimes typesetters and photographers write . . . editorial assistants challenge editorial writers . . . Ad representatives have their say about everything on Fridays and Mondays . . . as much as a newspaper can be a democracy, The Mariner is one. And it is an expanding one, with newspapers being born almost yearly. Just a few short weeks ago the Pembroke Mariner came into being. I have little doubt that the Mariners will continue to flourish.

As a new editor I first realized how important it was to residents when a press broke down and it would be a day late and my phone would ring off the hook. People wanted their Mariner. When it was late, they complained. When it was on time they complained. When it was wrong they complained. When it was right they complained. They always felt it was their community newspaper . . . and few weeks passed that we didn't know exactly how some 20 or 30 individuals felt about any number of issues or commentaries we ran.

If I hadn't been editor of The Cohasset Mariner I probably would have raised chickens.

Some thoughts on 'Around Town'

By Karin Bartow

Of all the things I've done for the Mariner during our first five years together, the most fun was writing the Around Town column.

I've written features, news stories, headlines and picture captions, proofread, edited, and done layout, but believe it or not, the most challenging was Around Town.

It used to take many hours to dig up and explore the 15 to 25 "little features" that comprised the column. Making them interesting and newsworthy was always the goal.

Therefore, when anyone spoke of Around Town as a "gossip" column, it made my knuckles bristle.

One week it got to me and I wrote the following commentary to make sure everyone understood what was not involved.

A prominent "Town Father" told me about three years ago that the Mirror would outlast the Mariner.

I responded that he would be proven wrong because the Mariner was a newspaper about Cohasset and her people.

Like the Around Town column, you won't read about something or someone in the Cohasset Mariner unless they're from town or have something to do with Cohasset.

Through the tenure of several community editors, news reporters, Around Town columnists and others, the Mariner has remained Cohasset's one and only newspaper because of its philosophy and I might add flexibility, friendliness, and dedication to being a newspaper of one town.

Happy Fifth Birthday, Cohasset Mariner!

Here is a reprint of the "Around Town t'ain't gossip" published July 17, 1980.

The Cohasset Police Report is probably the best read column in the Mariner. Not probably, it is. Next to it, Around Town holds second place. You might say they balance each other. The Police Report chronicles the seedier, more belligerent acts of our citizenry; Around Town crows about good deeds and accomplishments.

Since we feel Around Town is an important part of the paper (it's a whole lot of small feature stores,) it smarts when we hear someone refer to it as a "gossip" column. It's happened a few times and while we don't want to appear to overreact, it's time to respond.

Gossip can mean "light familiar talk or writing," according to Webster, but it rarely has that positive connotation. To most of us, gossip means small, idle talk, rumoring if you like, about people's private affairs. Around Town has never gossiped.

There have been a few occasions when we've exaggerated slightly for the sake of humor. Otherwise, we have offered news—people news—in light, familiar writing style, but news.

Every effort is made to talk to the star of the story; we may have to settle for a parent, a sibling or a spouse, but with very few exceptions, a phone call is made. That way we are more accurate and we get a better story

Thoughts from former editor Patricia Desmond

By Patricia Desmond

The story of the past five years in Cohasset's history has been one of development.

The Mariner developed much in that time. The paper grew from an idea in the mind of David Cutler to a part of the community. The paper has had its supporters and its critics.

In that same time period several large wooded tracts turned into housing developments. There were and are proponents and opponents of development.

At first when Mariner editor Mike Berger asked me to write for an anniversary supplement, I thought I'd do a bit of research and dwell upon the changes here that five years have wrought.

It's an interesting story from the division of the Logan Estate on Jerusalem Road and the more piecemeal development along Forest Avenue to the first condo's in town.

I watched the development of the Mariner and of the town for awhile since I was the third editor of Cohasset paper. And as I began to think about telling you about the flow of executives into new homes here I realized the story behind the story - the why of it all - needs to be outlined.

I had worked at The Patriot Ledger for 15 years as a reporter when I quit at the start of 1981 to learn about the newspaper business in a wider way. I followed Tanna Kasperowicz at the Mariner and learned right away that weekly newspapers are taken personally by most of their readers.

At a daily newspaper the people in the news understand that the person with a notebook is not part of the story. The person with the notebook is an observer, there to gather information with the idea of notifying the rest of the world.

When I started gathering information for the Cohasset Mariner people seemed to expect I would either fall into the category of friend or enemy. People would tell me things and then add, "But of course you won't print that," or "Don't use my name."

For a time I wondered why none of the holy laws of journalistic objectivity seemed to be honored here.

And then like a lightening bolt it came to me. Cohasset and the issues of the day—whether sewers or school budget or a sunporch in the historic district—were just too important to the people here for any objectivity to be allowed or even understood.

People wanted to move to Cohasset for the quality of life and when anything seemed to be on the verge of changing that way of life, Cohassetites just couldn't abide by impartiality.

For about a year-and-a-half I watched people here cope with the issue of the street lighting account, library cutbacks, proposed apartment zoning and the like. While I watched I grew to see that people on every side of an issue seemed to think they were working to protect the town from forces of darkness.

That was the most important lesson of my editorship here. That people care and that's what makes Cohasset a desirable community.

In May, 1982, I purchased the Hingham Mariner from David Cutler—his Cohasset paper wasn't for sale—and I went on to be my own boss for the first time in my life.

I'm afraid that I haven't kept up with Cohasset happenings as much since then. My time wasn't exactly my own as the publisher of a weekly.

In May, 1983, I sold the Hingham paper back to the parent corporation and began working on my lifelong dream.

These days I have more time but it's carefully plotted out. If you were to call my home in Hingham, you'd probably have to talk into the answer machine.

Unpublished novelists can't take telephone calls during their writing time.

Perhaps by the time the Mariner puts out a 10th anniversary supplement, you'll all have a chance to read my book (or two or five.) Perhaps between now and then you'll have a chance to read an article or two of mine in the Mariner - I freelance these days.

Come what may, I wish Cohasset, her residents and her weekly paper well. You all taught me something worth knowing. Thank you for the lessons. May you all continue to prosper.

and better
a new approach to single family living

We've had a great many visitors at The Meadows in Hingham since our opening, and we're pleased at their reactions to the spaciousness and detailing of the homes ...and to the very private feeling that has been achieved.

Over and over we hear... "this is just like a single family home...only better!" "The floor plans are great—so functional—and there's no wasted space"... "Your two bedroom home is larger than the three bedroom house I have now!"... "and everything is new: kitchens are fantastic"... "The cathedral ceilings make the rooms seem twice as big"... Everyone is pleased by the unusually shaped swimming pool ... the whirlpool ... the clubhouse and tennis courts. There's no way you can have all of that in the typical one-family home.

"There are people to care for the lawns ... the snow shoveling"... "I like the private courtyards—just big enough to do some creative gardening—but not so large as to be a chore"... "There's much better security here than I've been used to"..."and we still have full basements ... and a two-car garage." "Ownership is just like my old home ... you can mortgage your property, sell it when you want... get the same tax advantages."

The Meadows in Hingham is a wonderful place to live... the country-styled two and three bedroom attached single family homes are located on rolling meadowland covered with wild flowers. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500

Joanne Young was the first office manager

By Joanne Young

Because I was there at the birth of the Cohasset Mariner in 1978, I was asked to compare the newspapers—then and now, five years later. I was Office Manager.

We rented the small "porch" in the Dean & Hamilton real estate building. Now there is a drop at the Colonial Pharmacy—less personal than our office, where the townspeople would stop by to place ads, submit articles or just chat.

I looked over my portfolio of writings for that first year of Mariner publication. My responsibility was "Around Town", now written by Sallyann Chatterton. Karin Bartow, who is now an editorial assistant, was my successor for that column, and I shared with her ideas on how to fill that section with the neighborhood news which gives a town its unique flavor.

Trisha Massa and I were a team—she sold the advertising space and I wrote the copy for each merchant. It gave us the opportunity to meet business owners and establish the personal contact so important to the vitality of a small town newspaper.

The four main changes in Cohasset are demographic, neighborhood, political and commercial. One does not have to be a sociologist to notice the demographic changes in the past five years. There are babies galore in evidence. New neighborhoods have been created to house new young families—notably the Beechwood section. Pleasant Street is being rejuvenated. The Cox estate has been sold to industry.

Commercially, there are many new businesses and some are gone. The purple building on Main Street which used to house the Social Service League, where I was inoculated to teach in the Cohasset schools, now has the Bavaria shop. And substitutes now, as Barbara Conte will tell you, are accredited teachers.

Much of the Village has fallen victim to a slow economy: The Corner Lighthouse, Cookworks, Tides Inn, Figueredo's, Poseidon, A & P, Wee Spinnaker, Grand Design and Classics. Other shops have changed hands: Flemings Hardware passed from the popular ownership of Mary and John Fleming to the Smiths. Kit & Kaboodle was sold by Bonnie Petrowski to Bob Fessler. Elena Sestito retired from her flower shop, but it is still thriving. Cohasset Market was sold but still caters to the carriage trade; the Greenhouse became Harrington's and Kimball's was changed to Cohasset by the Sea under the Roys.

Some businesses are new and thriving: The Bread Shop, the Wooden Nickel, Brown Brothers Auto Repair, Marge Ritter's fish store at the harbor. Cushing Plaza has Johnny Appleseed's, a donut shop, cheese store and fast food emporiums. I could not name them all, but they are all of quality, like the Bound Brook Artisans and Arlene Ferreira's antique store, across from the Green Gage Plum on 3A. Some have moved: In Stitches, Hennessey News and Creation—not far but in the manner of a slow pavanne in the Village.

Then there are the old trusties: Cards & Shards, Cohasset Hardware, The Linen Chest, Pat's Barber Shop, Log & Line, the Strawberry Parfait, Carousel, the Frame Shop, Bergson's, Peterson's the Red Lion Inn and Hugo's. Significantly, the longest running businesses are the banks and the liquor stores and the cleaners.

So I guess most of us still bank our money, enjoy the good life and keep ourselves nattily turned out.

Politically significant changes have taken place. The most dramatic is in the selectmen's office: a five-man board was voted in and Arthur Clark retired. The tradespeole are in the process of building a strong Chamber of Commerce and working to install a sign on 3A advertising the village shops.

The sewer commission and other boards are coping with the rejection of an original sewage treatment plant and acceptance of a less ambitious proposal.

Until Cohasset agrees to build low income housing, state water and sewer grants will be withheld from the town.

Whatever the outcome, Cohasset herself will spoil us with the magnificence of her changing seasons in this most beautiful of all seaside towns. We look forward to another five years on her shores.

Judy Epstein says 'Hi' to Cohasset

By Mike Berger

Remember Judy Epstein, the first community editor of the Cohasset Mariner?

She remembers Cohasset and sends her love from her home in Northampton.

Judy Epstein is now Judy Weinberg, having married Neal Weinberg, Bureau Chief for the Northampton area for the Springfield Morning Union.

She is the mother of Elizabeth, 15-months old.

Calling from the "City Room" of the Springfield Morning Union, Judy is writing news and features for the Chicopee-Holyoke Bureau for the Springfield Union.

She is also enrolled in a Ph.D program for Literature at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Judy holds a Master's Degree in Library and Information Science from Simmon's College, Boston.

Because of her job and educational responsibilities, Judy didn't have time to write her observations about her Cohasset experiences five years later.

But she wanted stressed she often remembers Cohasset and her residents.

Five years ago began disastrously for Judy as she lost her car at Cole Parkway during the Blizzard of 1978. The waves totalled her car.

Judy first began at the Mariner in 1978 as a typesetter. Her first newswriting assignment was covering the Marshfield School Committee. That night the school superintendent resigned. When Judy returned to the Mariner, Publisher David Cutler asked her what happened?

She said, "Oh nothing much... This happened, that happened, and the superintendent resigned..."

Well, Judy's news sense improved and was promoted to Community Editor. She worked at the Mariner until 1979 when she decided to take a job as librarian at the Springfield Newspapers, The Republican Company.

Her responsibilities there were to redesign the catalogue system on new microfiche equipment.

She left the job two years later to become a part-time reporter for the Springfield Union.

What does Judy remember about Cohasset and the Cohasset Mariner?

"I made a lot of close friends such as Arthur Clark (former Executive Secretary) and George Jednick, an area architect who designed Dr. Roger Pompeo's office.

"I knew everyone in town. I could have run for an election. Some people may say I was snooping into everyone's business," she said.

When Judy began her newspaper assignments she realized town residents wanted their own home newspaper.

"In that sense David (Cutler, publisher) had his finger on what the community wanted."

"The joy was every week we would run to the newstands and we would be so happy when we would scoop the Cohasset Mirror.

"I miss Cohasset and I miss living by the ocean. Where I live now is lovely but different. It's near a mountain range."

"The Berkshires are lovely but in a way I miss the ebb and flow of Cohasset," Judy said.

Around Town ...

because you give us more information about yourself, your little prodigies or interesting little facts about your family.

We are only interested in the people who live here. If you've been far away on a business or pleasure trip, we want to hear about it, but we're ruthless when it comes to someone else who isn't connected with Cohasset. We're pretty snobby that way, but only for your sake. You can read the Globe, the New York Times, or even the local competition to find outside of Cohasset people news.

The array of events that are reported in Around Town is impressive. About the only thing you can't do in Around Town is die.

We have welcomed people to town, said farewell; announced births, birthdays, anniversaries, promotions, new jobs, awards, citations, appointments; shared vacations, parties, good fortunes; wished people get well; told you about their careers, studies, philanthropies, businesses, hobbies, talents; we have talked about hostages and refugees, inflation, overeating; we've sometimes been silly, always sincere.

Your news is welcome and will always get printed, as long as it's not gossip!

The Publisher reflects on the beginning

By David Cutler

It was early in October 1978, a few days before the debut of the Cohasset Mariner, and I was chatting with Joanne Nawn, our soon-to-be Around Town columnist.

We agreed that Cohasset was special and quite beautiful and, ah, perhaps a little small; then she said something about how publishing a Cohasset paper would be "awfully ambitious." I think her eyebrow arched slightly when she came down on the word "ambitious."

Joanne was a Cohasset resident then and is a Cohasset resident now with a little Texas in between, and I always thought her to be most tactful. With that in mind, the words "awfully ambitious" lend themselves to some far looser translations like: "Have you spent too much time in the Red Lion pub?" or more simply, "Are you daft?"

We didn't think so. After all, with a population of 7,700, Cohasset, while not teaming with people, was more than twice the size of Duxbury in 1950 when my parents, John and Bobbi Cutler launched the Duxbury Clipper.

Besides, the Cohasset Mariner was started with the accent on the positive. The town was (is) small, yes, but it was filled with people who cared about the place, and with optimistic logic, we assumed they would also care about a local newspaper that chronicled a part of their lives.

Someone else said that Cohasset was an enclave and would be receptive to reports on what was happening within. What we didn't figure on in those early upbeat days was that Cohasset would soon have two weeklies — with the arrival of the Cohasset Mirror — and that on some nights the three-member board of selectmen would be outnumbered by the press corps.

"Nothing ventured, nothing gained," is a favorite cliche of the publisher and in the beginning, we concentrated on the venture and all the good things that would happen as a result.

There were problems, however, and filling up the paper was problem number one. Panic number one is a more apt description.

These days Editor Mike Berger spends a part of his week sorting through copy, deciding what to run and what to hold, for an issue that ranges from 28 to 40 pages. Five years ago, the problem — panic — was how to fill 16 pages. Somehow, begging for news does not seem professional, but beg we did.

I remember how reporter Judy Epstein gushed with excitement when she called to say she had "found" Noel Ripley and the story of his drive to repair the clock atop the First Parish Church.

"Town Clock Strikes Another Chapter," went the headline on page one and in the lead, Judy wrote: "Thank heaven there are still marvelous old clocks around..." Thank heaven, indeed!

I assigned another reporter to drive around Cohasset and write a mood story.

"On what?" she asked.

"On anything," I said, and she came up with a good piece on Black Rock Beach which, with clever use of photographs, filled a page.

Volume one, number one also included a front page story on Oktoberfest, which mercifully was coming that Saturday and a story about water bans being over. Five years ago, water was often a source of news; today, it's sewerage, sewerage, sewerage.

The lead story that week concerned a fracas after the Cohasset-Hull football game which, as it turned out wasn't such a splashy story after all. We learned through the years, that there has never been a great love lost between Hull and Cohasset.

Still, overall the first issue seemed credible even if it was meager in pages by today's standard. After leafing through it last week, I asked Tanna Kasperowicz, our second editor, what she thought of it. The reply was deflating.

"I didn't even notice it. I didn't notice the paper for the first year. I was too busy in Hull (as a correspondent for the Patriot Ledger)."

For the first three weeks, before starting a more professional circulation drive, we hired kids to distribute the paper around town. Some complained about the too long driveways on Jerusalem Road and at least one — no go-getter he — was spotted dumping a stack in the Mill River. Thus we became part of the harbor scene.

There were many kind people in the beginning, however, and high on the list were Arthur Clark and Mary Jeanette Murray, both selectmen then with Henry Ainslie. Police Chief Randy Feola was usually good copy and so too was what was said at the Log and Line, Cohasset's unofficial town hall. Much of the "Log" conversation was and is off the record.

Five years is not old in the life of a newspaper. The Mariner is still young and still growing and still trying to get better. But during our stay we have learned that certain truths prevail; one, that Cohasset is still a beautiful and special place filled with people who care about where they live, and two, that they will support a community newspaper that focuses on what happens here.

After five years, we are pleased with our acceptance and most grateful to the readers and advertisers who made it happen.

We are grateful as well to the writers and reporters who have produced these last 260 issues: Joanne Nawn, Judy Epstein, Nancy Burns, Nina Belsan, Tanna Kasperowicz, Karin Bartow, Rob Tis, Chet Ellis (how about an encore, Chet?), Laura Doherty, Jane Lane, Patricia Desmond, Sallyann Chatterton, Greg Derr, Rose Cundari, Pat Walsh, Moira McCarthy, Theresa Sullivan and of course to Mike Berger who is positively in love with his job.

On to volume six.

The Editor foresees change

By Mike Berger

This five-year anniversary issue looks at Cohasset from within the community and its people as well a look from within the Mariner.

It's a good chance to review where the community and the Mariner are going and where we might be five years from now.

To begin with, this newspaper wouldn't be here today without the courage and enthusiasm of Publisher David Cutler.

That might sound a little bit like a "Win it for the Gipper" attitude.

However, five years ago the Mariner started in Cohasset competing against a well-established weekly, the Cohasset Mirror as well to a smaller extent against The Patriot Ledger.

What remains is the Ledger and we're out to beat them too.

Now David Cutler is the first man to acknowledge that newspapers won't make you rich. That means David invested in a weekly when the leaders of the Mirror and the Ledger gave him no chance of surviving.

But the Mariner is here today. Why?

A look at the paper's first editorial says the Mariner is devoted to hometown news, hometown people and hometown issues.

We have tried to present the news in a fair, honest and complete fashion. We don't believe in sensationalism for the sake of the traditional "Scandals sell newspapers credo."

We also believe in treating people the way they would like to be treated. We would like to think that we have some heart, some feeling and some soul.

That doesn't mean the paper publishes only positive news. Unfortunately we can't because that wouldn't be telling the reader the whole story to an issue which could be damaging the community.

But we do try to leave you with an interesting feature, a laugh and a sense of pride in a community.

Our basic goal is to present to the reader a look at the entire community. This includes coverage of the schools, the sports, the senior citizens news, Town Hall and the business outlook.

Cohasset is changing and so are its residents. What worked five years ago and for many years may not be working in 1983.

The leaders and opinions are changing. For example, consider the sewer issue, the Fire Dept., school committee, selectmen, and everything else at Town Hall.

Regarding the newspaper's role, we have and we will always try to present both sides of an issue. Whether those people who have different opinions are willing to share them with the Mariner may be another story.

Writing news articles and editorials are two different types of writing. The basic difference is editorials require opinion and opinion sometimes steps on toes.

But as a check to the editorial is a "Letter to the Editor."

As an editor I realize many residents love pictures, better sports coverage, more features about people and of course all the news about the schools.

That's my goal to include the types of articles and pictures the readers want.

The keys to this news coverage are the people who write the news and as they say "the people behind the scenes."

Pat Walsh's diligence and research capabilities for newsreporting are amazing and a definite asset to me. I also appreciate the suggestions and technical expertise of Karin Bartow, the link to the early days of the Mariner.

A big thankyou to Sallyanne Chatterton for her dependable Around Town.

I also appreciate some other people behind the scenes. Week after week I admire the expertise and knowledge of Production Manager Margaret Smorag-iewicz and Kathy Piel.

Thanks also to Barbara Foster, Dot Koski, Terri Long and Jan Ott who either proofread or typeset the Cohasset copy.

Who answers the Cohasset phone number and takes circulation problems? Kay Honeywell, Judy Porsavage, Linda Stewart and Maryellen Morse deserve a great deal of applause for handling these complaints and everything else in a kind manner.

To Ad Rep. Anne Sauter - keep plugging away at those adds. Week after week she walks a 1,000 miles between Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham.

To David Cutler I say thanks for persevering when times looked rough and to Executive Editor and Patches author Lois Martin I say thanks for keeping me sane especially Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

There are two other words of appreciation.

First and most important is to my wife, Linda, and my seven-month old son Dan who put up with my crazy hours without too much of a peep. They keep me going when times look bleak.

Second, thanks to the community residents for their enthusiasm, ideas and interest. Keep it going.

The other goal for the next five years is for the Mariner to relocate an office to the Cohasset area.

We know we will be welcome in Cohasset.

Chet Ellis comments on 'spare change'

By Chet Ellis

After being asked to jot down a few ideas for this Cohasset Mariner issue commemorating its fifth anniversary, I thought it might be fun to commemorate my own twentieth anniversary of living in Cohasset by reflecting on the changes that have occurred in town since I arrived in 1963.

Really, Mariner fans, there have been changes, for example just try and get a mooring before retirement age! Remember when they were giving them away? At present there are 138 people on the four foot sailboat waiting list.

Rather than do all the reflecting myself, I decided to interview some of my favorite characters in town to see what changes, if any, they felt were significant. The answers were quite varied.

Bates Lincoln Pratt (the hermit of Beechwood; an irascible curmonger who lives in a shack overlooking the new reservoir; tends to remember the good old days).

"Change? Nuthin ever changes! Even though they dug a reservoir where my cave used to be, nuthin's really changed. Still got to get up in the morning. Even though Cohasset's been through five school superintendents, four police chiefs, three fire chiefs, two health agents, and seventeen different selectmen in the past twenty years, the sun still comes up in the morning and sets at night. The only time you'll see a change in Cohasset is when they build the waste treatment plant in Little Harbor and Hugo's becomes a Chinese restaurant.

Mrs. C. Arthur Winslow (Grand Dame of Atlantic Avenue; plays tennis mornings and drives a Volvo wagon).

"Changes. Of couse there have been changes! Why, all the 210's have graphite masts now, there'll be no more lawn parties at the Cox Estate, and best of all, they finally stock Poupon mustard at the Central Market. I mean really, nothing else matters, does it?"

Elizabeth Looney (Former school committee member; for three years headed subcommittee to design the parking spaces at Deer Hill School).

"Well, I would have liked to have seen more change. After that nice Mr. Grey left, everything just seemed to settle down to a dull roar. I mean with word processors in the Business Dept., computers in the Math Dept., and taped classic comics in the English Dept., there's nothing for the teachers to get excited about anymore, is there?"

Maxwell Santos (Parttime lobsterman and fulltime bait-barrel philosopher).

'I'll say things have changed! The lobsters are gettin' nastier and harder to deal with! Why, they used to jump in the traps for 50 cents a pound. Now, ya got to deal with their agents to get 'em in the pots for three bucks a pound. They're gettin' greedy, like professional athletes. Don't taste as good either. Don't eat 'em myself anyway, no damn good for ya', causes local weakness."

Phenias Van Hyde, M.D. (Kindly local physician; holds secret IOU's from many prominent citizens).

"Changes? I'll say, used to be you could a lot perked for a pat on the back and a bottle of bourbon. Now, it's impossible to get a beach permit for your roommate. I like things the way they used to be, you know, fair and equitable."

So in Cohasset the concept of change continues to change. Is the town still in the Dark Ages or the Age of Enlightment? Will the Fire Department survive, or will change do it in? How will you react when faced with the ultimate question, 'ya got any spare change?'

Here is the trophy and all the players on the Cohasset High School championship hockey team, winners of the South Shore League.

Girls soccer, boys wrestling were additions

By Cindi Bondi

Cohasset sports have seen a lot of changes in the past five years. "I thought girls soccer would take away from field hockey instead soccer drew girls from the cross country team." said Athletic Director Clark Chatterton.

Five years ago Cohasset added a girls soccer and boys wrestling team and they remained the smallest sports competitors while the South Shore League expanded.

Interest sparked five years ago for girls soccer when the girls went before the school committee to approve the team. This year girls soccer Coach Kennan Startzell said, "We should have a winning season."

Also in the past three years Rockland, Whitman Hanson and Scituate joined the South Shore League. The three original Old Colony League schools outnumber Cohasset but this does not stop Cohasset from competing comparably.

Chatterton said, "The biggest change in sports over the last five years occured when title nine stated that men and women coaches would be payed equally." he said, "Now more men coach. When the girls sports first went on a full schedule of playing weekends and practicing daily, a lot of women coaches left."

However Chatterton said he expects that more women will want to coach. Now most women coaches come from a varsity college sports program so they are used to dedicating a lot of hours to sports.

Although interest in sports has skyrocketed, the funds have dwindled since proposition 2½. Chatterton credits the six boosters clubs: girls and boys soccer, basketball, boys football and wrestling; for keeping programs active.

Chatterton said, "The people in Cohasset have been super. I've been able to raise $45,000 since 1978."

Within five years Cohasset sports have grown tremendously. Cohasset may be a small school but they placed ninth out of 75 schools for the Dalton trophy in 1981.

Now they forge on to compete with giants like Duxbury and Rockland.

Three boys caused a major upset to school in the league three years ago. In 1980 seniors Lance Norris, David Turner and Mike Thornton demonstrated the late 1970's law to allow girls or boys on a co-ed team if the same sport was not offered to them.

Norris, Turner and Thornton played on the girls softball team. Abington forfeited against Cohasset because they did not want to risk injuries of some small girls playing against large boys.

The umpires association tried to make boys pitch from 46 feet instead of 40 feet. But equal opportunity prevailed. The boys also pitched from 40 feet.

The three boys graduated and the situation has not reoccured.

Everything you wanted to know about Claire

By Moira McCarthy

Every Mariner reader feels they know a little bit of Claire.

She makes light of all the little things in life that can get us down. She see's the things that happen every day as important, meaningful. When there's little or nothing to laugh about, Scituate residents open their Mariners to page ten and find a friend.

She's Claire McDonough, and some say she's the best thing to happen to a typewriter since Erma Bombeck.

In her livingroom, amidst the company of four cats, three dogs, and two dragons (one real, one ceramic) Claire talked about her five years with the Scituate Mariner.

"I've always written, but never for publication before this. I had a box of stuff that I wanted toshow in a bottom drawer, but I was just too chicken. I guess I was afraid of rejection.

"Well, I was working as secretary for the Conservation Commission, and I got to know (former Scituate Mariner editor) Nancy Burns. She told me she needed someone to write Around Town, and it sounded like fun to me, so I took on the job."

Claire has been writing Around Town ever since then, and her special view of the world comes out in every word.

And although she says she always panics at the last minute about filling that page (page eight, every week), the Scituate residents always come through.

"Every week I panic. It's like this great gaping hole I have to fill. But it always comes in. I see people in Angelo's, and the library, and some people just call to let me know something fun, or exciting, or nice that's happened. People are very good about helping out."

And when that fails, she says, she turns to her husband and nine children to find out the news of the week.

"I tell them, 'squeal on your best friend or something, just give me some news! That usually works." But everything can backfire once.

"I remember one Sunday I was in a panic to fill the page, so I was begging my kids to think of something exciting that's happened. One of them mentioned that a former Scituate resident had returned from California, so I put that in, and welcomed him back, saying we were glad he was here to stay.

"Well, how was I to know that a neighboring police department had a warrant out for his arrest? I guess it's comforting to know neighboring police departments read Scituate's Around Town!"

Since then, she's checked with everyone she writes about before submitting the story.

And so, Claire started out as the Around Town correspond nt.

"While I was doing that, I started to notice some funny things happening around the house, so I wrote about them. There was Skipper's video game, and the Saturday ban on women golfers, and of course the great peanut butter famine. I'd write about them when something came up, and it just caught on."

Since then, the plight of the McDounogh family has become public information, from the Dragon, to the dogs, to the dirt under Skiper's bed. Does this bother her family?

"No, not at all. Breida got mad once (about something she may get madder about if mentioned again), but she wasn't really mad. Sometimes people come up to her in the store and ask her if something is true and she yells 'It's all lies!' But I think the kids love it.

"If you look closely at my writing, I don't rank on anyone but myself. I just use the rest of the family to bounce it off onto myself. I'm more apt to do a number on myself than on anyone else."

Humor, she says is her favorite type of writing, but even with that, there are times of panic.

"Sometimes I sit down at the typewriter and think 'Oh, no, no one's done anything hillarious this week.' Then I just look at the typewriter and hope there are enough words to come out. At those times, I usually sit down and blab everything. Something always seems to come out of it.

"When you're feeling down, it's sometimes hard to be funny too. But I just try to find a way."

Although humor rates number one in her favorites book, personal interviews aren't far behind.

"I enjoy interviews a lot. You're meeting someone nice, and you're learning a great deal at the same time. You get a little glimpse into something and someone you've never seen before. You can never leave an interview without learning something new.

"Once people sit down and talk, you get another dimension of them. Even if you don't agree with them politically, you see them as a person, not a political view, and you understand them.

"Sometimes when I leave an interview, I feel a little down. Here you've met this nice person, and you feel that you may never talk to them or see them again. I almost feel like I might be dumping on them; using them to get a story."

Her favorite interview?

"Read this week's interview. That's my favorite."

How does an administrator in the office of the governor, and mother of nine find time to do all this writing?

"I make the time. It's hard to fit it in, but I enjoy it. Some people like needle point, some like housework. I'd much rather write than do housework any day. I can't imagine not writing."

The story she got the most feedback from?

"Definitely my piece on Kevin's (her son) wedding. That made everyone cry, probably because so many people could relate to it. Phil Johnston even told the Legislature that it made him cry."

Her favorite story?

"I haven't written it yet. My next is always going to be better."

The Dragon speaks out

By Claire McDonough

Reporter: Tell me, sir, does it bother you to have your wife call you the Dragon in print?

Dragon: An interesting question. How would you feel if the public perceived you as a fire-breathing, fabled monster of antiquity?

Reporter: The question is, how do you feel?

Dragon (smiling broadly): Wonderful!

Reporter: Somehow, I'm not surprised. How long have you held this title?

Dragon: Well, let's see. She's called me that for a long time. For example, if she was at a friend's house and it was time to start dinner, she might say, "Well, I'd better be going. My Dragon's home by now, and he roars when he's hungry." Still, this was before she started writing for the Mariner, so comparatively few people knew me as the Dragon.

Reporter: And has that made a difference?

Dragon: Absolutely. Five years ago I was generally a mild mannered husband and father. Even I didn't realize how capable I was of slipping into a nearby phone booth and becoming Super Dragon.

Reporter: She must know how Dr. Frankenstein felt when the Creature smashed up his laboratory then started stalking the countryside breaking peasants in half. Does your life differ much from the way it was five years ago?

Dragon: You've got to be kidding. I used to be able to shop at Angelo's, and unless I met a neighbor, almost nobody noticed me. Now I can't get past the anchovies before some woman nudges her friend and says, "That's him. That's the Dragon!" There was a time when I could hold a sign for the political candidate of my choice and people would just read the name on the poster. Now they stop and ask me for my autograph.

Reporter: You must find that tremendously exciting.

Dragon (frowning): Usually. But there was this one time when I was signing autograph books for a bunch of my fans and someone slipped in a nomination paper for a candidate I opposed. And once I actually signed a blank check. That woman looked and sounded familiar, too.

Reporter (looking away and lowering her voice): Probably an illusion. And anyway, they were taking up this collection to save the gypsy moth...

Dragon: Sounds like one of my wife's goofy causes. You know, that's one of the changes in my life since I became The Dragon. I rarely see her anymore. I mean, I lecture at Angelo's three times a week. Rose Zoob asked me to breathe some fire into a political campaign she was working on. I get invited to a lot of parties...

Reporter (sniffing a little): Do you miss her at all?

Dragon (leering): Not when I can meet lovely creatures like you. As a matter of fact, you look something like...Could it be? Claire?

Reporter (sniffing a lot): It's the only way I could get to see you. How about spending the evening together?

Dragon (magnanimously): Well, O.K. If you're sure you don't have another blank check in your notebook.

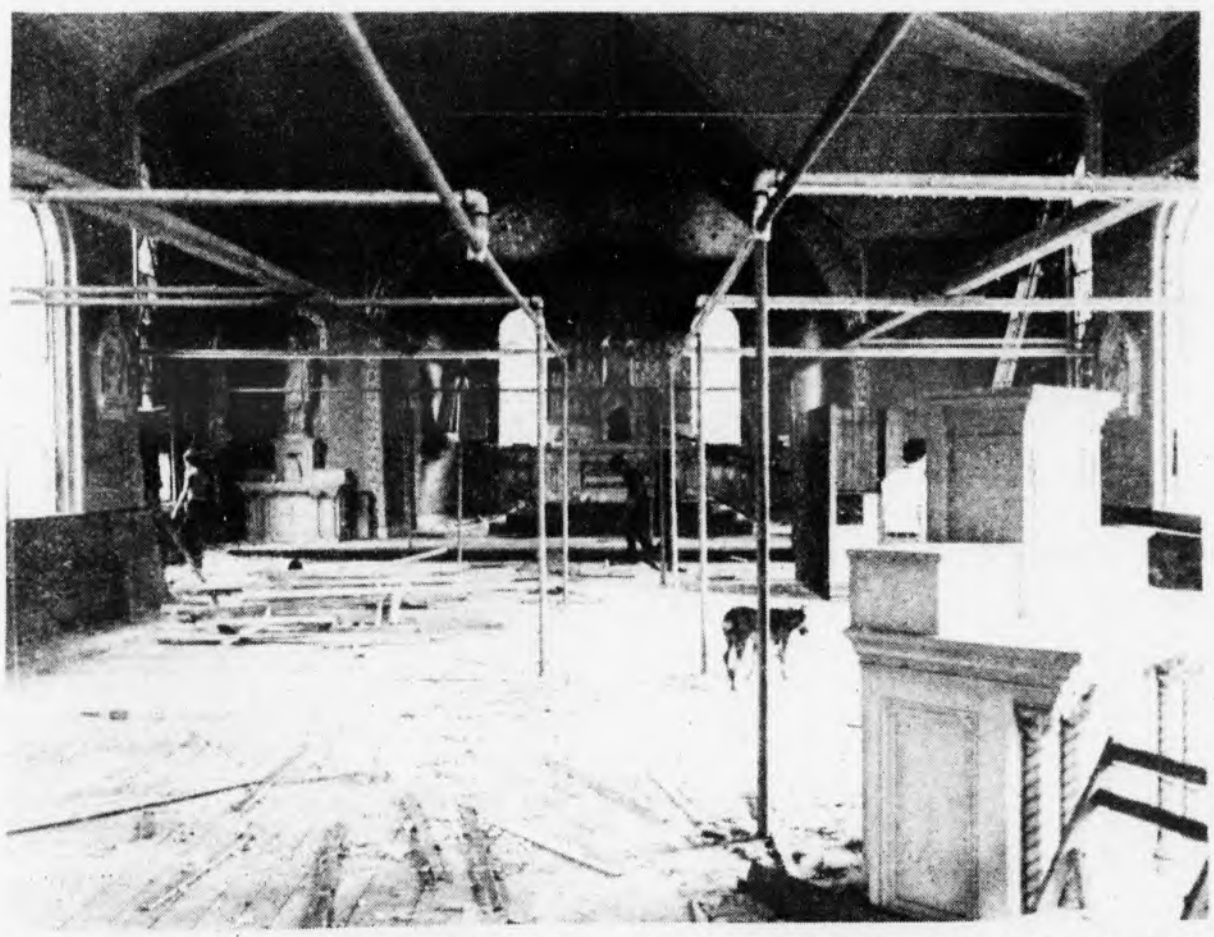
The town



Photos By

High tide doesn't phase Cohasset residents too much, it's just hard to get home sometimes.

An expanding town needs more leadership. That's why, in the spring of 1983, Cohasset added two new selectmen to the board, bringing the head count to five. Here they are on their first night as a five-member board.

One of the more tragic events of the past five years was the burning of St. Anthony's. Today, it is more beautiful than ever.

The question of who will own the Cox estate has seeded many rumors about town in the past year.

The Log and Line has been, and remains, the place to find out the local scoop. Of course they read it in their Mariners and then discuss it there.

In 1978—Mary Jeanette was a selectman

By State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Five years ago, a new newspaper arrived on the Cohasset scene. The reaction seemed to be - "We'll see."

I was a Selectman when the Cohasset Mariner was born. Our Board of Selectmen welcomed the new reporters of the fledging weekly.

It was obvious from the first edition that the Mariner newspapers were dedicated to being the important news of the town's activities as well as the goings on of our citizens.

I was in my second term as State Representative in the Third Plymouth District. My district was comprised of Cohasset and Scituate. 1978 saw redistricting throughout the state. The new 3rd Plymouth District covered Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

The size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives changed in 1978. A referendum question to cut the numbers was approved by the voters. The house had 240 members, but this was cut to 160 (losing 80 legislators) in 1978 — the year of the Cohasset Mariner.

A favorite argument by those who favored the cut was that it would be less costly with 80 less members. However, each legislator has a paid aide as a result of the cuts. It has proven to be more costly.

Another effect of the reduction of the members in the house was the fact that each legislator now represents 37,000 (minus or plus a few) population. Prior to 1978 each Representative covered a population of 23,000 (minus or plus a few).

Casino Gambling raised its ugly head and I became the leading legislator against this issue in the Commonwealth. The Cohasset Mariner and Citizens Against Casino Gambling spoke out in support of my efforts to defeat this cancer.

I'm sure we will have to fight the issue each year, but I will do all within my power to keep casinos out of our great Commonwealth.

One of the better things that has been happening at the State House is the fact that legislation has become law which protects the victims of rape and violent crimes. The drunk driving bill which was long overdue became a reality. Some of the issues in my own "drunk driving" bill were incorporated in the new law.

Unfortunately, Massachusetts has not cut back, but has actually increased spending each year. The large bureaucracy instead of cutting back, keeps growing in size. Also, the rules and regulations established by these departments extend to each and everyone.

The big change this year has been "no new taxes;" however, fees have increased considerably and they have been expanded to cover areas which have never been taxed. I voted against the gasoline tax increase. I voted for the cigarette tax increase when it left the House.

The Senate added so many more increases in that bill that I could not and did not vote for the Senate version.

I congratulate the Cohasset Mariner for a job well done. We wish you many more years of fine service to the community.

Thank you, David Cutler and crew, for your fine articles and editorials, too. May you continue to provide us with pertinent information and entertainment.

Mary Jeanette Murray

Transportation was and is a key issue

By State Sen. Allan McKinnon

As the State Senator representing Cohasset and six other South Shore towns, it is a pleasure for me to congratulate theCohasset Mariner on the publication of its fifth anniversary issue.

A number of developments at the state level over the past five years have reflected an appreciation on the part of the State Legislature and several state agencies of Cohasset's distinctive nature.

During my years in the Senate I have filed and worked for legislative initiatives to benefit the town.

Although the North River does not flow directly through Cohasset, it is a very special natural resource and its protection, I'm sure, is of concren to the citizens of Cohasset. I was one of the sponsors of the legislation to create the Scenic Rivers Program which is empowered to regulate the alteration and pollution of the scenic rivers and streams in Massachusetts. The North River was designated as the state's first scenic river and served as a demonstration project in 1977 and 1978 for the entire state.

Funded annually in the state budget, the commission has developed a management plan to protect and preserve the river by restricting development and certain other activities along its shores. Established over a decade ago under the Scenic Rivers Act, The North River Commission cntinues to work actively for the protection of the North River.

In 1978 I sponsored a bill which became law to make the state responsible for the costs of shellfish purification. Without this law communities in the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District would have had to pay nearly $250,000 for this purpose over a five-year period.

The Blizzard of '78 was one of nature's catastrophic events that certainly took its toll on the town and its residents. My office worked with federal, state and local officials coordinating the various state and federal emergency assistance programs to aid storm victims and reconstruct damaged coastal areas.

Since a storm of such magnitude had not been experienced in this century, we were forced to develop new policies to comply with current land use and environmental regulations. Federal and state policy guidelines are now in place to deal with project management and municipal reconstruction if a similar destructive storm should hit again.

The South Shore Transportation Caucus was established by former state Rep. Philip Johnston and myself in 1981. Representative Frank Hynes and I now co-chair the caucus which provides a much needed forum for South Shore commuters seeking improved modes of transportation to and from Boston.

The caucus has been recognized as a political force and subsequently has had a positive impact on the South Shore's transportation systems. I am happy to report that many suggestions from commuters have been implemented.

South Shore commuter boat service is thriving. A supporter of water transit from the South Shore to Boston, I have continually worked for an annual state appropriation to fund commuter boat operations. A transportation bond bill expected to be signed into law before the end of this legislative session incudes $1 million for expansion of commuter boat service. Through its steady ridership, commuter boat service has proven to be a reliable and comfortable means of travelling to Boston for many Cohasset citizens.

The synchronization of the lights along Rte. 3A was the result of the citizens' petition initiated by my office. Although Rte. 3A is a very heavily-travelled corridor, the synchronization helps ease the traffic flow to the relief of hundreds of commuters from Cohasset who drive this roadway daily.

Jet noise caused by air traffic from Logan Airport has impacted heavily on Cohasset and other South Shore communities. My office has worked closely with the Coastal Noise Abatement Coalition and the coalition's Cohasset representative to press Massport and the FAA to implement improved flight procedures to minimize noise impact.

Proposition 2½ has dominated the state budgetary process over the past three years. Under the leadership of the Senate Ways and Means Committee of which I am a member, over one-half billion dollars in additional local aid has been returned to local communities such as Cohasset to help ease the effects of Proposition 2½ on local governments.

A major issue in Cohasset is the long debate over sewer treatment. Our office has been in constant touch with local and state officials in attempting to come up with a solution amenable to all parties. Cohasset is obviously committted to sewer extension, and I feel a cost-effective, efficiency system is necessary. I will continue to be available to assist the town in this crucial matter and will support the wishes of the townspeople in whatever alternative they choose.

For the past five years the Mariner has provided the Town of Cohasset with excellent news coverage and feature articles. Best wishes to the staff as they continue to provide a distinguished informational medium in the community.

MERCEDES-BENZ NEWS
For 1984 Prestige Imports proudly announces the coming introduction of the new 190 (small body) gasoling-powered and diesel-powered automobiles. Also, Merecedes-Benz will add to its 1984 model line 500 SEL's and 500 SEC's and the 380 SE SEDAN. The fine new 1984 models will be available for late October delivery.

The new 190D 2.2's (diesel) and 190D 2.3's (gasoline) are roomy inside with optimum efficiency in space conservation. Mercedes-Benz has built the finest compact size automobile in history. Nimble and responsive, it is a fine car for in town and suburban driving—also an excellent road car. Orders are being accepted now for Oct. and Nov. delivery.

240D
A salute to the most refined economy car the world has seen so far. At 190.9 inches and 3265 pounds, the 240D has provided us with 10 years of comfort, reliability and safety. Since its introduction the 240D has been refined many times. It will be a fond farewell to this great model, as the last of the 240D's have been shipped.

A few of the 1983 Mercedez-Benz 240D automatic and 4 speed models are still available for delivery.

OVERSEAS DELIVERY
It might be too late to special order a new Mercedes-Benz for delivery this summer in Sinderfingen. Orders are now being accepted for all 300 models for 1984 early delivery.
However, if you are planning a trip to Europe this Fall and you are interested in this memorable avenue to European travel and to ownership of a new Mercedes-Benz automobile, contact us for possible availability on cancellations of special orders. We are experienced tourist order agents.

NOTE: 1984 MODELS ARE ARRIVING NOW!

Librarian Dick Hayes projects

By Richard Hayes
Director, Paul Pratt Memorial Library

Several times over the past dozen years, Cohasset's library director has drafted but not published scenarios for the closing of the town library.

Sometimes these dark thoughts were caused by failure to win an adequate budget. Sometimes an effort was made to explore the concepts of consolidation and regionalization of public library service.

Within 10 minutes driving time of the Cohasset library are four neighboring town libraries of uneven quality.

As Proposition 2½ and other political realities limit local tax funds, and as information services become more expensive, libraries of all kinds and sizes will be challenged to justify their existence. In the past year, politicians in some nearby towns have aired the notion of closing the public library.

As people increasingly work in information-driven offices and get their personal entertainment and information over home computers, video cassettes and cable television, the small public library will either identify and perform a unique and vital role, or it will die.

A well-used library like Cohasset's is more likely to survive than others. This library lends 14 items per person each year, more than double the state average. In-house use of materials and services is equally healthy.

The popularity of library service in Cohasset was demonstrated by a town vote to spend $200,000 to renovate the 70-year old building in 1976. But that was before Proposition 2½.

A reliable measure of support is the 200-member Friends of the Library organization and $20,000 of volunteer labor every year. But the dollars from this source equal less than 2 percent of the library's budget.

If the library continues to be a dynamic institution, its source of funding is likely to change significantly in the next few years.

In 1983, 98 percent of the library budget came from town taxes, two percent from the state, and four percent from endowments and gifts.

In the five years, 1977-1981, the town appropriation for the library increased 53 percent, keeping up with inflation and permitting modest improvements in services.

Brakes were put on this growth by Proposition 2½ and in the last two years the town appropriation has grown only four percent—one-fifth the rate of increase prior to Prop. 2½.

The result has been reduced open hours (staff cuts), reduced book buying and less than cost of living wage adjustments.

If the small town library survives, through community support of new organizational and funding mechanisms, major changes will take place in the next few years in the way the library operates.

Libraries all over the country are adopting computers. Public libraries are behind business, academic and school libraries in this trend. Computers in libraries have two primary roles. One is to automate the repetitive clerical tasks.

The Cohasset library has more such transactions each day than any other municipal agency—about 1,700 data transactions a day that are amenable to data processing: checkout, sort, count, file and checking loans; order and receive materials and catalog cards; file and withdraw catalog cards; prepare lists and indexes; search and fill requests; file registrations and issue borrower cards; process overdue procedures.

The second primary function of a library computer is to improve public access to information. When the catalog of library holdings is stored in a computer and displayed on terminals, users will search and find information more than they do now. When the library can call up remote computers and search other databases, a whole new dimension of information service will be avaialble.

When all libraries are computerized, users will be able to locate wanted materials quickly in other libraries and know instantly if the material is available.

More than 50 Massachusetts public libraries are now using computers in these ways. The state library agency has just adopted a state plan for expanding use of computers in libraries.

One of the ways computers will interconnect will be cable television. All public libraries will be on local cable networks. Eventually cable systems will interconnect for data transmission. When the Cohasset system is installed, American Cablesystems will give the library a one-year subscription to KEYFAX, a teletext magazine of continuously updated news, sports, weather, business, book reviews and special features. Users will access the magazine in the library with a computer terminal and video monitor.

American Cablesystems will test the market for this service and if the test is favorable will offer the service to subscribers for $20 a month. Should the library continue this subscription? Should it buy access to other cable and computer data services? Can the library afford new services when its budget—$20 per year per capita—is frozen at a small fraction of the average household's expenditures for cable, video, books, magazines and newspapers?

If public libraries have a clear role in providing information to the public, and if funding is predictable, then these developments are inevitable for most good libraries. But it would be foolish to invest in these technologies if the public library is unable to maintain basic resources and the skilled people needed to deliver services on a favorable schedule of open hours.

Cox Estate variance issues clouded in court

By Cindi Bondi and Mike Berger

Week II of the Cox Estate-Yankee Oil Company variance has ended and no solution to the litigation filed by the Planning Board is in sight.

Currently a list of problems with the variance has been sent by the planning board's attorney to Yankee Oil's attorney Chris Sullivan.

Sullivan said he is willing to meet and negotiate with the board but also said the board has no legal right to demand or require anything of Yankee Oil.

The company received a variance from the appeals board last week. Earlier the firm received a constructive grant variance and the right to house their company there because the appeals board was late in a variance decision.

Yankee Oil decided to drop the constructive variance and accept the appeals board conditions if the planning board agreed to drop a complaint5 filed against the appeals board for failure to issue a decision within 75 days.

The planning board is concerned about proper land use planning, the number of employees the company will bring to the former estate.

In addition, the board would like a portion of the former estate, not used by the company to be used by the town for either recreation or conservation purposes.

The planning board's decision to file a court complaint has upset some residents.

Several Cohasset residents said that it is not fair for taxpayers to fund the legal battle between the planning board and the board of appeals, over the Cox Estate.

David Hollway of 35 Linden Drive said, "Should the zoning board of appeals be sued by the planning board and have taxpayers pay for it? Is that right?"

Selectman chairman Mary Jane McArthur said, "I can't answer that right now. It is something that will have to be discussed."

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said, "Selectmen are still deciding whether or not to continue to supply the planning board with the special counsel."

Presently, special counsel member Anthony Feehary is designated to represent the planning board.

Yankee Oil Company attorney Christopher Sullivan said, "We are willing to work with the boards. We have tried to make ourselves available we did not choose to litigate this matter. We could have had unfetted discretion of this property and we did not."

Currently there are twelve restrictions on the Cox Estate. Most pertinent to Cohasset residents are that the Cox Estate will not be used as a restaurant or showroom and that there will only be 29 parking spaces. Fifty employees will be housed there.

Sullivan said, "If the planning board loses there will be no restrictions on the Cox Estate. We had come to terms on the variance with the board of appeals and we had restrictions placed on the Estate."

The variance with restrictions expires in 25 years. If there are no restrictions Yankee Oil will not have to reapply after 25 years.

Sullivan concluded, "The selectmen are the guardians of the purse strings they will say if it (the hearing) will be funded or not."

Contacted Tuesday Sullivan said, "If this does not get wrapped up quickly and the longer it drags on , we may strike back with lawsuits or file for a tax abatement.

"The planning board should take into consideration the wishes of the local residents and abutters," he said.

One resident, Richard Tibbets, an abutter to the estate has filed a court complaint because he feels the appeals board should have definite input into the variance decision.

Wheelchair ramp progress continues

The Cohasset Commons Historical District Committee gave a preliminary approval to build a wheelchair ramp on the left side of town hall.

The committee is waiting to review a sketch of the ramp before granting final approval, said Jim Lagrotteria, advisory board chairman.

Response from the committee was "extremely positive" about the proposed ramp, he said.

The ramp will be on the left side as one faces town hall. This side was chosen because the height from the ground to the building is one foot less on the left side than it is on the right side.

If built on the right, the ramp would have to be about twice as long in order to comply with regulations governing the ramp's incline per foot.

The ramp will be built as soon as proper approvals have been made, Lagrotteria said.

Upon completion of the sketch, he plans to go back for the committee's final approval. "I think if the sketch is drawn according to the regulations, there will be no problem" obtaining approval, he said.

Plans will then need to be approved by selectmen. Construction should begin immediately following the board's approval.

Revaluation means new tax rate

One-hundred percent revaluation is nearing an end and this means a new tax rate may be set by Dec. 1.

Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin is predicting the tax rate will likely be under $20 per $1,000 property valuation.

The current tax is $55.50 per $1,000 valuation.

Wilkin said few homes in Cohasset will be valued at less than $60,000.

If a home is valued at $100,000, and the tax rate is $20 per $1,00 valuation, the tax bill will be $2,000.

"Some people's bills are going to go up and some are going to go down, but they won't be going up or down that much," said Wilkin.

Those homeowners who have not had their homes on the market for decades will see a sharp increase in their assessments.

Selectmen will decide whether to set a separate, higher tax rate for commercial properties.

In Wilkin's own personal opinion, there isn't that much industry in town to set different rates.

Assessors have requested state inspectors to review revaluation methods and accuracy. Wilkin said the inspection could take between two weeks and a month before completed.

Once cerified, assessors will hold public meetings and send out impact notices to all owners.

Final cable costs requested

By Cindi Bondi

A provisional cable license has been granted to Cohasset for American Cable Systems and this month's report will indicate how well the company is meeting standards for a final license.

Cohasset Cable T.V. committee member Terrence Farrell said, "We are asking American to tell us where we stand on the prerequisites for the final license and by when they will be needed."

He added, "We will also have to know the final costs."

The final license does not officially have to be approved for 12 months. However, American Regional Manager Steve Farquahr has said everything is right on schedule.

American informed Cohasset, in a Sept. 14 letter. that they would be able to attach their cables to poles in Scituate.

The state Cable Television Commission drew up prospective guidelines for a follow-up cable council which would consist of nine members.

Five members would be from the Cable Television Committee, one would be a member of the School Dept. and others would be from user groups.

Cable Commission Chairman Joe McCool said, "We should have committee members because we know what we can expect from American Cable Systems. We also know the tools that we have to work with."

McCool asked American Cable Systems representa-

New board members

The Board of Health appointed two new members to the Hazardous Materials Committee. They are Linda Wakeman and Jainine Broadhurst.

Straits Pond

Straits Pond abutters Charles Aronovici and Joanne Shepherd asked selectmen if the pond would be drained, Oct. 16 and if new flood gates would be installed during November.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said, "We are not on the same schedule as we had optomistically planned."

Aronovici learned State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray had received approval from the state for funding new flood gates in November. Also, Hull selectmen told Aronovici and Shepherd of a management program which would drain the pond by Oct. 16.

Selectman chairman Mary Jane McArthur said, "We need to set up a joint meeting with the Hull selectmen. The tri-town is not the right group to go to with this problem."

Selectman John DeBassio said, "We should set up a time to meet so that this issue does not die over the winter."

Hazardous material topics

The Hazardous Material Advisory Committee will meet Thursday, Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Water Department, King Street.

Topics to be discussed include: results of the Hazardous Material Survey, introduction of new members, educational program on water, hazardous material collection day and waste oil.

Bus stops approved

South Shore Bus Tours Inc. received approval of the revised bus stops for the three commuter bus runs.

Manager of the bus tours company Jeff Miller said, "We've made progress. We have made plans with Cushing Plaza to make a stop at the end of King and Forest Sts."

He added, "We took one run and had no problem pulling the bus off the road there."

Executive secretary Mark Lanza said, "Our license specifies travel at these stops. The state will determine whether the license will go past 90 days."

Selectman Clifford Mitman said, "I suggest that we ask for a report, as to how the stops are working out from the safety officer after 90 days."

Marriage, Family Course

Mike Gill, health coordinator, presented a "Marriage and Family Living" curriculum guide to the school committee Monday. The course, a senior elective and one semester, will cover these topics. Marriage in a changing society, dating, love, marriage alternatives and variations, premarital sexual behavior and the sexual revolution, preparation for marriage through choice, engagement, sexual life in marriage, from marriage to the family, pregnancy and childbirth, child rearing and family living, managing resources and the family, changing commitments, separation and divorce, family crisis management and marriage and family counseling. Gill said these topics were the subjects wanted to be discussed among the students. Gill is working with the Health Education Committee to develop the curriculum.

Town Clerk hospitalized

Town Clerk Charles Marks is listed in stable condition and doing better after suffering a heart attack last week. He is recuperating at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton.

Help wanted

The Board of Health and the Sewer Comission are looking for a 35-hour per week secretary to perform typing and clerical duties. The position also involves eight hours per month of evening meetings. The person should begin work Oct. 17. For information call 383-1664 or 383-6630.

Warrant discussion

Advisory Committee Chairman Jim Lagrotteria said at a recent selectmen's meeting he was the last to receive a copy of warrants for the special town meeting yet every warrant should be printed by the advisory committee.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "I have been to town meetings since I was a kid and I don't remember them (warrants) being advised by selectmen."

Some selectmen believe that they should have the right to recomend articles. Selectman John DeBassio said, "People need to realize that selectmen have interest too. Especially where you have a statutory obligation."

Selectman Frank England said, "Why not list who recommended the article at the bottom of the article?" DeBassio said, "People should know if there is agreement or opposition to the article ahead of time."

Advisory member Jill O'Donnell asked, "If you put forth the warrant should you also recommend it ?" Another committee member, Jackie Dormitzer added, "It is confusing to violate the spirit of the by-law. Also it is preferable for a non-political body to recommend articles. The by-law states that the advisory committe should review all warrants and report them in writing."

O'Donnell questioned why selectmen do not think it is sufficient for selectmen to speak on the floor at town meetings?

England said, "Selectmen need to take more of a leadership role in the town."

Lagrotteria requested warrant recommendations should be printed by the advisory board.

Fuel assistance program

Alfred Odermatt, town fuel assistance program representative asked selectmen recently to allow a fuel assistant application program at the Cohasset Town Hall so Cohasset residents will not have to go to Scituate or Hull

Odermatt said, "We now have a big enough program which has expanded to six programs of: fuel assistance, fuel conservation, weatherization aid, Kennedy fuel aid, energy audit and heating oil co-op; so Cohasset should take responsibility for the program."

He added, "Before no one but office or field workers could assist applicants. Now that funds have been cut, volunteers from the Council of Aging are willing to come to the town hall to help others fill out forms to determine eligibility for fuel assistance rating."

Selectmen agreed with holding fuel assistance application in Cohasset. Selectman Clifford Mitman requested a listing of specific hours the town hall will be open for applicants.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle asked, "Haven't you gone to applicants' homes?" Odermatt said that in the past some applicants have been unable to leave their homes so a representative has had to come from Plymouth.

He added, "If we can set up a program here with enough volunteers than we won't have to ask someone to come up from Plymouth."

Odermatt seeks two volunteers to help people fill out applications one day a week.

He also said, "I want to emphasize, to selectmen the need for someone to take on some responsibilities of an energy coordinator. I'd be happy to handle the publicity and training of volunteers. But, the whole energy program has grown so that someone must help with energy coordination."

Medi Mart lice solution

Medi Mart Drug Store Company in cooperation with the National Pediculosis Association has developed a brochure that will highlight the safe treatment of pediculosis (lice) during National Pediculosis Awareness and Education month.

The brochure will be distributed with all new Lindane prescriptions and available free to any consumer from the health information rack.

Head lice on elementary school children has become a major problem. The focus on schools as a probable site of infestation is made because the environment facilitates the transmission of lice among elementary school children in many ways. Shared lockers and athletic equipment and the close physical contact children of that age have, all make ideal conditions for transmission.

The new brochure contains safety directions and guidelines for treatment of pediculosis with Lindane-containing products which are the most widely prescribed delousing shampoos. Although these guidelines are for one particular product, both over-the-counter and prescription lice remedies are pesticidal and dangerous if misused or abused. The most up-to-date facts parents should know about the use of pesticidal shampoos are:

Lindane-containing shampoos are not merely medicated shampoos; they are prescription pesticides and should be used carefully.

They should not be confused with Lindane creams and lotions which are used to control scabies.

Never treat anyone in the bathtub or shower.

Never apply Lindane following a warm bath.

Never use Lindane to prevent lice.

Never treat anyone with open cuts on the head/neck.

Total treatment includes nit removal.

Pregnant or nursing women and infants should be protected.

Report every new case of lice in your family to the parents of your child's playmates, your school and local health departments.

Do not use in conjunction with any other cream or lotion.

Store Lindane products out of the reach of children.

Vo Tech grant

The South Shore Vocational Technical High School recently received $33,898 from a federally funded grant from the state Board of Education. The funds will be used for vocational acclimation assessment at the school.

The Board of Education recently approved grants totaling $457,022 to train high school students from six school districts for the world of work. The board yearly approves about $12 million in federal vocational funds to support job related programs of instruction in the public schools.

Mass. Commissioner of Education John Lawson explained the board's feeling concerning the awarding of these grants. "The board and I are cognizant of the fact that 45 percent of our high school graduates do not go on to college. Therefore, we have a responsibility to equip these youngsters with the tools necessary to compete effectively in the job market after graduation," he said.

Lawson said that a great deal of emphasis is being placed on training in computer programming and word processing in the awarding of these grants because of the importance of the high technology industry to the economic health of Masschusetts.

"Special attention is also paid to those students who have been underserved in the past, such as disadvantaged, minority, bilingual and handicapped students," Lawson said.

Planning Bd. asks for motel public use answer

Four Planning Board members voted to send selectmen and Appeals Board members a letter regarding alleged variance violations of the "Cohasset by the Sea" motel.

"The planing board is concerned over the apparent lack of action on the part of the Board of Selectmen and the Building Inspector regarding what appears to be open violation of the variance granted to John Caszis-Kimballs dated Jan. 16, 1975 by the present owners of the motel, "Cohasset by the Sea," planners said.

The letter authored by board member Daniel Cotton says: "A convenant made in good faith is a condition to the granting of a variance, which we believe to be a special privilege and in no way a right, is being blatantly violated.

"Second, by their apparent non-action, the enforcing authorities are signalling that our zoning by-law is lightly regarded by the authorities and anyone so inclined may disregard it as well as restrictions placed by the Board of Appeals.

'Third, by allowing this situation to persist, the violations became more firmly entrenched and therefore more difficult to rectify."

The planning board requested a written reply and a meeting with selectmen to discuss the issue of zoning-by-law enforcement.

Planning Board member Robert Sturdy questioned if the town should be "wide open."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said since the matter was brought before selectmen by Atty. Charles Humphreys, (representing the Roy family who own Cohasset-By-The-Sea) he has had Assistant Town Counsel John Slater researching the question, and expects a memorandum regarding the constitutionality of the original decision this week.

Attorney Humphreys referred to the letter he wrote selectmen July 6 calling placing a restriction on the Innholders License "an outrageous act." He said he has provided Henderson with documents and research regarding the constitutional right of his clients to advertise under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and the 14th Amendment to the State Constitution.

Humphreys says he is questioning the constitutionality of the agreement. "Each owner or operator of the motel shall faithfully comply with the conditions by John Carzis set forth in his letter dated Aug. 30, 1974 and the facilities of the motel shall be maintained for the benefit of occupants of motel rooms, and for the owner and his personal guests only."

The agreement makes provisions for "valet parking of cars of all persons occupying rooms in the motel, and cars of all persons visiting such occupants, and cars of all motel owners shall be parked in the designated parking area and in no event on the street."

"Those areas (of the motel) that are not restricted to the exclusive use of motel guests will not be so operated as to produce any invitation to the general public to utilize the facilities. On the contrary, these may be used by a select group personally invited by the owner for personal reasons and limited to time."

Carzis agreed to these stipulations.

Blue Ribbon show opens Friday

The South Shore Art Center's annual Blue Ribbon show featuring works by its gallery artists and general membership opens Friday, Oct. 14 with a formal reception from 6 to 8 p.m.

The opening coincides with the center's general membership meeting and "pot luck" supper and is held in the center's building, 103 Ripley Road. The Blue Ribbon Show represents a variety of media and style and blue ribbons will be given in various categories.

This annual all-center show gives a chance for gallery artists and members to exhibit their work in a comprehensive exhibit of all media and for the general public to see the quality of work created by the Center's membership.

The exhibit will hang until Nov. 12 in the Center Invitational Gallery. Hours for viewing the show are Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

BARN SALE

The fall months are synonomous with "cleaning out" and that is precisely what the South Shore Art Center plans to do at its Great Barn Sale.

Unframed art, articles from the lost and found collection, unclaimed art and other artifacts will be on sale at the Great Barn Sale at the center, 103 Ripley road, Cohasset Saturday, Oct. 29 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Barn Sale items will include frames, glass, miscellaneous supplies and unclaimed work by members, students and gallery artists.

Items included in the Lost and Found box are portrait pastels, a down vest, a tackle box full of paints and other goodies. The respectful owners of any of the lost and found items may stake a claim to their property from 10:30 to 11 a.m. the day of the sale.

Coinciding with the Barn Sale but separate from it will be the center's Art Sale of unframed work by gallery artists. Work will be on sale in the center and will be mounted or matted for easy handling.

As a benefit event for the center, the Art Sale calls on the members to contribute to the continued growth of the center and to ensure its place as a dynamic cultural force on the South Shore.

Visitors will find an excellent selection of art with a good cross section of prices from which to choose for either their home, office or vacation place or as a gift for someone especially with the holiday season approaching.

For further information call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

American Cablesystems explains programming

By Wendy Forman
American Cablesystems

Scituate and its surrounding communities will soon be linked by Cable Television, like Boston and the major cities of the country are networked together by CBS, ABC and NBC.

Sounds fantastic? A stretched metaphor? Not at all. Scituate, Hull, Hingham, Cohasset and Norwell will be collaborating on a regional network of programming this coming January.

Take an example. The Scituate-Cohasset Thanksgiving Day football game may someday soon have higher TV ratings on the South Shore, than a Monday Night football game between New Orleans and Denver.

Why not? You know the kids in the game and in the band and your neighbors are in the stands as the camera passes by.

"Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" is on TV tonight. Not Elizabeth Taylor and Garraro in starring roles but your lawyer friend from Norwell and a real estate agent from Hull in the South Shore Community Theatre.

The Tennis Club has its finals next month. The Garden Club has a show that gets you out of Ch. 2 Bob Thompson's Brighton garden and vegetable patch into the gardens, greenhouses and homes of the best South Shore gardeners.

You'll get up in the morning to an exercise show, not necessarily a Joannie Greggin's "Morning Stretch" out of San Francisco, but to the disco tunes and aerobic jumps of those good-looking young women from the local dance group.

You may attend a church service or other church related activities via your TV set.

A junior high school science fair, a local businessmen's panel discussing the South Shore economy or the national economy, a participatory cooking show, a girls field hockey game, Little League, a regular "Good News" show about weddings, births, engagements and so on.

Hockey games from the Winter Garden, waterfront activities and maybe a how-to sailing and boating show, local game shows, library presentations, regular coverage of selectmen and school community meetings. The possibilities are limited only by the imagination and energy of you, the Cohasset and Scituate residents.

It's called "Community Access" programming. It's part of the agreement between your town and American Cablesystems to make the local channels available to you as residents of these five communities.

You can be the producers, the camera persons, the crews. We at American Cablesystems will train you, provide you with the best equipment available, free of charge. The equipment is simple, portable, designed to be used by lay persons.

We'll give you four evening lessons on the camera and four more on editing, and you're your own producer. You'll need a crew, people with like interests in your production, or maybe you want to join someone else's productions. We'll have cable "drops" around Scituate and many more in other communities. In schools, libraries, town halls, where you can plug in for "live" shows which can go to one, two, three, or all of the five communities in our regional "network."

American Cablesystems has recently hired program directors for Scituate and Hull, two of the first towns to be wired; Wendy Forman, program director for Scituate and Peter Huston, program director for Hull. Both have been contacting and visiting with many people and organizations in their towns already, even though the actual physical systems, studio, "drops," mobile van, and so on, won't be in place until late January.

Scituate school system is enthusiastic and ready to go. So is the football and band boosters club, the garden club and many others. There is no question that this South Shore "network" is going to be one of the liveliest in American Cablesystems or any other cable organization.

"Regionalization" is the key word in cable television today, and these five contiguous towns are one of the neatest regional packages put together yet in Massachusetts, communities both with similar and varied interests and make-up, linked by cable into an electronic neighborhood.

"Community Access Programming" is the sleeping giant of the American television scene. It could be 1947 all over again, when broadcasting first started.

It may not be too wild to project that someday "local access programming" will have achieved parity in popularity with city-originated and network-originated television.

In the end, it may be the Scituate-Cohasset Turkey Day football game versus two dull professional teams from the Midwest. Or, can CBS cover the local church service?

There's no question that "local access programming" has allotted a significant piece of the incredible expanding cable television world and placed it in the hands of the viewers.

Now it's your turn. Have fun. And you can't complain about TV anymore.

Introductory workshops will begin Oct. 20.

They will run every Tuesday and Thursday evening. A one evening session from 7 to 10 p.m. will get you started in production. Our studio is located at 170R Front Street, (Scituate.) Those interested in taking a workshop, should call me at 545-4907. We will also give special group workshops for organizations.

Math Aide appointed

The School Committee appointed Maureen Lalumiere as a math aide at the high school. The committee discussed the possibility of Gino DiGirolamo, assistant high school principal, teaching a course. However, School Supt. Eugene Crowell said DiGirolamo is needed for administrative and discipline functions and couldn't spare the 40-minute classroom period

Commuter woes will be lessened

By Judith Denzer Cooper

The State is making plans to help reduce commuter problems during the 1984-1985 rebuilding of the Southeast Expressway. Michael Meyer of the Bureau of Transportation Planning said, "We are here tonight to talk about specifics" and proceeded to list improvements and alternatives for those who must travel to Boston every day.

The latest meeting of the South Shore Transportation Caucus was held at the Hingham Town Hall on Sept. 29. Senator Alan McKinnon and Representative Frank Hynes are the sponsors of the citizen group.

Park and Ride Increase

Meyer said approximately 1,000 new parking spaces will be added to new or existing park and ride facilities. There are 13 lots presently located on the South Shore. The Rockland lot will increase its capacity by 300 spaces and 100-car facilities will be added in Pembroke, Plymouth (Long Pond and Cherry Street), West Bridgewater, New Bedford and Wareham.

Meyer also said that ride-sharing by Caravan (Vanpools) and carpools will be encouraged. Information will be sent to employers and the public to help people develop ride-sharing programs.

Commuter Boat

The commuter boat from Hingham will have an increased parking facility and MBTA passes may be issued to those who ride the boat. The idea of MBTA passes had been suggested at a past meeting by Caroline Stouffer of the Hingham transportation committee.

There is the possibility of a second commuter boat but Meyer could not give firm information as a decision in this area is not due for about two weeks.

Meyer said the 500 additional parking spaces and improved paving and lighting at the boat yard will be in place by the spring of 1984.

He pointed out that improvements for the commuter boat area will be permanent and benefit people long after the reconstruction project is complete.

Members of the audience cautioned the State not to make improvements without looking at the "whole picture." They noted that improving parking for those taking the boat is pointless unless a traffic light is also installed to let drivers out onto Rte. 3A.

Another resident said that the boat would be much more useful if it could land near South Station instead of its present dock. "Right now you have a choice of a long walk in the rain or the blue line (MBTA)," he said.

The obstacle to docking near South Station is the Northern Avenue Bridge. The bridge is owned by the city of Boston and is scheduled to be rebuilt. Meyer said it would be very complicated to try to get the new bridge built to accommodate the commuter boat.

Improving the "T"

William Stead, director of operations for the MBTA, spoke at length about the red line and what is being done to bring better service to those who use it.

There is enough equipment to provide service for increased ridership on the red line. But two major problems must be solved. New construction at the Harvard end of the line is slowing down the trains and improvements must be made to the signal system all along the line.

Stead said his goal was to bring a train through each station every three minutes during the rush hours. He lost some members of the audience however when he said at present the trains are only going through the stations every four minutes.

"That must be a different red line," one person mumbled. People did not challenge Stead but talked to each other with comments about trains coming every ten or twenty minutes rather than every four minutes.

Several members of the audience commented that they thought the State planners did a much better job at this meeting than they had in July. There are more specific plans and some commitments to projects that were just ideas two months ago.

Frank Sholock of the State Department of Public Works reviewed the eight mile project, which extends from the junction with Rte. 128 to the South Station Tunnel. He said that the northbound lanes will be done in 1984 and the southbound in 1985. Also, there will be no construction during the winter months.

Sholock reminded people why the $65,000,000 project was necessary. He said, "The parts you can't see need definitive repairs." Delay could mean a tragic accident or individual repairs as sections break down. Sholock said repairing one small section of the road creates just as much of a traffic problem as doing the entire road.

Sholock added that although the road cannot be widened there will be significant improvements in lighting, shoulder width and safety features.

In his introduction Hynes described the role of the Transportation Caucus. He said, "Our job is to provide a forum for the commuting public to meet the planners for this reconstruction project and to be advocates for your suggestions...to try to ease what will be a burdensome two years."

There will be several more public meetings to help commuters prepare for alternatives during the reconstruction project.

☐Chris Conlan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Conlan of 237 Forest Ave., was home for 30 days this summer. His family was certainly happy for the chance to see him. He is now stationed in England, where he is a captain in the Marines.

☐Saw Dick Ainslie at the football game last Saturday . . . he reports that his new job is going smoothly, but I'm sure he must miss the old homstead. Dick looked great!

☐Carol E. Conway, a student and Cohasset resident has successfully completed the Dale Carnegie Course in Effective Speaking and Human Relations. The fourteen-week courses are held throughout the year in Quincy for the South Shore area. For further information and registration, call Conway/McLain Public Relations, at 773-5044.

☐"Coastal Community Counseling Center, Inc. held a reception at Memorial Center Sept. 28, to honor their Parent Aide volunteers.

They included Judy Bronstein and Diane Santini, both of Cohasset.

These volunteers have completed a comprehensive training program qualifying them to work with families who can benefit from regularly scheduled visits to help reduce the stress they are experiencing. The program is sponsored by Coastal Community Counseling Center, Inc. through a grant from the Department of Social Services.

☐Maryellen Maurer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Maurer of 130 Doane St., enrolled as a freshman in the incoming class of 750 students at Fairfield University in Fairfield, Conn. and is majoring in chemistry.

She is a graduate of Cohasset High School where she was a member of track, cheerleading, N.H.S. and Yearbook staff.

☐Jennifer Plante was invited to the 12th Annual Kids Helping Kids Ride-A-Bike For Retarded Citizens awards dinner at the Hillcrest in Waltham Oct. 5.

Co-sponsored by the Mass. Association for Retarded Citizens and the Mass. Teachers Association — the presentations were made by an executive of the Coca Cola Bottling Co. of New England.

Jennifer was the youngest participant who raised the most money during the Ride-A-Bike last spring. She rode a total of 28 miles and collected over $350. Jennifer is 10 years-old and a fifth grade student at Deer Hill School in Cohasset.

Coca Cola Bottling Co. presented her with a $50 U.S. Savings Bond and an award certificate.

☐Two Cohasset students are members of the Bates College football team. They are Bill Duffy and Bob Donahue. A freshman fullback, Bob is the son of Robert and Barbara Donahue of 185 Jerusalem Road and a graduate of Deerfield Academy.

A senior split end, Bill is the son of Michael and Rose Duffy of 265 Fair Oaks Lane and a graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐There was a special celebration held at the Second Congregational Church recently in Millard MacNeill's honor. Millard earned a citation, presented by the Board of Deacons, for his talent and dedication in performing with the choir for 56 years! His tenor voice was first heard in the choir in 1926, and is still going strong. That's an accomplishment to "sing" about!

☐A couple of well-known and popular officers of the Cohasset Savings Bank are super busy these days on "extra-curricular" activities for the United Way. Vice President Bob Magner, after two years as the Cohasset Chairman (he was instrumental in increasing contributions to new highs), is now serving as Section 3 Community Chairman and is responsible for the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate, Norwell, Hull, Weymouth and Braintree. Assistant VP Marge Santacroce has taken over as Cohasset's town chairman and will be contacting all local businesses for their support.

Another note on Marge...she has been elected Secretary of the Norfolk County group of the Savings Bank Forum. This group comprises about 150 bank officers in the towns of Norfolk County, and carries on a busy schedule of educational meetings from September through May.

☐Marge and Norm Anderson, long-time residents of Brewster Road, had reasons to celebrate recently. They have been married for 36 years! Marge wonders "how Norm has put up with her for that long," and wants to wish him a very special "Happy Anniversary!"

☐You have heard the one about the contestant who entered on a whim and won? That is Sarah Delima's story! Sarah, who lives on Summer Street, ventured to the Cape to enter a Scrabble Tournament and returned to Cohasset as the Intermediate Champ for Cape Cod and Southeastern Mass.! Sarah competed in a series of seven games to win her "crown." Good work, champ!

☐Have lots of news on the Broderick family...Biff (Francis X.) has recently been promoted to the rank of Captain in the U.S. Merchant Marine, a real feat considering his age, etc. Biff was an athlete at C.H.S., played football at Kings Point and was a member of the crew and sailing teams. Biff also holds the rank of Lt. J.G. in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

☐Justine Hoffman loves the college life at B.C. Knowing Justine and her friendly ways, she already knows most of the students on the huge campus.

☐The Brodericks are quite a seafaring family as Dad, Bill, is a member of the Harbor Patrol of the Metropolitan Police.

☐Went to the Cohasset Drama Workshop's performance of "3x1" last weekend and must give it a "10" in my review. Although I'm not Kevin Kelley, nor is it my job to be, to see the characters played so well is unbelievable to me! It's hard to imagine even learning all the parts in such a short time...it's only been a month since school opened. Hats off to Kurt Hochkeppel, John Replogle, Tom Jones, Leah Hale, Jeanine Buckley, Gillian Ayer, Jacqui Fahey, Tammy Karcher, Chris Kuhn, Sarah Muir, Jennie Mitman and Nancy Walls; and Ron Emmons, their director. Can't wait for the next production, and hope everyone makes an effort to attend an extremely entertaining night!

☐Congratulations to Dianne Mullen, student at C.H.S., who is a National Merit Semifinalist.

☐Saturday night the VFW Auxiliary and the American Legion Auxiliary are sponsoring a benefit dance for Judy Stover and her family. It will be held at the VFW Post on Rte. 3A from 8 p.m. to midnight, tickets are $5 a couple. Included in the evening's plans are music by "Jimmo," refreshments and raffles. Tickets are available at either one of the Posts mentioned above.

☐Lucy Marsac and Tery Mulcahy ran in the Bonnie Bell race last weekend. Those two gals are really dedicated. They can be seen running their miles every morning before they get the kids set for school.

☐Be sure to attend this week's football game. The team works so hard all week long, a great crowd to cheer them on is a big help. There will be two shows for the price of one ticket, as the cheerleaders have been working overtime to bring all new routines and cheers. They're super.

'Whole brain' approach described for PSO

The Oct. 4 PSO program at the high school featured a look at a whole new and a "whole brain" approach to teaching basic skills.

Middle school students in Attleboro, according to Principal Evelyn Silva, assembled colorful cardboard slices of salami, bologna, cheese, pickles, lettuce, tomatoes, etc. . . then computed the cost of their "sandwiches."

In English class they create names for their sandwiches and write five adjectives describing them for a class "menu." In Art class the sandwiches become hanging mobiles.

Penny Dunning from the Whole Brain Corporation, Cambridge, demonstrated a model of whole brain creativity according to which people approach problem-solving with a variety of styles - rational, spatial, sequential, expressive.

Children may improve learning if educators use a variety of approaches to teach the same concept.

The audience, about 125 parents, teachers, administrators, and School Committee members, filled out a checklist to determine their own brain dominance, either right or left.

Dunning said that brain dominance of one side is natural but that competence in all areas can be acquired, or nurtured.

Evelyn Silva and Donald Brigham discussed ways in which, despite Proposition 2½, the Attleboro School Department has successfully incorporated the arts in the curriculum.

An interdisciplinary faculty committee meets frequently to coordinate the arts with other learning activities.

For example, art class begins with students finding the "main idea" in a painting. In physical education, students conform their bodies to sculptural shapes studied in art class.

Performing artists appear monthly, funded by grants but principally by the parent support group, and students are prepared for their visits. Sixth graders even noticed a song missing from a performance of the opera "Hansel and Gretel."

Creative leadership from the administration and strong support from the community are necessary if the arts are to survive budget restraints of the '80's.

This was the conclusion of the audience following the presentation.

Roger and Jill Crafts, PSO co-chairmen of the program, said that the entire presentation had been video-taped by Dr. John Packard and would be available for future replay.

Community Center courses listed

The Cohasset Community Center is offering a seminar, the ABC's of Investing conducted by Gary Hoffman of Waddell and Reed.

The focus will be the fundamentals of tax planning, investments and risk management for people in all walks of life, not just the sophisticated.

This seminar will be held Tuesday, Oct. 25 from 8 to 10 p.m. The cost is $3, and attendance must be pre-registered.

Continental Knitting

Laila Roukanakis teaches a two session workshop, Continental Knitting, Wednesday, Oct. 12 and Oct. 19 from 9 to 11 a.m. This is a rapid style of knitting using the yarn in the left hand. Students will learn to knit, pearl, increase, decrease and make ribbing in this knitting method.

The center is also seeking babysitters for the morning program hours. Many mothers have asked if babysitting was available. Please call if you would like to be used as a babysitter on a regular, recurring schedule

Call 383-0088, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. weekdays for pre-registration.

Development plans review

Joseph Carbone and his attorney Charles Humphreys asked the Planning Board to request development off Doane Street being constructed by a development company be sloped exactly according to original plans. Currently, with only rough contours in place, if left as is, Carbone and Humphreys predict drainage and water problems on the adjoining Carbone land.

tive Al Kuolas what the committee or council would do if they had problems with the system.

Kuolas said, "Any town has the option to go to the next level of authority. Every year maybe only one town actually does."

Kuolas paralleled Scituate as an example. He said that the cable project is running smoothly in Scituate.

In addition Kuolas said, "The building is set up, the equipment is delivered and the electrical work will start next year. Prior to the end of this year, we will have signals."

More litigation costs

Here is a question to ponder as you, the taxpayer, await your tax bill.

How much money do you want spent on litigation costs?

Granted, town meeting voters, by virtue of overwhelming approval authorized the Sewer Commission to fight the state in court.

But we and other residents who told selectmen last week, agree why is the Planning Board fighting the Appeals Board in court and why does the taxpayer have to "foot the bill."

The past few weeks has illustrated an example of what still is wrong with Cohasset town government. The problem and answer is communication. One board does not know what the other one is doing.

We call attention to the variance granted by the appeals board to Yankee Oil.

Why was the decision filed late, beyond the 75-day limit?

Where was the appeals board to tell the residents the reason for the delay before the 75-day limit expired?

Why did the Planning Board wait until the decision was filed before deciding that better land use management was needed? Where was the board when the Cox Estate was for sale?

In addition, why wasn't a joint meeting of the planning and appeals board called during the 75-day deliberation to iron out any differences?

Why did Planning Board Chairman John O'Toole tell former Planning Board Chairman Barbara Power and now appeals board member she should have attended the planning board meetings to find out what concerns the planning board has concerning the variance. Who can wake up at 7 a.m. to attend a meeting and then find out it is in executive session?

Atty. Chris Sullivan, representing Yankee Oil is correct. The Planning Board cannot demand any requirements of Yankee Oil but hope to negotiate with them. This is a variance decision and not a subdivision.

Yankee Oil, if President Paul Montle wanted to, could use his constructive variance and walk in the former Cox Estate without any limitations.

Or he could sell the property to someone else such as a religious or educational institution.

Instead, Yankee Oil for the time being, wishes to work out any problems with the town provided no litigation is brought against the company or other town boards.

Finally, what about the concerns of the abutters of the Cox Estate? Has the planning board listened to them?

A word of warning to selectmen: As town fathers, take the lead and end this bickering. The money spent on this litigation could be better spent. Ask any taxpayer.

Sometimes the breaks are special

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon and I looked at Skipper as he lay motionless on a hospital stretcher, pain etched on his unnaturally pale face.

"He looks so fragile," the Dragon whispered. "So vulnerable."

I nodded.

Since the phone call from Mr. Watts, Skipper's coach, telling us that our youngest child had injured his shoulder during football practice; throughout the rapid, siren-ridden ambulance ride (bless those wonderful EMTs) to South Shore Hospital; during the interminable wait to learn that his shoulder was both dislocated and fractured, our two great concerns had been the physical and psychological effects of the trauma on our boy.

"Who knows what the long-term results will be," I whispered back.

Within 24 hours we had a few clues.

The entire staff of Scituate High School, from Dr. Eleanor Gowen to the man who washes the windows, had expressed concern and sympathy. John O'Brien, one of Skip's coaches, had called to offer to take him for rides, sub sandwiches, or anything else that might speed his recovery.

The invalid himself was ensconced on a sofa with TV, books, food, Pepsi, and his dog all at hand. His sister was waiting on him with a new found servitude to which he was rapidly becoming accustomed.

He smiled bravely through his pain.

"I think I might get better quicker," he volunteered, "if I got presents. And some pastries from Ebeneezers would help."

Another sister arrived with one of his favorite treats — beef terriyaki — and despite his frail condition he managed to choke down 12 in 10 minutes.

"I guess my appetite isn't what it used to be," he murmured, refusing a 13th.

Within 48 hours we had a few more clues.

His English class had sent him a get-well card.

"This makes my day," he smiled, placing it in a prominent spot.

People were dropping by to sign his cast. Some of them were the most gorgeous girls I have ever seen in my life.

Skip gestured weakly. "It's hard to fight them off," he explained, "with a broken shoulder."

I drove him to school to pick up his books and assignments. Everywhere he went, students and teachers cheered.

Magnanimously, he told them of the torn clothes, the sound of breaking bones, the blood. His audience listened, spellbound.

When we returned home, the Dragon informed him 15 classmates had called to ask if they could keep him company. Eleven of them were girls.

"If they call again," Skipper directed, "tell them to stop by. It's the least I can do."

The Dragon looked at me.

"Do you think it would hurt very much for me to break something?" he asked.

"Forget it," I told him firmly. "It's my turn."

Cohasset girls are all smiles during a recent field hockey game against Scituate.

Hazardous material survey listed

This is the first part of the survey package which has been sent to each town department in Cohasset.

The package was developed, compiled and distributed by the Hazardous Material Advisory Committee, a group of citizens interested in the proper management of hazardous material.

The survey's purpose is to evaluate the present situation, with regards to hazardous material, in town and to recommend improvements to the Board of Health.

The second part of the survey will be published next week.

The Cohasset Board of Health requests your cooperation in conducting a survey of hazardous materials being used, stored, generated, or disposed of in Cohasset.

As discussed more fully on the enclosed Hazardous Material Fact Sheet, hazardous materials include a wide variety of substances which could be harmful to the general public if they are introduced into the air or water supply through spills, fires, improper disposal, or other means.

The Board of Health considers the identification of potential hazards a necessary adjunct to its charter to protect the general health and environment of the community. In addition, this information will be useful to emergency personnel responding to any incidents at your facility.

As first step in this process, the Board of Health wishes to inventory any hazardous materials over which the town itself may have control. The Hazardous Materials Advisory Committee, a group of citizens appointed by the Board of Health, has volunteered to assist the Board in the collection and evaluation of information from each town department.

In order to accomplish the survey in a timely manner, it is requested that you complete and return to the Board of Health, the attached Hazardous Material Survey by Oct. 11. Should you have any questions regarding the information being sought, or, would you like help in completing the survey form, please call the Board of Health at 383-1664.

Sincerely,
Marilyn Gill Sweeney, chairwoman, Board of Health,
Mary Jane E. McArthur, chairwoman,
Board of Selectmen
Jeffrie Bettinger, chairman, Hazardous Material

Murray's memos

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Even though the leaves are just beginning to turn, it is time for legislators to put on their thinking caps and write legislation for the 1984 session. The deadline for filing bills for next year is December 7th.

Each year, in addition to legislation filed by individual legislators, the Republican House Members file a package of approximately 50 bills covering all aspects of life from education to the elderly, taxes to housing, consumer issues to business incentives. This year, one of the better known bills originally filed in the GOP Package is the Lemon Law. I am a co-sponsor of this act which was signed by the governor Monday, Oct. 3.

Massachusetts is unique in that our Constitution guarantees that any citizen may file legislation under the "right of free petition." In recent years as many as 9,000 bills have been filed. Of these about 10 percent actually became law.

SILVER HAIRED LEGISLATURE

A special "mock legislative session" in which senior citizens from throughout the Commonealth participate has been held for the past several years and will convene on Beacon Hill in November. In addition to giving the seniors an inside look at the legislative process, bills passed in the mock sessions are filed for consideration by the real Legislature.

YOUR IDEAS

If you've ever found yourself thinking, "There ought to be a law . . . " now is the time to contact us. I welcome ideas for legislation and look forward to working with you.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts to hold two-month open enrollment for Medex Program. The two-month "full open enrollment" period for Medex plans will be held from Dec. 1, 1983 through Jan. 31, 1984.

For the eighth consecutive year, the enrollment will allow late sign up for persons who did not apply for Medex supplementary health plan when they became eligible for Medicare.

In addition, in early 1984 present Medex subscribers will be able to change their current Medex coverage to any of the three Medex plans. Specific time frames for this opportunity will be announced at a future date.

Newspaper advertisements will be placed statewide and will explain how eligible individuals may apply for the Medex Plans.

More than 50,000 elderly and disabled people in Massachusetts have joined Medex during the previous seven open enrollments. The three Medex plans currently offered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield as health coverages supplementing the federal Medicare health insurance program are Medex Standard, Medex 2 and Medex 3, the most comprehensive plan.

All three Medex programs will be made available in this open enrollment period. Medex, which covers more than 450,000 people, was established by Blue Cross and Blue Shield in 1966 as a "gap filler" to Medicare. Medex pays hospital and medical costs and many medical services not covered by Medicare.

My office will be available for further details. If you have any questions, call me at 722-2400.

ORGAN DONORS FUND

Legislation has been filed to establish an organ donors fund which would be administered by an Advisory Council on organ donations and funded by an income tax check.

The bill was filed by Rep. Joseph N. Hermann (D—Andover) and myself.

There have been too many people who have not been able to have organ transplants because there was no money available for the operation. This bill will assist those recipients of life saving organs who can at least afford them.

Revenues received from public and private sources such as, gifts, grants, donations, federal government reimbursements, and grants-in aid would be of great assistance to the program established under this legislation.

McKinnon's stance on insurance

State Sen. Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth,) Chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Insurance, testified before the State Insurance Commissioner at a recent automobile rate hearing.

The following is a text of his statement:

Good morning, Mr. Commissioner. For the record, my name is Allan R. McKinnon. I represent the Norfolk & Plymouth Senatorial District and serve as Chairman of the Legislature's Committee on Insurance.

I am before you this morning to offer my thoughts on the 1984 automobile insurance rate proposals you are considering. The industry has submitted a request for an 11.3 percent increase. This is substantially lower than their requests of the past several years, and therefore, somewhat encouraging. It is still too high, however, when you consider the various factors which will warrant only a minimal, if any, rate increase for 1984. Most of these factors are associated with recent statutory changes brought about by the passage of Chapter 241, the so-called auto insurance reform bill.

The State Rating Bureau's recommendation for a 9.6 percent increase is surprising. While it is true that rate-making is not a carry-over process from year to year, it is odd that the very Bureau which contended only a year ago that rates should go up by 15 percent, is now recommending an increase which, if added to the 3 percent rate hike actually awarded this year, would give the industry, over a two-year period, less than the Bureau had recommended for a single year. The Attorney General, on the other hand, has recommended a 1 percent decrease in rates for 1984 and I urge you to carefully consider his reasoning as opposed to that of the industry, especially with regard to the Attorney General's discussion of appropriate investment tax rates. The Attorney General has, I believe, recommended a formula which is consistent with the Supreme Judicial Court's opinion on the 1983 rate decision, a decision which was nearly completely upheld.

All of the filings before you acknowledge the upward pressures on bodily injury rates. With the hospital cost containment law in effect now for two years, its impact on rising health care costs should be mitigating and quantifiable. We should not ignore this important measure. In addition, I can only repeat my call for an increase in the statutory tort threshold. If a threshold of $500 was appropriate when set in 1970, certainly a much higher threshold is in order today. The threshold is the very foundation of our no-fault bodily injury system and its continued erosion can only serve to make that system meaningless.

The statutory changes in Chapter 241, including increased deductibles, anti-fraud measures, mandatory offer limitations and provisions to close the gap on the unlisted operator problem should have a significant effect on reducing the number and frequency of claims and, therefore, costs to the system. I also look forward to positive results from the establishment of the Safe Driver Insurance Plan. It will maintain the practice of encouraging better driving through monetary incentives and penalties for individual driving behavior. And since the penalties under the plan will be assessed as a part of premium, the collection rate will improve to the benefit of careful drivers.

A rate of inflation which has slowed to less than 5 percent this year, coupled with the reforms required under Chapter 241 and the effects of the hospital cost containment law, should curb upward pressures on both bodily injury and property damage costs and keep any increase for 1984 to a bare minimum.

Compulsive Gambling group established

Secretary of State Michael James Connolly and state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray recently met with officers and members of the newly incorporated "Massachusetts Council on Compulsive Gambling, Inc."

The Council was presented its state charter as a non-profit health agency.

The Council was formed to raise the awareness level of the public and business communities to the compulsive gambler and compulsive gambling. Compulsive gambling has been classified as a progressive mental disorder by the American Psychiatric Association and can be treated and arrested.

Thomas N. Cummings, President of the newly formed organization says the Massachusetts Council on Compulsive Gambling, Inc., will conduct a program of information and education. Cummings said the council will conduct seminars and workshops; maintain a speakers bureau; will develop resources, materials and literature relating to this problem. A major component of their program will be the establishment of an information center and central office for referrals.

Murray, a member of the Board of Directors says, "Frequently, the compulsive gambler who has exhausted all credit sources and the savings of family members, will resort to crime.

"As more states seek legalized off track betting, dog racing and casino gambling, etc., there is a great need to educate our citizenry to an awareness of the increase of compulsive gambling as a direct result of public policy.

"The compulsive gambler is one more reason I have fought so hard to keep new forms of gambling out of our state such as casino gambling," she said.

Persons wishing to join the Council, or be involved in this program; wishing to utilize its programs and services should write to The Massachusetts Council on Compulsive Gambling, Inc., 824 Granite St., Braintree.

HAZARDOUS MATERIALS

Are you a registered hazardous waste generator?
————Yes ————No.
If yes, give EPA/DEQE identification number.

Do you purchase, or generate, any hazardous materials (i.e., materials which are flammable, corrosive, chemically reactive, or poisonous)? See the enclosed Hazardous Materials Fact Sheet for common examples.
————Yes ————No.

If yes, please provide the requested information for each hazardous material handled by your organization on one of the enclosed Hazardous Material Information Forms. Additional forms are available from the Board of Health.

NOTE: Some materials that are purchased may not be deemed hazardous, but can become a hazardous material through their use in a process. For example, diatomaceous earth is not hazardous, but when used as a filtering media, it can come in contact with a hazardous chemical and become itself a hazardous material.

Do you generate, or receive, any waste oil?
————Yes ————No
————Unknown

UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANKS

Are there any underground storage tanks on the premises or any other properties in the Cohasset area associated with your department?
————Yes ————No
————Unknown

If yes, please describe the location of the tanks. A drawing would be most helpful.

Does your department currently use the tanks?
————Yes ————No

What is/was stored in the tanks?

How old are the tanks?

If the tank is no longer in use, when did you stop using the tank?

Was the tank pumped out when you stopped using it?

Organization you would call.

Would you like more information on the use and disposal of hazardous materials?
————Yes ————No.

Would you be interested in a local seminar on the proper handling and disposal of hazardous materials, including information on notification and response requirements, and corporate-personal liability?
————Yes ————No.

Correction

For some unknown reason, a typographical error was made in the story last week concerning an address by Inspector General Joseph Barresi. The story said Barresi's 30-member staff includes FBI, IRS and Assistant District Attorneys as well as an engineer and architect. The words, special needs students, were mistakenly inserted between Assistant and District Attorneys.

Startzell explains his approach to soccer center

By Judy Gilman

What happens to the professional athlete once the doctor gives the thumbs-down on any more active play? Is there a life after sports? How does one continue a very active role in a sport after playing days are over?

After asking all these questions, one might expect the subject of the interview to at least be on crutches or carrying a cane. On the contrary, Stan Startzell bounds out of his chair, exends a muscular arm, and then runs up the stairs to show off the view from the second floor observation deck of his club, the South Shore Sports Center on Recreation Park Road.

Soccer is Startzell's game, which he's been playing almost as long as he can remember. His father was a high school coach in central Pennsylvania, later in Philadelphia. At the University of Pennsylvania, where he attended the Wharton School, Startzell was an All-American for three years. ("I'm also the only person who was All-Ivy in two sports the same season," he says with a reminiscent chuckle. "Soccer, and I was a kicker on the football team. I'd play soccer in the morning, eat a quart of ice cream, then kick in the afternoon.")

His graduation from Penn was the dawn of the North American Soccer League and he was drafted by the New York Cosmos (but did not play with the legendary Brazilian star Pele on the '73-'74 team. "I left so there would be room for him," he jokes.) The Cosmos won the 1972 championship, but Startzell asked to be traded home to Philadelphia. He was and Philly took the '73 title for the league.

One can become accustomed rather quickly to such success and Startzell was no exception. The '74 season was "only .500" and he asked to be traded again, this time to the Boston Tea Men. Then came a knee injury and soccer became a question mark. He and Debbie Zetterberg were married ("I wore a cast for my wedding") and, shortly after, decided to take a break and get away from it all — around the world. Ten months later they were back. Debbie was hired in a Virginia school system and Stan met Eunice Kennedy.

That meeting led to five years in Washington as the head of the Special Olympics soccer program, a rugged schedule of administrative duties in the national office during the week and travel around the country three weekends out of four to train coaches and staff, to demonstrate, to work with kids.

Kids became a key to what Startzell does today in Hingham as the director of the sports center, the former Old Colony Tennis Club. The second key was the formation, in 1976, of the Major Indoor Soccer Legue, a professional league playing a game on a smaller field that's faster, more furious, and demands more finely-tuned skills than traditional outdoor soccer.

That's rather jumping ahead in the story. The Startzells returned to the New England area, eventually buying a home in Duxbury, where Debbie is an assistant principal. Stan was busy preaching the gospel of soccer, working in varying capacities with the Tea Men, with the Special Olympics — and then the opportunity of having an indoor soccer field came along in the form of the former tennis club, whose owners decided to close the doors in the spring of 1982.

Startzell has found tremendous enthusiasm for this new, smaller sort of soccer. This past winter, 74 teams competed in league play at the sports center from 5 to 10 p.m. on weeknights and 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. on weekends.

What is this new sort of soccer that doesn't include a field that's 100 yards long? The whole scope of play is much smaller, much more precise. There are seven players on the field at a time (versus 10 in outdoor soccer) playing both offense and defense. Defenders can score indoors. Substitutions are on the fly and there are two 25-minute halves."

Startzell argues that the smaller playing space hones playing skills and quickly. The 7 x 12 foot goal is a bigger challenge to score into than the outside soccer's 8 x 24 target, and players learn to turn on the proverbial dime in order to keep within the area of play.

And, of course, being under cover means soccer becomes a 12-month sport rather than one that ends with a shiver in late November. And if you want soccer, you have only to ask at the club.

There are programs for every age, skill level and interest conceivable. There is a mini-soccer program for four and five year-olds because even at that young age "they can really run and kick the ball." There is Soccer 2000 for players 10 and under whose hour-long session includes 20 minutes of instruction and 40 minutes of play to keep the ball rolling, so to speak. There will be 200 teams competing in league play this fall. Tuesday nights is ladies' night, and Thursday night is open night, soccer for everyone and anyone.

But there's more soccer. The center can make arrangements for practice times, special clinics, soccer clinics, soccer parties, coaching and referee courses. A soccer film library is available for study to participating clubs.

And if all this hasn't convinced you that soccer is THE sport, the South Shore Sports Center also offers tennis with pro Mary Jane Welch, aerobics, a soon-to-be-installed jogging track, and YMCA-sponsored programs.

"We want there to be something for everyone in the family," Startzell says firmly. "The kids can come for soccer coaching and Mom can take a tennis lesson or aerobics. We'll keep them all moving."

As for Startzell himself, this has proved the best way to stay close to soccer in a non-playing capacity. The business training at Wharton comes in handy now. ("Nobody plays soccer forever") and, with his connections in the active playing end of soccer, Startzell has hosted a collection of "name" soccer players at seminars and workshops to appeal to soccer players of all ages. As a former pro himself, he knows the value of staying in shape and the center offers executive memberships to businesses in the area for their personnel to have a convenient place to work out in. No more excuses about bad weather!

Recreation Department report

CHS sports report

Boys soccer

The boys soccer team broke a 2-2-2 record and boosted their record to 4-2-3.

They first had to beat East Bridgewater, a tough challenger. After East Bridgewater scored in the second quarter, Cohasset's David Rice tied the game in the third quarter.

David McDonald brought Cohasset ahead 2-1, with an assist by Mike DeSantis.

Mike DeSantis scored an insurance goal in the fourth period. That goal gave Cohasset the game as the opposition scored with one minute left. Cohasset prevailed 3-2.

Cohasset also beat Whitman Hanson 3-1. David Rice assisted by Kevin Leary and Bobby Schultz Assisted by Lee Reid scored in the first period.

David McDonald wrapped up the game with a final goal tha t clinched Cohasset's victory 3-1.

Cohasset also tied Rockland 3-3.

Girls soccer

Center half-back Amy Duncombe has led the girls soccer team in goals during the last two wins, a tie and a loss during the past two weeks.

Recently Cohasset beat Scituate 3-2. Janet DiGirolamo scored first for Cohasset with an assist by Amy Duncombe.

Duncombe then took charge of the game and scored two goals.

Cohasset beat Whitman-Hanson 2-0. Coach Kennan Startzell said, "It was not a close game. We outshot them 17-9."

Duncombe scored both goals and Cohasset's Tara Stanford spearheaded the defense.

Cohasset tied Abington 2-2. Abington took the lead but "as we have often done we relinquished the lead." said Startzell.

Sara Seavey broke through and scored Cohasset's first goal. "She has been as impressive as Amy. She has been penetrating all the offensive pressure. She has run faster than every full back that she came up against."

Football

Abington stepped on Cohasset's toes when they beat them 28-6 last week.

Head coach John Leone said, "They took the wind out of our sails when we kicked off to them and one of their players went 60 yards. We just never came back."

Quarterback David Barcomb scored in the first half of the game. Cohasset's scoreboard was frozen at six points for the rest of the game.

Leone said, "We had trouble defensively. We hope to do away with errors and play more aggressively next week."

Next week Cohasset plays Hanover. "They're in the same boat as far as their season goes. The team to win will be the one who corrects their mistakes," he said.

Field hockey

The girls field hockey team could either have five wins or five losses but it's tough to determine five ties.

Cohasset tied Middleboro 1-1, East Bridgewater 1-1, Hull 0-0 and Holbrook, last week, 0-0.

Their overall record is 1-2-5.

Coach Gino DiGirolomo said, "Our defense is excellent. Fullbacks Julie Atkins, Jennie Mitman and Debbie Sultez are playing exceptionally well."

In the last six games only two goals have been scored against goalie Lisa Schumaker.

Cohasset will play Norwell next. "We should be able to stand up to and possibly beat Norwell," said DiGirolomo.

Plymouth County is just about as far north as cranberries can safely be grown and bog owners keep a close watch on them these days, fearful of losing their crop to a frost. Only four other states grow cranberries, together producing only half as much as Massachusetts and they are New Jersey, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin. So, what could be more appropriate right about now, than this dessert featured at the Scituate Garden Club's Cranberry Festival and called:

Steamed Cranberry Festival Pudding

1½ c. sifted flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 c. molasses
1/3 c. boiling water
2 c. cranberries, chopped

Sift together dry ingredients in mixing bowl. Stir in molasses, gradually adding hot water, until well blended. Stir in cranberries and put mixture in well-buttered mold (1-1½ qt.) Cover with aluminum foil and tie it on tightly with string. Place on rack in deep kettle with boiling water halfway up the mold. Steam for two hours, replenishing boiling water as needed. Serve warm with warm

Butter Sauce

1/2 c. butter
1 c. sugar
1/2 c. cream

Melt butter over low heat, stir in sugar and then the cream. Cook, stirring until sugar is dissolved and sauce is hot. Serves six to eight.

Somebody, somewhere has made yet another survey and announced to the world that Americans are drinking more wine and less hard liquor. More and more good cooks are finding that wine adds decided zest to cooking, for as the alcohol evaporates, the delicious flavor remains and mellows. Recipes usually specify a type of wine — dry, sherry, sauterne, port -to be used in making soups, meat, chicken and fish dishes. Adding any hearty red table wine as part of the cooking liquid for venison, helps mellow the flavor when used as a marinade and slightly tenderizes the meat. Here is how it is used in

Veal Scaloppine Marsala

1 pound veal cutlets, each cut 1/4" thick
Salt and pepper
1/4 c. all-purpose flour
Butter or margarine
1/2 c. dry Marsala
Chopped parsley for garnish

Cut cutlets into pieces about 3x3". Sprinkle with salt and pepper. On waxed paper, coat veal lightly with flour. In 10" skillet over medium-high heat, in 3 T hot butter or margarine, cook meat, a few pieces at a time, until lightly browned on both sides, adding more butter or margarine as needed and removing meat to warm platter as it browns. Into drippings in skillet, stir Marsala and 1/4 tsp. salt; cook 1 min., stirring to loosen browned bits; pour over veal. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves 4.

Suddenly it would seem we have here all the makings of a little dinner party by adding to the menu some noodles, salad and garlic bread. So, call up some friends, polish up the silver, get out the candlesticks and buy a jug of white wine to serve before dinner with this hors d'ouvres, another recipe Claire O'Hara, publicity chairman of the Scituate Garden Club, was good enough to share.

Herbed Sticks

2 sticks butter, melted
1 loaf unsliced bread, crust removed
Cut into 7 slices, 1" each
Slice each piece into thirds
1 wedge Stella parmesan cheese, approx. 5 oz., grated fine
1/4 tsp. cayenne
1 tsp. basil
Dash garlic powder

Mix cheese, etc. Dip bread stick in butter, roll in cheese mix. Place in jelly roll pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 min. Can be frozen.

☐Ignorance ruins conversation.

☐I don't know who said it, but it's at least partially true: The advantage of a classical education is that it enables you to despise the wealth which it prevents you from getting.

☐A man who hits his thumb with a hammer really understands what freedom of speech means.

☐It's good exercise: Instead of jumping at conclusions, dig for facts.

☐It is sometimes easier to fall in love than to climb out.

☐Of course you know what a politician is — a person who promises you a bridge even where there is no river.

☐Laughter, which has been called an emotional catharsis, has also been called a tranquilizer with no side effects. Thackery added a comment: "A good laugh is sunshine in the house."

☐You can believe in liberalism without believing in liberals.

☐Wrought was once the past participle of what common verb? The answer is work.

☐A compromise is the art of cutting the pie in such a way that each thinks he is getting the biggest piece.

☐Can anyone be more boring than an honest fisherman?

Cohasset Newcomers to meet

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club will sponsor a general meeting Oct. 17 at the Scituate Library at 9:30 a.m. Jean Gaffney from ColoRight Ltd. will present a program demonstrating the dramatic difference wearing the right colors in clothing and make-up. New residents are welcome.

For more information, call Lynn Leighton, 383-6175, or Bunny Wagner, 545-6422. Babysitting will be available at Kids Count II, 91 First Parish Road, Scituate.

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club will welcome prospective new members at a coffee to be held at Bunny Wagner's home, 5 Clapp Rd., Scituate at 10 a.m., Oct. 26. For more information, call Lynn Leighton, 383-6175 or Bunny Wagner, 545-6422.

LWV United Nations Dinner

The Cohasset League of Women Voters will hold its annual United Nations Dinner on Saturday evening, Oct. 29, at the Unitarian First Parish House.

Featured speaker on National Security will be former Cohasset resident, Dr. Saul Mendlovitz, who is currently Vice President of the World Policy Institute in New York City.

Dr. Mendlovitz is also the Ira D. Wallach Professor of World Order Studies at Columbia University, co-editor of "Alternative: A Journal of World Policy," a member of the Board of Directors of the Arms Control Association, and has edited numerous books and publications, including "On the Creation of a Just World Order."

The evening promises to be informative. Dinner will be catered by Mandarin Gardens, and the cost is $12.50. Tickets are limited. For reservations, call Mrs. Carol Martin at 383-6577 or Mrs. Sherry Becker, 383-1971.

Morgan Memorial donations

Dishes, glassware and bric-a-brac are desperately needed by Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries.

Cohasset and Scituate residents are urged to bring these and other household goods and clothing to the attended donation trailer at the Hanover Mall, Rtes. 53 and 3.

The trailer is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Country Crafters show

There are many craft shows around these days, but among them The Country Crafters remain unique. They are juried shows in which each craft must not only be approved for workmanship, but must also be different from all others in the group.

This insures a show with many varied, quality crafts ranging from the very traditional such as quilting and stencilling to the new personalized knitting by machine and E.T. or PacMan chocolate lollipops.

Among our newest crafters are Ann Nichols of Pembroke and Rosemary Johnson of Brockton. Ann makes "Pudgy People" which are soft sculptured dolls. They are created to appeal to a wide range of ages from babies to adults.

Rosemary's Christmas tree ornaments are nicely done.

Two other new members are Elizabeth Farley of Norwell and Ann Cardoza of Scituate. Elizabeth hand paints invitations of all kinds. If you are planning a wedding, christening, etc., she will embellish your printed invitations for sending out. She also will decorate, mat and frame one special invitation for your gift giving. These keepsakes make a lovely personal gift.

Ann Cardoza makes three dimensional art. By cutting and layering several pictures she creates amazing works of art.

The next Country Crafters show will be held on Saturday, Oct. 22 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 23 from noon to 4 p.m. at the Scituate High School, by the Police Station on Rte. 3A in Scituate. Admission is free.

Cub Scout Halloween party

Cub Scouts will meet Oct. 26 at 7 p.m. in the Deer Hill School cafeteria. All members of a Cub Scout family are invited to attend the Halloween party planned that evening. Costumes are worn by all children.

Any boy registered but not assigned to a den will be called during October.

Scout uniforms are needed. Any former Cub Scout or Boy Scout who no longer needs any part of his uniform, (scarf, hat, slide, shirt, belt and slacks) please donate it to Pack 38 and Troop 28 by calling Jane Long, 383-1281.

Choral Arts Society

The Choral Art Society began its 26th season with over 60 members returning for the first rehearsal Sept. 12 at the Scituate Public Library.

James McLeod-Warrick, the Society's new Chairman of the Board of Directors, introduced William C. Sano, returning as Music Director for his fifth year, and Jill Crafts, Cohasset, the accompanist.

Sano announnced the program for the Christmas concert which will be held Saturday evening, Dec. 3, at St. Luke's Church in Scituate, which will include music by Purcell, Buxtehude, Berlioz, Mendelssohn, and will feature Saint-Saens' "Christmas Oratorio."

This program is suported, in part, by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council.

The Choral Art Society is beginning its annual fund drive. Patricia Goin of Duxbury will direct fund raising from patrons and sponsors, and Henry Dunbar of Brant Rock is in charge of program advertising.

Other officers and members of the board of directors are Peter Keim, Cohasset; Gail Webster, Barbara Handy, Carol Miles, and Judith Whittemore, Scituate; Paula Clough and Kurt Schneider, Marshfield; and Alice Humez, Brant Rock. "Non-singing" members are Pamela Wolfe, Norwell; Dorothy Bales, Weston; and Susan Bennett Bitzas, Leicester, formerly of Green Harbor.

The Choral Art Society attracts members and supporters from the entire South Shore region, and its performances have received many favorable reviews from Folio, the South Shore's monthly arts publication.

Membership for the Christmas concert closed Oct. 3, but new singers will be welcome to join in January for the projected May 12 performance of Honegger's dramatic oratorio, "King David."

While experience in choral singing is helpful, it is not a requirement, and whenever possible soloists are chosen from the chorus.

For further information about the Society call Peter Keim, 383-1026; James McLeod-Warrick, 545-3538; Henry Dunbar, 834-6231; Alice Humez, 834-8962; or Mr. Sano in Swampscott, 158-6937.

Antique appraisal day

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an Antiques Appraisal Day Saturday, Nov. 12 at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St.

A team of expert appraisers from the famous Robert W. Skinner, Inc., auction and appraisal firm of Bolton and Boston will be present to appraise antique items brought to them, ranging from furniture, paintings and prints to pottery, glassware, jewelry, textiles, toys, books and other objects of art.

Plan now to bring antiques and collectables to the Historical Society's Appraisal Day this fall. The hours and appraisal fees will be announced soon.

A travel agent is often able to tailor a low-cost air fare to yourpersonal needs and tastes. We may be able to set up a "triangle" fare at no extra cost, or may be able to arrange a tour that combines special low air fare with hotels and/or rental cars. There is also the possibility of booking a night-coach fare, an off-peak fare, Saturday-travel fares, standby fares and children or senior citizen fares. The more your travel agent knows about your preferences, plans and habits, the more we will be able to do for you. It really makes sense to establish a rapport with a travel agent.

Experienced travelers will tell you to make reservations as far in advance as possible. In this way, you are assured of having your choice of flight time and hotel accommodations. around town

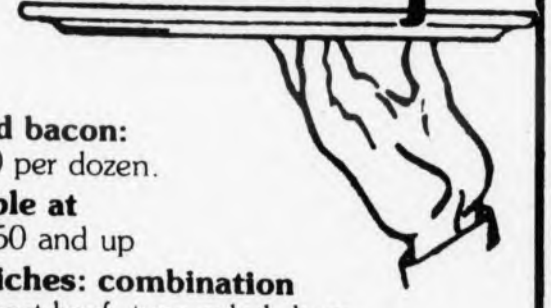
☐Izzie and Barron Salvador held a surprise party for Polly Litchfield last weekend, and what a surprise she received! A trip to a nice warm climate, to be taken with a few of her friends. A great way to get a well-deserved rest after her son's wedding!

☐Maureen Buckley and Tara Pompeo will be home next weekend...it will be good to see them.



☐Two Cohasset residents have begun work on Associate in Science degrees in health care, at Laboure Junior College in Boston. They are Lisa Anne Cogill of 71 Doane Street, and Nancy A. Cone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Cone of 71 South Main Street.

Cogill is a 1974 graduate of Cohasset High School and received training as an Emergency Medical Technician at Quincy City Hospital. She is enrolled in Laboure's program in nursing (R.N.)

Cone graduated from Cohasset High in 1981 and is enrolled in the EEG technology program at Laboure.

☐Two young, approaching-middle-age women with out-of-shape and painful lower backs are looking for others in the same condition to form a class for the Quincy Y's "Healthy Back Program." This exercise regime is designed specifically for lower back sufferes and a class will be offered twice a week, mornings, at the Quincy YMCA. If you're in pain, and want to join, call 383-0572 or 383-0486.

Membership drive started by South Shore Arts Center

Classes, special events, gallery openings, trips to faraway places, meeting artists and people from all over the South Shore, children's activities, workshops are the benefits of a membership in the South Shore Art Center.

As the fall membership drive gets underway, the center, 103 Ripley Road, is also about to launch its most exciting and diversified season of classes in painting, drawing, photography, etc.; workshops in video production, interior design and painting; trips to the Berkshires, New York City, Bermuda and Mexico; gallery openings; and special holiday events.

The annual membership drive gives the center the opportunity to reach a broad spectrum of the South Shore populace and to introduce itself as a diversified center of creative activity and a resource for artistic expression.

The center's more than 30 classes cross all lines of artistic and non-artistic abilities for all ages from children up through senior citizens. Some courses may be taken for credit through the Mass College of Art. In addition, the center offers its own Certificate Program in drawing and painting for students who desire more structured study.

Membership in the center, which is about to enter its 29th year of existence, is open to all in a variety of categories. Categories include $350 for benefactor; $100, sponsor; $50, patron; $20, family; $15, single; $18, accepted gallery artist; and $5, full time students or senior citizens.

Members receive special discounts on classes, events and supplies. They also receive pre-enrollment privileges, mailings and preview invitations in addition to being able to exhibit at twice-yearly members' shows.

The center now boasts a membership of over 800 participants of whom 200 have volunteered their time to help run center activities during the year. Over 100 professional artists are also included among the members.

New members are invited to join current members at the Center's annual meeting and "pot luck" supper to be held Friday, Oct. 14 following the opening of the annual Blue Ribbon Show from 6 to 8 p.m.
The studios of the center are decorated in a cafe style and the meeting allows members to meet one another, view the members' art in the Blue Ribbon Show and participate in the annual business to be conducted that night.

Membership in the South Shore Art Center may also bring matching donations from the following businesses if the member is in their employ. Either 1:1 or 2:1 match for the membership amount will be made by: Abcor, Inc.; Bird & Son Inc. Bride Machine Co.; Boston Edison Co.; The Boston Co. Inc.; the Boston Globe; the Boston Herald; Boston Safe Deposit and Trust; Charrette Corp.; Deloitte, Haskins and Sells; Digital Equipment Corp.; Fiduciary Trust Co.; Wm. Filene's Sons; Index Systems Inc.; Ingalls Associates; Instrom Corp.; Leventhal & Horwarth; Mutual Bank for Savings; Newworld Bank for Savings; Polaroid Corp.; Shawmut Banks, Stone Reprographics and Wm. Underwood Co.

For further information about membership in the South Shore Art Center, call 383-9548.

ARTWORK SLIDE WORKSHOP

The Center is offering a unique opportunity for artists to learn how to take quality slides of their artwork.

Photographer Paul Fortin will cover all the do's and don'ts of photographing artwork for presentation Thursday, Oct. 27, 7:30 p.m. at the center, 103 Ripley Rd.

He will include in his discussion lighting, film and exposures. Advanced registration is required.

Quality slides are important to artists for the slides may be the initial exposure someone has to a particular artist's work. The selection process used by galleries or museums in taking in work often begins with the viewing of slides.

Participants in this two-hour workshop are asked to bring examples of their slides as a basis for discussion.

A small fee will be charged for this workshop. For further information, please call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

DARKROOM

Photography enthusiasts who have basic darkroom skills may make use of the South Shore Art Center's darkroom to work on individual projects.

The darkroom, in the center's building is available for a small fee for two-hour sessions when the center is open. Only black and white film may be developed and the fee includes the chemicals.

Those wishing to use the darkroom can sign up in the Center's office, open noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

For anyone who does not have a basic background in developing, John Goldie's Beginning Darkroom offers an excellent opportunity to learn darkroom procedure and how to develop and print pictures. The course emphasizes darkroom and explores the aesthetics of photography in an intensive time frame.

The first meeting of this class is Thrusday, Oct. 6, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. but this is basically a scheduling meeting to determine how class time will be divided. Students may enroll in the class after Oct. 6.

For more complete information concerning the darkroom and this course, call the center, 383-9548.

Coastline Council to meet

The Coastline Council for Children, citizen arm of the Office for Children serving the towns of Cohasset and Scituate will meet Thursday, Oct. 20, at 7:30 p.m. at 49 Hayward Street, East Braintree.

Gloria Clark, Director of the Office for Children will be present to speak on the priorities of the agency. In addition a nomination slate of Board of Directors and Officers will be presented for a vote.

Consumer nominees for 1983-85 term are Tonia Coletti, Roberta Dunfield, June Freedman, Bonnie Gorman, William Greene, Jr., Eileen O'Brien, Donna O'Sullivan, Cindy Phillips, Lisa Poth, Charlene Sousa, Virginia Tobin and Gail Yuhas.

Provider candidates for the same term include Janet Brady, Gloria Burke, Dianne Cibotti, Pam Kaplinger, Joanne Pascuito, Barbara Murphy, and Martha Schifflhauer.

The slate of officers includes Bonnie Gorman, Chairperson, and Tony King, Vice Chairperson.

OSGOOD SCHOOL

Mrs. Collins' and Mrs. Price's Kindergarten classes have been celebrating Christopher Columbus in many ways this week. They have told stories, sung songs and performed finger plays; they've also discussed how Genoa is like Cohasset and done role playing as Queen Isabella, King Ferdinand and Columbus.

LIBRARY NEWS

Life in the library at Joseph Osgood School has started off with a bang. Every year we meet new eager-readers and greet old friends, too.

There is a bright, new award for the library's "Class of the Month." This Great Seal of Approval goes to the best class in the school at getting books back on time. Sadly, no one was #1 in September. Everyone seems to still be on summer time...maybe a little cold snap would remind our borrowers to bring their books back each week (a little reminder from home might help too).

This year there is a new direction in the library — down the Yellow Brick Road. Each class has a magic shoe that "moves on down the road" with good library manners but seems to get stuck when people forget where they are. That magic shoe can even go backwards if people get carried away, but we're happy to report that all progress was forward in the month of September with Mrs. DiBenedetto's second grade class in the lead!

DEER HILL

THE I.M.S. CHALLENGE

Helen Mulhern reports that the children have responded enthusiastically to the incentive program she has started this year in the I.M.S. (Individualized Mathematics Systems) Program.

On each grade level the children strive to win monthly awards for their class. Each pupil earns points by mastering math concepts on 12 different levels.

Visitors are encouraged to stop by and see the I.M.S. classroom and bulletin board where space ships track the children's progress.

Parent volunteers are still needed to help with the I.M.S. Program. Please call JoAnne Chittick at 383-9220, or contact the school office, if you can assist.

VINEYARD TRIP

Students from Mrs. Whitley's and Mr. Levine's fifth grade classes thoroughly enjoyed a trip to James Lagrotteria's house October 3. The students learned about the history of wine making, and got to work taking the grapes off the stems; they then ground and crushed them. The classes will make a return trip in the spring to bottle the wine.

SOAR WITH THE AMERICAN BALLET

Attention students in Grades 4 through 12: The American Ballet Theatre will perform at the Wang Center January 31 to February 4.

Dorothy Wondolowski, enrichment teacher would like to arrange a trip for interested students to this exciting event.

Students in grades 7 through 12 who are interested should submit their names to Mrs. Wondolowski's mailbox at the high school.

Deer Hill students should let their homeroom teachers know if they are interested.

Specific plans will be formulated based on students' response.

JR.-SR. HIGH SCHOOL
BOSTON SYMPHONY YOUTH CONCERTS

Dorothy Wondolowski, enrichment teacher, would like to organize a trip for the two-concert series. These will be held Thursday, Dec. 1 and Thursday, Feb. 9. The cost for both is $9. Interested students should submit their names to either Mr. Marks or Mr. Dodge at the high school. Each student will then be contacted individually to discuss specifics.

ART DISPLAY

As an adjunct to the Boston Museum of Fine Art's exhibit on "Great American Art," there is an exhibition of reproductions of "Great American Art" on display outside the junior high art department. The display includes many of the artists from the 18th through the early part of the 20th century. The high school art classes plan to visit the Museum to view this important show in the near future.

ALUMINUM RECYCLING

A campaign is underway at the high school to recycle the cans from the juice machine in the cafeteria. Although not refundable for a five cent deposit, the all-aluminum cans are too valuable as a national resource to simply discard in the trash.

The aluminum recycling is a service project initiated by the Alternative School. The cans are worth about a cent apiece. Any funds realized after transporting to

LOCAL FIELD TRIP

Cohasset High School is taking advantage of the community's resources. On October 3 the 10th grade American Studies classes toured the buildings of St. Stephen's and the First Parish in Cohasset.

The purpose of this 10th annual field trip was to compare the typical Anglican and Early American architectures that reflect the different religious, economic and social values. Fortunately, the contrast between the two churches is so marked that students can easily understand the respective points of view.

Special thanks is extended to Reverend Muir and Reverend Atkinson for their assistance in explaining their roles as well as giving the historical background of their churches.

"TESSAHOC TALES"

A new edition of the high school literary magazine "Tessahoc Tales" is underway, and student work is being solicited. Interested students should contact Mrs. Wood.

SPRING TRIP TO FRANCE

Mr. Fortin is offering a nine-day trip to France during the 1984 April school vacation. It will feature stops in Paris, Versailles, Chartres, Orleans, Chambord and Fontainbleu. It will include two meals, taxes, tips, transportation to and from airports, and tours. The price is only $ 799. For further information, call George Fortin at the high school, 383-6100, or come to the information meeting Tuesday, Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the new study hall at the high school.

HALLOWEEN PARTY

There will be an AFS Club Halloween Party for ADULTS ONLY Friday, Oct. 28 at the Unitarian Parish House from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. Come costumed. Purchase tickets from any AFS Club member.

"GODSPELL"

This year CHS will produce another all-school musical — "Godspell." With the same commitment to quality, the production team and students look forward to a success comparable to last year's musical "Grease." The proceeds will benefit the newly formed Performing Arts Scholarship Fund. Production dates are Dec. 4, 8, 9 and 10.

READING LAB

The high school English Department again offers the voluntary Reading Lab for students who want to improve their reading skills. The Lab serves all students in grades 7 through 12, and is a voluntary program. It is geared for enrichment for the advanced reader, development for the average reader, and improvement for the poor reader, with an individualized program. Parents are urged to encourage their sons or daughters to sign up for the Reading Program.

GUIDANCE DEPT. NOTES

CAREER EXPLORATION PROGRAM — offered to all 10th graders in conjunction with the Explorer Scouts Division of the Boy Scouts of America. The class will be divided into nine clubs, each representing a specific career cluster: science and engineering, business and commerce, communications, art — design and performing, government and law, social services, health services, skilled trades, and transportation.

On the first Tuesday of each month, nine speakers from each career cluster will meet with the appropriate club to discuss a particular career within that cluster. This program is designed to make students become more aware of themselves, their interests, and available career opportunities.

The Guidance Department would like to hear from any 10th grade parents who would like to help with the program.

PEER COUNSELING PROGRAM — designed to provide an opportunity for students to help other students in sorting out school and personal problems. The peer counselors attend two 40-minute training sessions each week which focus on listening, responding, decision-making and problem-solving skills as a course in the school curriculum. Co-leaders for the program are Miss Babian and Mrs. Porter. Peer counselors, who are juniors and seniors who have been recommended by teachers or guidance counselors, provide academic and personal support to a limited number of seventh and eighth grade and all new students.

The peer counselors sponsored a reception for all new high school students Oct. 12.

CENTURY III LEADERS PROGRAM — is a competition for seniors sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals. It involves taking a short current events exam on national issues and completing an application form. Winners can receive a $1,500 or even a $10,000 scholarship and an all-expense paid trip to Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia, and Washington, D.C. Applications are available in the Guidance Office; the deadline is Friday, Oct. 21.

JUNIORS — The PSAT/NMSQT will be held Saturday, Oct. 22 in the high school cafeteria. The test begins promptly at 8:30 a.m. and ends at approximately 11:30. The fee is $6 and registrations, taken in the Guidance

Office, will close Friday, Oct. 14.

All college-bound juniors and seniors who have not taken the SAT previously, should take this exam. Results are not used in the college admissions process, therefore students have a good opportunity to preview the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). This test is also the competition for scholarship assistance. It is the sole means for juniors to compete in the National Merit Scholarship Program.

SENIORS — Seniors are advised to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) in November or December. Materials available in Guidance Dept.

COASTLINE COLLEGE NIGHT — A regional college night will be held at Hull High School Tuesday, Oct. 18. Juniors, seniors, and parents from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate are invited to attend. Representatives from about 175 colleges, universities, nursing schools, and technical schools will be available to answer questions and distribute materials.

NORFOLK COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL — Open House to be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 16, for all students interested in careers in agriculture, forestry, animal science, agricultural mechanics, floriculture and related fields.

COLLEGE VISITORS — Juniors and seniors should sign up in advance in the Guidance Office for appointments with college admissions counselors who visit Cohasset High School:

OCTOBER — 10 a.m. Thursday, the 13th, Barbizon School; 8:30 a.m., Friday, the 16th, Univ. of Maine/Orono; 8:30 a.m., Tuesday, the 18th, New England Deaconess; 9 a.m., Mitchell Jr. College, and 1:45 p.m., Brown Univ.; 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, the 19th, Univ. of Southern Maine; 11 a.m., Lasell Jr. College; 11 a.m., Univ. JUNIOR HIGH DANCE

The Cohasset PSO and Community Center are co-sponsoring a dance for seventh and eighth grade students Saturday, Oct. 23 at Town Hall from 7 to 10 p.m.

Admission will be $2. Don Scollins will be the disc jockey.

EARLY RELEASE DAY

Thursday, Oct. 20, will be an early release day in the Cohasset public schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

The junior-senior High School will depart at 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m., and Joseph Osgood School, at 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

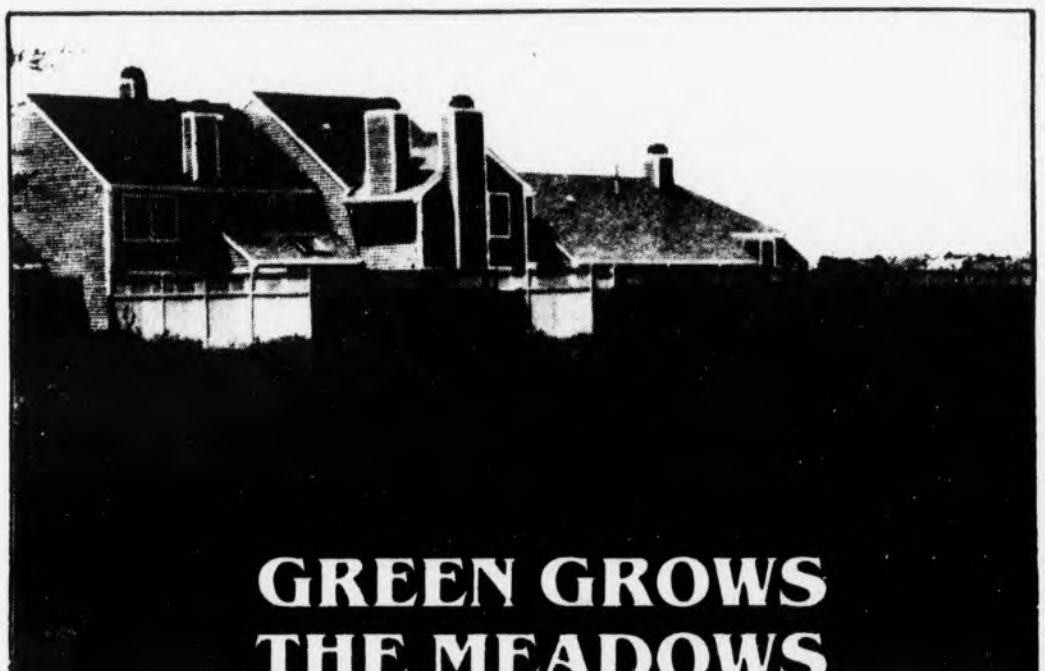
This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow the faculty members of the Junior/Senior High School, Deer Hill School, and the Joseph Osgood School to take part in a Special Education Workshop.

The following colleges will be represented at Cohasset High School in the guidance office. They are: Thursday, Oct. 13, Barbizon School, 10 a.m.; and Friday, Oct. 14, University of Maine/Orono, 8:30 a.m.

Lt. Malloy given Navy commendation

Lt. William Malloy, U.S. Navy and son of Mr. and Mrs. William Malloy of Cohasset, has been awarded the Navy Commendation Medal for meritorious conduct in the performance of his duties off the coast of Finland.

The commendation cited Malloy for ordering the keel anchor released on the frigate USS MCCandless when the ship was in danger of running aground in a fog bank in the Baltic Sea during NATO exercises.



Malloy is a 1975 graduate of Scituate High School. He graduated from the Naval Academy Prep School, Newport, Rhode Island in 1976 and from the Naval Academy in 1980.

He was commissioned an ensign in 1980 and for three years served aboard the McCandless, a frigate based in Norfolk, Virginia.

GREEN GROWS
THE MEADOWS

The first phase of The Meadows in Hingham is nearly sold out, so The Green Company has started the final group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes. Five of the six new buildings are on gracefully sloping land so most of these homes have large private decks, rather than courtyards, and walk-out basements with walls of glass which can easily be converted. Many offer lovely distant views across the open fields and woods. The clubhouse, swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and the beautifully furnished models are open, so plan a visit soon — any day between 9 and 5 — and see the landscaping... the flower-strewn meadows... and all the other reasons owners love their new condominium homes at The Meadows. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500.

Buy no shoes that will outlive you

By Lois Martin

While in the sixth grade I was allowed to go to the shoe store to purchase my own shoes. That should have been an exhilarating experience.

Instead it was my first mission buying shoes with the following charge: get something that'll last, look neat and be comfortable on your feet.

I obediently bought the most god-awful pair of shoes I've ever seen. There's a chance I was marked by them. They were Girl Scout shoes, oxford brown, with square toes and soles of 18-wheeler quality. The guarantee of 'lasting a lifetime' was all too true. The only reason I was able to get rid of them was that my size 6 feet (I was a big girl, precious but big) grew to size 8.

Since that time I've made a conscious effort never to buy shoes that make sense, never to spend money for something that'll last longer than I will.

I have not always succeeded. Occasionally in adulthood I've been entrapped by shoes with an angular strap in spite of a clod heel.

When Lilly (a dog person) came to live with me last winter, I trained her to destroy sensible shoes. I gave her a pair as a starter set. Now and then her discernment between sensible and nonsensical shoes has slipped. But that original pair is shot to the devil. Good Dog!

There are reasons for owning sensible shoes. Should one live at the end of a quarter-mile driveway, for example, and have cause to trek to the mailbox at the far end, sturdy footwear is commendable. One doesn't clatter to the mailbox in heels. That simply isn't done. The chore by its very nature, is serious. There's no telling what's in the mail. You've got to have your feet firmly planted, soles and heels flat.

And hikers get extra points before you even know what they do. That's because of their gum rubber soles (man made). Their insteps are vital. The wearers of those thunder boots are usually fun, fit people, but not as dance partners.

My favorite shoe doesn't have a four-inch stiletto. Only people who are not prone to tripping or fence leaping should wear those. Besides no one should have to scale a person to look her in the eye.

Give me a shoe that looks like it has big plans. A day of pickling cukes is productive. But no shoes ought to be geared exclusively for a day of standing on inflexible tile.

And I don't mean rhinestones, or buckles or polywog bows. There are good reasons for wearing a two to three inch heel. A person who's open to new opportunity, new adventure, plays on the balls of her feet. In heels you're ready. That would seem to imply men's and women's loafers leave them best suited for an errand at the drug store or a run to pick up the kids. Don't blame me, check the name of that shoe, "loafer."

The heel isn't the only determining factor. Serious sneakers are for sports. My sneakers aren't serious but they were the butt of jokes when I wore them. They aren't sensible because they soak through as fast in a swimming pool as do strap heels.

There are perils in wearing fun shoes. You have to be a composed person to act like nothing happened when you leave one spike in a sidewalk grate. And it's true no manufacturer has come up with a smart thong.

But moods are set by one's shoes. Many a woman with a pained expression has unusual footwear. They probably are overreacting from a childhood where they were told, "You can get a lot of good wear out of Aunt Hattie's shoes"...now that she won't be needing them anymore.

Hats and shoes ought not be limited to practical use. History might have taken a different turn if Eleanor Roosevelt, Gramma Moses and Florence Nightingale wore strappy, open-toed shoes.

So give me a cutaway instead of the hearty pump. Keep the eyelets, the lace-ups, the Mary Janes. I'm not even buying stout winter boots till they feature a little toe decolletage. Joan Kennedy isn't the only one who can be risque. Some of us just apply that through shoes.

Brain teasers

1. Which is most and which is least:
   a) Three score and a half
   b) Three and a half score
   c) Thrice and a half score
2. A book has 100 leaves. On what leaf is page 49?
3. Here's a cutie: Put down four sevens to make 56.
4. How far into the woods can a duckbillplatapus run?
5. Why should most men rather wash a mirror than a window of the same size assuming both are accessible?
6. Six horses finished an exciting race, and it's up to you to pick the winner. Mirabel finished 200 feet behind Mopsy. Mopsy was 150 feet ahead of Dropsy. Dropsy was 300 feet behind Topsy. Topsy was 60 feet ahead of Calypso and Atlanta was tied with Mopsy. When you pick the winner answer this question as well: In what conventional direction do race horses run, clockwise or counterclockwise?
7. This U.S. President was a conservationist, a former police commissioner in New York City and a vice president. He also had a famous cousin (a Democrat), and developed a distaste for Spanish foreign policy. Who was he?
8. Just before poor Tess died she said, referring to one of three doctors in the room (named Green, Brown and White respectively), "He did it, the cad!" Why was Dr. Brown held suspect?
9. Will it take as many pickets to build a fence on a hill as it will on a flat area if the pickets are the same distance apart?
10. Are the words "infer" and "imply" synonyms or what? Explain.

Answers

1. Three and a half score is most (70); Thrice and a half score is least (30); Three score and a half is 60½.
2. Twenty-five.
3. 7 divided by 7, plus 7, times 7.
4. Halfway, then he's running out of the woods.
5. A mirror has one side.
6. Topsy won. Horses in this country run around racetracks counterclockwise.
7. Theodore Roosevelt.
8. The other two doctors were women.
9. It will take the same number of pickets.
10. They are not synonyms. Example: If Harry says something to Bertha, Harry does the implying and Bertha does the inferring.

Cox Estate litigation close to conclusion

By Mike Berger

Town officials are hoping to reach agreement by early next week regarding the Cox Estate variance to Yankee Oil and Gas Company.

Selectmen, the Planning and Appeals Board, Town Counsel Richard Henderson and Atty. Chris Sullivan, representing Yankee Oil and Gas have met almost every day this week behind closed doors.

At Tuesday night's selectmen's meeting Henderson and selectmen said they were optimistic an agreement would be reached soon.

Resident Bob Davenport presented more than 250 signatures to selectmen, protesting the planning board's decision to bring a court complaint against the appeals board.

The planning board brought the complaint, said one unidentified member, as the only legal means to keep the negotiations open between other town boards and Yankee Oil and Gas.

The company received a variance from the appeals board. Earlier the firm received an automatic constructive grant variance and the right to house their company there because the appeals board was late in a variance decision.

Yankee Oil decided to drop the constructive variance and accept the appeals board conditions if the planning board agreed to drop a complaint filed against the appeals board.

The third litigant is Richard Tibbets, an abutter to the estate who filed a complaint because he feels the appeals board should have definite input into the variance decision He opposed the automatic constructive grant variance.

Terms of the executive session meetings were not disclosed by any town officials. Copies of a draft agreement were released to appeals board members Tuesday night.

It appears the topics of negotiations are future land use and public access to the estate.

What concerns the planning board in part is what will

First offenders tickets dropped

Few residents realize when they receive a parking ticket, they have a right to appeal and if its a first ticket, the fine will be dropped.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza is also the town's parking clerk and legislation signed in 1981 gives him the authority to hear appeal hearings and to drop tickets.

Legislation dictates that Lanza or the town's representative will dismiss first time offenders.

For second and third time offenders, Lanza can dismiss the ticket but will do so after consultation with the police officer who wrote the ticket.

For example if a person appealed and said the police officer erroneously gave out a ticket, Lanza will discuss the matter with the police officer to confirm the facts.

If the facts are warranted, Lanza said he would dismiss the ticket.

Lanza, as the town's parking clerk, also has the authority to contract with a commercial firm to collect all parking fines.

Those people who send in payment will send it to a special post office box number. The fines are collected and tabulated by Datamation of Boston.

For Calendar Year 1982-83, the town collected $11,859.

As of June 30, 1983, the town collected $14,647 and for July, August and September, $2,730 was collected in fines.

Lanza said some of the money is used as estimated receipts and the balance is used as surplus revenue.

Town sewer attorney finds a legal loophole

Town attorneys appear to have found a loophole in the state court strategy to fine Cohasset $2,000 daily for failure to build a $13.7 million central sewer facility.

Atty. Allan van Gestel of the Boston law firm of Goodwin, Proctor and Hoar, an experieniced environmental attorney, will plead before a Superior Court Judge today that the state failed to go before a judge before filing a Contempt citation and issuing a fine.

This means the town never had a opportunity to present its case before the court and present counter arguments.

The Sewer Commission is arguing an alternative sewer plan could solve the town's sewage problem, financially, and thoroughly.

In addition, the town's attorneys will argue that many envirnomental rules and standards have changed since a 1979 court settlement.

If the judge denies the state motion to fine Cohasset, this could mean the state is back "to Square A," said Sewer Commissioner Edward Guild.

It also could mean the state may be willing to negotiate rather than averting a lengthy and expensive court battle.

Essentially the town attorneys will argue several breaches of the state code governing the procedure of contempt citations were violated by the state.

Another alleged violation the town will argue is the state failed to include affidavits which would document the town failed to follow the 1979 Consent Agreement.

The state continues to hold its stance on the central sewer facility. There was no success in a recent meeting sponsored by State Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray.

Representatives from the state Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering told Murray and local officials the town must go ahead with the central sewer system.

State officials do not favor an alternative system such as rebuilt septic systems and leaching fields because of Cohasset's rocky soil.These cases would require exceptions to state health codes.

But the commision is arguing those areas where exceptions are needed would have received no help under the $13.7 million central sewer plan which calls for sewering less than one-half of the town.

Back to Basics curriculum pays off

The School Dept's continued curriculum review and adherence to basic reading, writing and mathematics skills are paying off.

Cohasset High School students continue to improve their Scholastic Aptitude and Achievement Tests results from a year ago.

In a presentation by Guidance Director Jack Leary Monday night, CHS graduates continue to score higher on these tests than their counterparts in New England, statewide and across the nation.

Although there is reason for praise, School Supt. Eugene Crowell gave a warning. He said because of declining enrollment there will be pressure on School Committee members to drop course offerings.

He said a combination of the present teaching structure, the staff and the variety of course offerings helped students to continue to improve test scores.

The S.A.T is divided into math and verbal sections. In 1983, Cohasset scored 469 while the N.E. average was 430 and the state average was 427.

For the math section, the national average was 468, New England, 465 and the state 463. Cohasset's average was 502.

Regarding Standard Written English, Cohasset scored 46.4, about four points higher than the national, New England and state average. Cohasset also scored four points higher in vocabulary and reading comprehension than national, regional and state averages.

One statistic showed Cohasset scored lower than the national average on advance placement tests. But Leary said the national average was computer for only 20 percent of the students taking the test while at Cohasset High, 64 percent of students took the test.

These tests were evaluated from 109 C.H.S. students taking the test during their high school years.

Dumping fee

The Board of Health wishes to remind business owners an annual $50 dumping fee is due by Nov. 1.

When payment is made, owners will receive a receipt which must be shown to landfill personnel in order to obtain permission to dump after Nov. 1.

Payment can be made at the Board of Health office, 43 Elm Street, Cohasset, Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., or Thursday evening from 5:30 to 8 p.m.

Congressman Studds meeting

Cohasset residents are invited to an informal, open meeting to talk with Congressman Gerry Studds, Saturday, Oct. 22 from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

Studds said, I promise not to give a speech. Our purpose is to give you an opportunity to speak your mind and to question me. "Every day I am asked to make decisions of great importance in your name. You are entitled to participate. I hope very much that you will be able to join us."

Flynn's poll

Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Flynn has commissioned a poll of public opinion regarding the District 10's reaction to the problem of U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds.

In essence Flynn, a Democrat, is testing political waters before deciding whether or not to run for Studds' seat next year.

Studds was censured by the Congress this summer after he admitted to having had an affair with a teenage page and approaching two other teenagers 10 years ago. At that time Studds also announced he is a homosexual.

The poll, done by SGM & A of Hyde Park and Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, indicated, according to a press release, that 53.6 per cent of the voters questioned felt Studds had embarrassed himself and the voters.

About 25 per cent of those questioned said they would vote for Studds again and 29.3 per cent said they wouldn't vote for him if he were the only candidate. Another 29.6 per cent said they had voted for him before but wouldn't do it again.

Contacted Monday Flynn said he is exploring the favorability of running for the office and that he would not run unless he has a strong chance of winning since he likes his job as Sheriff. He has been county sheriff since 1981. He was state representative from Bridgewater from '72 to '80.

Flynn said he would announce his decision before Studds does and that, he understands, would be sometime in January.

Portions of Cedar St. closed

John Lanata, of C & L Realty, received selectmen's approval to temporarily close the part of Cedar Street that runs from North Main Street to the access road of the Cedar Street Landfill so that Cedar St. can be paved.

The Cedar Street access road will be closed from October 17 through December 17. Traffic will be rerouted.

The temporary street closing is granted under the following conditions: 1) Signs will be posted on both ends of the portion of the street closed, warning motorists that the road is closed. 2) An emergency access route be kept open at all times for public safety vehicles and Cedar Street residents. 3) Trenches will be covered and safe lighing will be provided in the work area.

4) All machinery will be kept off the road evenings and weekends. 5) A detailed police officer be hired at times by the Police Chief. 6) Detour signs shall be provided and posted in accordance with the specifications of the Police Chief and the Highway Surveyor.

To gain entrance to the landfill, motorists should detour to Hull Street, travel to Cedar Street from the Hingham side. The roadway will only be open to members of the Cohasset Tennis Club and street residents.

Sentenced to life

John Tammaro of Boston was sentenced to life in prison for killing his former girlfriend Leslie Ann Haynes. Haynes died Dec. 19, 1982. She was found slumped behind the wheel of her car in a service station lot near her Cohasset home. She was shot four times in the head and once in the shoulder. Police later found a .22 caliber handgun near the downtown Texaco station. He will be eligible for parole in 15 years.

Fire prevention posters

What does Fire Prevention mean to you?

That's what Cohasset firefighters are asking Grades K-8 students as Cohasset merchants and the Fire Dept. are sponsoring a poster and essay contest.

The winners will receive $50 savings bonds or smoke detectors.

Capt. Mark Trask said in a letter sent to all students, "Fire Prevention Week (Oct. 9-15) "reminds us of the terrible destructiveness of fire and the importance of its prevention.

For Grades K-5, the Fire Dept. is inviting students to draw posters, "What Fire Prevention means to me."

Grades 6-8 students are asked to submit essays about the same subject.

The deadline for submission is Nov. 1. Judges are Capt. Trask, Osgood School Principal Jack Creamer and Deer Hill School Principal Ken Ekberg.

Winners will be named for outstanding efforts in each grade. Smoke detectors will be given to lower grade winners and bonds to the upper grade students.

Bonds were donated by Cohasset Savings Bank, Quincy Cooperative Bank, Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804, Rockland Trust, South Shore Bank and Pilgrim Cooperative Bank.

Smoke detectors were donated by ABC Equipment of Marshfield, Emergency Equipment Company of Rockland and Medi-Mart of Cushing Plaza.

To commemorate the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire (1851), and Fire Prevention Week, firefighters James Runey and Edward Corbo set up a special display at Cohasset Hardware.

The display included firefighter equipment, fire prevention equipment in a home and posters describing what to do during a fire, exit drills and signs describing the dangers of gasoline and smoking in bed.

Firefighters would like to thank the Watsons for donating the commercial space for Fire Prevention Week.

Residents are helping to recycle

Cohasset citizens are 'pitching in' to help reduce the demise of our town disposal area by recycling paper, glass and aluminum in record amounts, the recycling commission reports.

The recycling monitor said more and more people are stopping by with their contributions. Many citizens are interested in knowing where the material goes and in what quantities.

In 1982, there were over 200 tons of paper picked up by Sugarman Co. of Quincy. Full bins are shipped on an average of two times a month.

Crushed glass, in three sorted colors of Brown, Green and Clear, was shipped to Tiverton Recycling, Tiverton, R.I. Four loads amounted to over 60 tons of glass in 1982. Currently, with the advent of the bottle bill, the amount is over 22 tons.

Many people are contributing returnable bottles and cans which the monitor is carefully sorting for return to stores for cash. This has been a Boy Scout service project along with painting of containers, sign building, painting and erecting.

A special area (locked at night) is set aside in a storage bin for returnable bottles and cans of all makes and sizes.

Aluminum, although light in weight, has also been viable as an item in size and bulk. Cans, as well as aluminum appliances, storm doors, windows, lawn chairs, etc. have been effectively turned into dollars for the town.

In 1982, over one ton of aluminum was recycled in six truck loads shipped to Sugarman in Quincy. To date in 1983, one-half ton of cans, doors, windows and lawn chairs have been recycled. Volunteers have contributed trucks and trailers for this transportation.

Although the future life span of the landfill is limited, recycling is proving itself worthy of effort of every citizen in the town of Cohasset. Take time to sort out your bottles, aluminum, and papers - even if you have a commercial concern pick up your rubbish - and make a trip to the recycling center with a contribution. You should say "hello" to Steve, Skinny and John. After all, it is your dollars that are being returned.

Christmas gift shop

The George H. Mealy American Legion Auxiliary no. 118 is sponsoring their yearly Christmas Gift Shop for the veterans of the West Roxbury V.A. Hospital.

Each year they purchase 100 gifts so the veterans may have gifts to give to their families during the holiday season.

Any spare gift boxes of any size would be appreciated by the auxiliary. Call Brenda Litchfield, chairman, at 545-2354.

Vo Tech studies outside training sites

By Theresa Sullivan

South Shore Vo Tech Supt. Dr. Cliff Easton told the School Committee last week he'd like the school to expand and develop satellite training sites outside its region.

The technical training would be at the post-high school level.

Easton said he'd like to develop sites for technical institutes in conjunction with local colleges and industry. He suggested Massasoit Community College and Quincy Junior College as possible locations for post-high training. Quincy Junior College has already expressed an interest in the program, Easton said.

"I think we've got to expand our thinking beyond our district," he said. He said it is necessary to expand if the school is going to take part in what he sees as the coming high tech revolution.

The regional agreement does not allow involvement with outside sites. However, Easton said he will prepare town meeting articles to amend the agreement.

A two-thirds vote is necessary to change the agreement. Member towns are Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

The technical training program has the potential to produce revenue for the school, Easton said. The school would hire a teacher, but the student would pay to take the class, similar to any other college or university.

Scituate representative Joan Schirmer said she was concerned about the obsolescence of skills being taught to the students at the Vo Tech. For example, she said, "We're teaching making styrofoam cups. The styrofoam cups are going to be obsolete," she said.

The superintendent said he is trying to secure substantial donations from computer companies and industry in general.

The technical institute was one of eight long-range goals Easton presented to the school committee. Other goals include upgrading the school's equipment and curriculum, developing and implementing occupational programs for special needs students, and filling in any existing gaps in staffing in all areas.

Cox Estate litigation...

happen to the land if Yankee Oil sells the property and when the 25-year limit on the variance expires.

One planning board member, who asked not to be named, said the board is concerned about preserving the residential character of the neighborhood and is also concerned about the legality of "spot zoning."

The board is concerned about future use of the estate for other commercial use.

Sullivan said if Yankee Oil should sell, the purchaser will inherit the same limitations as the variance dictates.

Currently the limitations are a maximum of 50 employees , 29 parking spaces and a 25-year variance.

Whoever owns the estate will have to apply for a renewal of the permit before the appeals board.

Davenport, after presenting the petitions to selectmen, warned selectmen about the $36,000 budgeted for legal fees.

Currently $22,500 has been spent. The fiscal year runs until June 30, 1984.

A full text of the selectmen's statement concerning the issue can be found on the Op. Ed. pages.

Gillen Krainin's dream-come-true birthday party

By Judy Enright

All the elements of a perfect day were there Saturday when Gillen Krainin of Stetson Road slipped into her silky white wedding dress and fixed the shoulder-length net veil into her blond hair.

The sun shone on a crystal bright fall afternoon as all her bridesmaids arrived. Everything was ready, including a bell-shaped white cake which stood waiting to be accompanied by strawberry ice cream. Tiny white slippers, filled with bridal candies and flowers, adorned a table covered with an appropriately decorated tablecloth.

After an afternoon filled with fun and gifts, Gillen spoke about the day. Her favorite part? "The peanut hunt," she said, without hesitation. A peanut hunt at a wedding?

In fact, the celebration was not a wedding at all but a four-year-old's birthday party dream come true. "All she's wanted for ages," her mother, Joan, said "was a wedding dress," explaining that little girls love to play dress-up. So, the Krainins decided to have a dress made and have a dress-up "wedding" party for the guests.

Gillen had been asking for a wedding party and dress for more than a year, her father, John, said. "I think Joan just finally wore down."

The white, full-length gown was lovingly handmade for Gillen by her babysitter, Chris Miranda of River Street. The process included fittings so the gown could not be a surprise.

When you're three, going on four, it takes some creativity to come up with a wedding ensemble. The veil was actually a communion veil purchased at "It's A Small World" in Norwell. Setting off the outfit were white tights and white tap shoes. The bridal bouquet was from Ann Gallagher's wedding. Ann, Joan's sister, lives in Ohio and coincidentally is expecting a baby momentarily. "She really hoped she'd have it on Gillen's birthday," Joan said.

Not only did the invited guests get caught up in the festivities but their parents enjoyed the idea too. Joan said she met one mother while shopping and was told "we can't decide whether to get her a blender or a toaster," she laughed. Some of the small attendants arrived carrying baskets of fresh flowers.

Attendants, most of whom wore long party dresses, included: Elizabeth Clark of Bridge Street; Laura Anderman of Scituate; Cathy Poor of Brigantine Circle; Jenna Kiley of River Street; Courtney Webster of Main Street; Elizabeth Eldred of Riverside Drive; Rachel Williamson of Cohasset and Kara Cronin of John Neil Drive. Asked who her maid of honor was, Gillen slid her arm around Cathy Poor's neck and smiled.

Gillen said she planned to wear her dress on her real wedding day. Would she still fit into it? "Yup, I'll fit into it when I grow up," she said. Would she have a peanut hunt at her real wedding? "Yup." Why, we asked? "Cause I like finding the peanuts," she said. She added that she thought she had probably found the most peanuts.

Gillen's dress, unlike many one-time wedding dresses, will have multi-uses this year alone. She plans to wear it to a Halloween party at the Montessori Community School in Scituate and again for trick or treating.

Gillen's brother, Joseph, 7, and a friend, Alex Clark, had helped hide the peanuts. What did Joseph think of his sister's party? "Weird," he said, rolling his eyes.

Halloween Horribles

The annual Cohasset Community Center Halloween Parade of Horribles and Beautifuls will be held Sunday, Oct. 30, at 2 p.m.

All children are invited to don their Halloween costumes for a march around the Common led by the Community Center's favorite witch.

It is the perfect occasion to show off those special costumes to the adult spectators as well as to the other children. Refreshments will be served following the parade.

Decorations for the event are provided by those creative children who enter the Pumpkin Contest. Pumpkins are on display on the Community Center lawn, and prizes are awarded in many categories. Bring your jack o'lantern to the Center at 12:30 for judging, marked with your name and age. Pumpkins may be brought home after the parade.

Pull up a chair and read at Landry's

By Mike Berger

Landry's Book Parlour, a new hardcover and paperback bookstore, opened recently in Cushing Plaza, Cohasset and it's not a traditional bookstore.

To begin with, a reader can sit down in a plush chair and read all day without being bothered.

Second, owner Robert Landry says he sells all of his books at least 50 percent off the original sales price. For his hardcover, special interest books he says the savings are more than 80 percent the original sales price.

Third, the store is also a seller's market but no cash is passed hands. If a seller wants to sell paperbacks, the seller will receive credit towards purchasing other books in the store.

If the seller decides not to buy any books that day, he or she will receive a credit slip towards a purchase for another day.

Landry and his wife, Jo-Ann, are interested in any paperback that's in good condition as well as paperbacks and hardcovers in children's books.

Old hardcovered books and magazines are not accepted.

The store opened Oct. 7 but Landry expects his paperback inventory will increase weekly once people hear his store is open.

His current inventory is 8,000 paperbacks, shelved in 50 categories throughout the shop and alphabetized by author.

Employee Kate Bishop, a Cohasset High School student, said she has seen families and customers of all ages enter the store since it opened.

Robert Landry said his concept of buying and selling and a "parlour type atmosphere" is relatively new. Nine years ago he opened his first store in Westboro. "At that time I do believe we were the first in the state and New England."

Landry also owns Custom Forms Inc. in Needham. He moved to Scituate five years ago and began looking for the "right spot to open a bookstore."

"A couple of years ago I wouldn't have looked at Cushing Plaza. But they have done such a great job putting this plaza together, I think I'm in a great location here," said Landry.

He called his store a parlour because "I would like to have a nice, cozy and relaxed feeling. It's not your everyday shopping store."

The store is open every day, Sunday noon to 5 p.m., Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p..m., Friday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Robert and Jo-ann Landry of Scituate are owners of Landry's Bookshop in Cushing Plaza.

☐There are two Cohasset women working on the Greenough Scholarship Fair, "Nobles Noel." The fair will be held at the school, 507 Bridge St., Dedham on Friday, Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 5 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Noble and Greenough School is a nonsectarian five-and-a-half-day boarding and day school for boys and girls in the seventh through twelfth grade.

The Fair will feature over 30 shops with unique gifts for early holiday shopping, as well as baked and frozen foods, attic treasures, used clothing and used sports equipment. Light lunch and supper will be available. Admission is free. All proceeds from the Fair will benefit the Noble and Greenough Scholarship Fund.

An additional attraction on Saturday, Nov. 5 will be an opportunity to view some high-spirited athletic events. There will be games in soccer, field hockey and football beginning at 1 p.m.

Cohasset committee members are Eve Hublitz of 38 Forest Ave. and Philip Shockman, Meadow Lane.

☐The University of Massachusetts at Amherst awarded 278 undergraduate degrees in September. Among the Class of 1983 graduates was Jerome A. Whitney, III, of 15 Fairoaks Lane, with a B.S. in economics.

☐Bill Davenport was recently elected to represent the Choate dorms on the Dartmouth Freshman Council. Bill is a Cohasset High School graduate and the son of Bob and Sally Davenport on Black Horse Lane.

☐Slater Publications, Inc., Needham, publisher of "The Big Book" construction industry directory, and sponsor of "The Big Show" — The Northeast Construction Exposition, has added three advertising account executives to its staff. One of the executives lives in Cohasset.

Thomas McGrath, Cohasset, is a national account executive for the 1984 "Big Show," which will host some 12,000 construction industry executives and purchasing agents, June 12-14, at Boston's Bayside Exposition Center. Show director Robert T. Slater, president, Slater Publications, Inc., anticipates the 500-plus exhibitors at the 1984 "Big Show" will nearly double the number of 1983 participants.

McGrath's TLM Productions, Inc., performed contract consulting for the Greater Boston Convention and Tourist Bureau from 1975 through this year. He earlier served as the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce Director of Research and Development from 1960 until 1975. He holds an MBA from Wellesley's Babson College.

"The Big Book," now preparing its seventh edition for distribution in June 1984, published a record-breaking, 1,100-page sixth edition this past summer. The building industry directory and guide lists over 40,000 construction contractors, product suppliers, equipment dealers, manufacturers, and service firms throughout the New England area.

☐Cohasset resident Mary Jane Schwartz is taking part in a statewide campaign that may lead to a ballot question on the use of lost and abandoned pets in laboratory experimentation.

The campaign is being organized by Protect Our Pets (ProPets), a coalition sponsored by the New England Anti-Vivisection Society and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Schwartz is looking for volunteers from Cohasset, Hull and Hingham to help with a signature drive in support of ProPets' efforts.

ProPets filed an initiative petition on Aug. 3 with the Attorney General which would repeal the Massachusetts pound seizure law and make it illegal to use any dog or cat obtained from a dog officer, municipal pound, or animal shelter for experimental purposes.

Under the present law, several thousand lost, strayed or abandoned pets are seized from Massachusetts municipal pounds by research laboratories every year. An additional 4,000 former pet dogs and cats are brought into the Commonwealth for experimental purposes.

ProPets must gather at least 61,000 signatures of registered Massachusetts voters between now and Nov. 23 in order to have the petition presented to the 1984 legislature. If the legislature fails to adopt the petition, ProPets will gather an additional 10,000 signatures to place the issue on the November 1984 ballot.

Interested South Shore residents should call Mary Jane Schwartz at 383-0941 for more information or to volunteer their services.

☐Donald Roine, a Cohasset resident and former high school media specialist, recently joined the Hanover office of Jack Conway, Realtor, as a sales associate.

Donald was a former media technician in photography and television at the Plymouth-Carver and Silver Lake Regional High Schools. He is a graduate of Chamberlain Junior College in Boston where he majored in business management, and the U.S. Naval School of Photography in Florida. He is also a corporate member of the Brockton Boxing Hall of Fame.

He and his wife, Elizabeth Martin, have a three year-old son, Benjamin, and are expecting twins in January.

☐The Cohasset Hardware store has a display of different fire prevention apparatus in the front window in honor of Fire Prevention Week, and the Fire Dept. hopes that all residents have a chance to view it. It's interesting to see all of the various things that are used. Make it a point to stop and look. They wanted to be sure to thank the Watsons for displaying their "wares" for all of us to see.

Had an interesting story about last Saturday's game. The team played Manhattanville (a school in New York that has gone coed), and who should be on the opposing team but John Keegan, a fellow C.H.S. grad! Not only was it great for the guys to see each other, but Pat's team won their first game...a double reason to celebrate!

GREEN GROWS THE MEADOWS

The first phase of The Meadows in Hingham is nearly sold out, so The Green Company has started the final group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes. Five of the six new buildings are on gracefully sloping land so most of these homes have large private decks, rather than courtyards, and walk-out basements with walls of glass which can easily be converted. Many offer lovely distant views across the open fields and woods. The clubhouse, swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and the beautifully furnished models are open, so plan a visit soon — any day between 9 and 5 — and see the landscaping... the flower-strewn meadows... and all the other reasons owners love their new condominium homes at The Meadows. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Editorial

Sit & Talk

We're happy to see negotiations are leading to a conclusion in the Cox Estate variance issue and the town has a good chance in court this week to send the state back to the drawing boards regarding the sewer issue.

But for now the good news ends.

The balance of this editorial concerns a very serious and dangerous issue facing the community and failure to realize this is comparable to sticking one's head in the sand, hoping the problem goes away.

In late July we reported the beginning of trouble in the Fire Dept between firefighters and Chief Martin Dooley .

We hoped negotiations would end the dispute but instead the problems have festered to become the town's serious wound.

Grievance after grievance has been heard by selectmen. Sixteen criminal complaints, over back pay, were filed by the firefighters' union prior to the September Special Town Meeting.

Selectman John DeBassio has tried his best to bring both sides together but to no avail.

Town residents tragically saw several young children snuffed out in a fire and we thought maybe the meaning of life would pull the Fire Dept. together.

Maybe for a week or two but today we also tragically agree with a couple of firefighters who said candidly but honestly: Unless something is done soon, someone is going to get hurt.

Selectman DeBassio has filed his report concerning his study of the Fire Dept. problems with selectmen in executive session.

We remember the request of Fred Johansen who said in open session that the residents need to know the severity of the problem and the solutions.

Even though we don't know what the DeBassio report says, we have some observations.

It appears the union does not like Chief Dooley and wants him out of Cohasset. The union is determined to file grievance after grievance and try to force public opinion against him. Consider this: 16 criminal complaints over back pay. Our first reaction was: Did the chief hit a firefighter?

Some members of the union do not feel Dooley has the knowledge to be chief and others feel what Dooley says to the public and what he says to the men are "like night and day."

Chief Dooley is determined to stay here and complete his three-year contract and would like that contract to be extended. He is not about to fold to the union's wishes.

In addition, he still feels discipline is lax and wants more productivity out of the firefighters.

Talking to the firefighters and Dooley means two different versions of the truth. As is often said, the truth may be somewhere between the two versions.

It should also be noted there are many dedicated and talented firefighters on the force who care very much about what happens in Cohasset. They are also upset about the situation.

What is the answer?

Right now, the options do not look promising.

Comparing the situation to a last place baseball team, one could ask, Do you fire the team or the manager?

Should the two sides continue to battle it out for Driving lessons cause 'gibbering'

By Claire McDonough

Last Saturday I found the Dragon seated at his desk quietly gibbering.

"Honey," I began sympathetically, "have you noticed that you're gibbering?"

He snarled softly. "You'd gibber too if you'd just spent the day giving Larry and Breida driving lessons."

"I thought you said they were good drivers."

He sighed.

"I still don't say they aren't. But maybe I'm getting too old to put my license on the line for beginning drivers. For example, Larry wants to argue every regulation in the book. And some idiot told him he shouldn't put the directional signal on until he's within a hundred feet of where he plans to turn."

"Have you seen the pretty yellow flowers in front of St. Mary's Church?" I asked brightly.

His eyes narrowed suspiciously. "Why are you trying to change the subject? And what other cockamamie things have you told your seventh child?"

"Nothing. Tell me," I continued hurridly. "Were there any other problems? Beside that, I mean."

"That's like asking Mrs. Lincoln if 'beside that' she enjoyed the play. And anyway, it was only the beginning. He disagrees with the regulation on right hand turns, and the regulation on left hand turns, and the rule about stopping on a hill, and the use of hand brakes. And he says he wants an appointment with the Governor to discuss the whole situation."

I muttered something under my breath that the Dragon chose to interpret as "Fat chance."

"I think it's time you started sharing some of these problems," he told me. "For example, you're Breida's mother. I think you should be the one to tell her that 50 miles an hour is too fast to go in our driveway."

"Is that what those skid marks are? O.K. I'll talk to her. Do you want me to tell Larry he has to obey the rules if he wants to get his license?"

"It might help. You could also tell him to stop insulting my car by saying it's a boat, and there's no possible way for it to stay on the right hand side of the road when making a right turn. I mean, this is my car he's talking about.

I found Breida and Larry staring at a silent television set. Her face was unnaturally pale and he was shaking visibly.

"Excuse me for mentioning it," I began, "but do you know you're both gibbering?"

Two brown eyes and two blue eyes stared at me reproachfully.

"You'd gibber too," they replied in unison, "if you'd just spent the day having Daddy give you driving lessons."

Selectmen discuss Cox Estate variance

To the Editor:

Over the past three-and-one-half months various Cohasset Town Boards have been involved in considering the grant of a zoning variance for the Cox Estate on Cohasset Harbor. We feel it is important for all concerned, especially Cohasset citizens, to understand: the events up to this point, the concerns of the Board of Selectmen and what the Selectmen hope the eventual outcome will be.

June 30, 1983, Yankee Oil and Gas applied to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a zoning variance to alter the use of the Cox Estate to permit commercial use, to adjust parking requirements, and to count the basement as a story to meet bylaw requirements. A public hearing was held on the variance request August 23, 1983.

By state law, a decision for or againt a variance must be made within 75 days of the filing, and interested parties may appeal any decision within 20 days of such decision.

If a decision is not made within 75 days, the requested variance is considered granted on the terms requested ("constructive variance"), but this constructive variance may still be appealed by aggrieved parties within 20 days.

Letters

No action was taken by the Zoning Board of Appeals within the 75-day period and, therefore, a constructive grant of variance existed on the 75th day. However, Yankee expressed a desire to comply with all reasonable requests by the Town to limit the variance to their intended use of the property as a Corporate headquarters.

Yankee, therefore, entered into negotiation with the Zoning Board of Appeals to further clarify the exact nature of the variance that would be acceptable to the Town.

This led to a decision signed by the Zoning Board of Appeals Sept. 23, which in some ways expanded the original variance request and in other ways narrowed the request.

This decision was dependent upon agreement by Yankee to waive the constructive variance, that was to never attempt to employ the broader uses that could be made of the property and to guarantee that any

Erstwhile local gardener hangs up the trowel

By Judy Enright

Commentary

What is it about growing older that's so distressing? Perhaps it's the loss of that youthful ability to see things as they really aren't.

My latest encounter with the truth came last week as I was on my knees in what I call my perennial garden. True, the flowers do return every year in some form or other but so do the weeds, slugs, mushrooms, mealy bugs and other assorted specimens.

I was in the garden that day seeking a little mindless relaxation. I thought pulling a few weeds - if I could distinguish them from the perennials - might do the trick.

My mindless pursuit led to about a year's worth of daydraming. I thought about my father and his incredible ability to grow just about anything out of soil no more fertile than a stone. Of course, he's been at it a lot longer than I have and is really into the organic side of the whole growing process.

After he retired, he still returned to this office on a regular basis to pick up coffee grounds from the cafeteria. Coffee grounds enriched the soil, he said.

I can remember all too well my teenage embarrassment when he used to cruise the city of Nashua picking up leaves - for his compost pile - that homeowners had left in bags by the road for the garbageman. (What if one of my friends saw him?)

I can almost feel again the wave of nausea that swept over me when he announced that he was going to collect hair clippings from local barbers for his compost heap.

"Will the tomatoes have hair," I asked?

"Don't be so silly, Judith," he answered. "Hair's nothing more than protein and it decomposes." (He only calls me 'Judith' when he thinks I'm being particularly imbecilic.)

Anyway, with roots in New Hampshire and with such a gifted mentor, it would follow, I thought, that my gardening abilities would be beyond reproach. I smiled as I reached over and pulled up a clump of grass (I think) and uncovered a rotten mushroom crawling with maggots.

It suddenly dawned on me, as clear as day, that not only had I not inherited one single whit of my father's ability, despite my years of pretense, but that I actually found digging around out there totally repulsive.

What person in his or her right mind could enjoy touching a slug? Where is the relaxation in that?

Who can say that green tomato horn worms, which are bigger than a man's thumb, are anything but hideous? (I was told this summer, when I frantically called a gardening friend after finding the green worms, that she used to throw them to her chickens who were scared of them and wouldn't even eat them. I think that's a pretty smart bunch of chickens, myself, because I wouldn't eat them either. In fact, I wouldn't even touch them and made my sons pick them off the tomato plant.)

It isn't as though my gardening history has been a total disaster. A pot of mums, bought at a local church fair some years ago, has actually done quite well - except that I forget to cut them back in early summer and traditionally have six-foot mums that fall over and bloom on the ground where no one can enjoy them.

And, when I dug some ornamental grass out of a flower garden and flung it into the woods, it spread like crazy. The iris I threw over there have done nicely, too. I have also won some recognition locally for having produced a virtual mint jungle from a single plant.

I once had a rather pleasant vegetable garden, planted with leftovers from my father's garden. What did it matter that I had 12 prolific eggplants when no one in the house liked eggplant or that my zucchini had enormous elephant-ear leaves but no zucchini? One day I stepped out to pick a green pepper, feeling quite a lot like Thalassa, and came within an inch of stepping on a large snake that was under the plants finishing his frog luncheon. The bulldozers were in within the week to replace the eggplant and zucchini with chlorine and a filter.

This summer doesn't stand in my memory as a banner year for annuals either. A package of about 50 sunflower seeds was soaked in a sure-to-make-'em-grow chemical solution and carefully planted along a fence. Five months later, I have two sunflowers. Chickadees have a better average than that with what they drop from the feeders.

I suppose those boxes of perennials from Amos Pettingill's farm will have to be planted before I hang up my trowel. Hopefully, they won't be expecting friends and relatives to join them next fall because I've ordered my last hemerocallis, lilium and tradescantia.

Sorry about all this, Dad. I guess I'll have to pretend to be happy with no dirt under my fingernails. Oh, incidentally, North River Gardeners and Norwell Garden Club - would you mind sending back my membership applications?

Clergy speaks: Adam and Martin Luther King Day

By the Rev. Edward Atkinson
First Parish in Cohasset

Recently I watched the NBC Movie presentation of "Adam," the true story of the abduction and murder of a six year-old child. It was painful viewing, but I felt that the movie might offer me some insight into a tragedy which, according to the film, strikes over a million children in this country.

Sadly, the story of Adam Walsh revealed not only the agony of his family and the ugly reality that there are persons in the world who abuse and murder children, but also the woeful inadequacy of state and national investigative organizations in responding to the crisis of a missing child, the apparent apathy of possible witnesses to the crime and the ponderousness of our legislative process in addressing needed reforms.

From the point of view of a minster, however, I was particularly struck by the seeming lack of support which the Walsh family received from their religious community other than providing a rather touching funeral service for the little boy.

Perhaps it was an omission on the part of the script writer, but if so it was a serious omission.

Where was their minister when the family was frantically searching for Adam and later on when they were struggling with their grief? Where were their church friends when the family needed someone to cover their phones at home, or bring meals, or provide transportation, or watch their house, or simply be with them? Where was their church when they sought legislative reforms or when the Walshes set up a center to help other families experiencing a similar crisis?

It is unfortunate once again to see the church being portrayed only as a place for ceremonies, for weddings, christenings and funerals, when the church can and needs to be ever so much more.

"SHOULD WE BE CELEBRATING COLUMBUS DAY?"

Senator Jessie Helms of North Carolina has questioned whether or not Martin Luther King Day should be added to our calendar of national holidays. I suspect that Senator Helms' opposition to a holiday in honor of Dr. King is simply one more sad eample of good old-fashioned racism on his part.

If, however, we accept at face Helms' argument that we are observing too many three-day weekends for the health of the economy, then I would suggest that the holiday we eliminate not be Martin Luther King Day, which gives much overdue recognition to the black community in our nation, but Columbus Day which tends to perpetuate a myth and honors a person of questionable moral character.

Surely we all now know that America was not discovered in 1492. There were already 10 million people living in the "New World" at that time whose ancestors had come to this continent anywhere from 10,000 to 50,000 years before. Columbus was a poor navigator even by the standards of his own day and a religious fanatic seeking to make the whole world "Christian" and just incidently himself and the king and queen of Spain extremely wealthy. On his first trip he returned with 10 natives for display, and on his second trip he attempted to bring back 500 as slaves. Most of them died in transit. Within a century practically none of the Caribbean natives survived their meetings with Columbus and those who followed after him.

If we can afford to keep this holiday in deference to those who still find redeemable qualities in Columbus, then let it also be a day when we honor and learn more about the history of the people who inhabited this land long before the European migration that followed his voyage.

Sit & Talk . . .

three years? Will local cable television in 1984 mean continued executive sessions to listen to grievance after grievance?

There may be a solution but it means the union must be willing to sit down across the table from the chief.

In 1978 the late Anwar Sadat of Egypt put aside his proverbial sword to talk with Menachem Begin of Israel. The two leaders, who faced each other as guerilla warriors in 1948 realized for the good of their people, peace was essential 30 years later.

The solution may be this: Union President Bill Protulis and one of the fire captains should meet out of Cohasset with Chief Dooley and Selectman DeBassio.

Sit and talk. If all else fails, at least an attempt was made.

Cohasset residents have shown a willingness to tell selectmen how they feel about the Cox Estate. At this stage it is also obvious the union also listens very carefully to public opinion.

Maybe, if the average resident talks to a firefighter and a selectman, maybe we will see some progress.

Before it is tragically too late.

Selectmen discuss Cox Estate variance...

subsequent owner would be bound by the same condition.

It was not possible to sign and file both parts of this agreement—that is the variance conditions and the waiver of the constructive variance—before the end of the 20 day appeal period.

Therefore, if no further action were taken the property use could have been expanded in the future beyond Yankee's intended use.

The Cohasset Planning board, as an interested party, became increasingly concerned about the variance itself, the wording of the variance to be granted, the expansion of parts of the variance beyond the original request, and the fact that the constructive variance could have been implemented.

The Planning Board therefore felt it necessary to file an appeal one day before the end of the appropirate 20-day period. This was an attempt to assure that the constructive grant of the variance as originally filed would not be able to stand further Town input on the specifics of the variance and to preserve the legal right of the Town to fully determine the nature of the variance.

This was strictly a procedural action agreed to by the Board of Selectmen to allow the negotiation process to continue.

It is not an attempt to bar Yankee from occupying the Cox Estate.

Any grant of a variance is a special privilege and is essentially irretrievable. The selectmen recognize that a variance for the Cox Estate is of more than ordinary interest, because of its location and scenic beauty. Since a variance attaches to the property and not the current buyer, it is important that any variance be in the future, as well as the present, best interests of Cohasset.

In this regard, there are several parts of the variance that we agree need further discussion, some inconsistencies that should be resolved, and vague language that requires attention. At the same time, we do not feel that any of the requests being made of Yankee Oil will materially interfere with their intended use of the property, but only guard against expanded use in the future.

We have every hope that these issues can all be resolved outside of court to the mutual satisfaction of Cohasset and Yankee Oil, and that Yankee will be welcomed as a good neighbor in Cohasset.

Water Commission studies outside water meters

Water Commissioners William Montuori, Lot Bates and Peter Pratt recently heard a presentation on outside water meters.

The meters may be read in three ways.

A meter reader may carry a device on his belt which instantaneously scans and records the individual meter identification number and water usage, recording the information on a tape. That tape may be fed into a computer for instantaneous billing.

The information may also be transmitted over telephone lines (which is "expensive"), or over cable TV lines.

According to the company officials the meter reader-scanner method (the first option) has a payback in 1½ years. If the Legislature adopts new proposed legislation giving 50 percent funding for purchase of meters, Pratt says the payback could be cut to one year in Cohasset.

ARB (Automatic Reading and Billing) saves the homeowner the inconvenience and potential liability of having a meter reader in owner's cellars, as well as speeding the flow of information.

Water commissioners were told this by Wayne Travis and Edward Kingsley of Mass. Installations, Walpole.

It is especially useful when real estate sales are taking place, and new owners want a quick reading, the representatives said.

Pratt says the system would allow monthly billings and improve cash flow management of the accounts.

The water commissioners recently put out a bid for new meters, but no bids were received. Bates said he learned from one company no bids were received because liability insurance premiums required might be $1,500.

SALARY SCALES

Chairman Bill Montuori is seeking a meeting with the Personnel Board regarding department job descriptions and salary scales. He said a former employee, Robert Protulis, left the water department after three years to start at the lowest classification in the fire department for $5,000 more than his sewer department rate.

Commissioners had a long executive session with Assistant Town Counsel, regarding Cohasset Heights litigation. Montuori said they are continuing to employ Slater in the case.

Light Up Your Life

by Lee Leavitt

Outside security lighting is considered a luxury by many people, but now, very often, it is a necessity. Many people do not realize the alternatives they have in this form of lighting, and would be amazed at the low cost of operating. Instead of a 150 watt flood light you have in front of your house, just change them to the 90 watt capsulite by Sylvania and you will still get 150 watts for a savings of 1½ cents per hour.

Also there is the high pressure sodium fixture which takes a 70 watt bulb and has the equivalent of a 300 watt flood bulb. These bulbs range from as low as 35 watts up to 1000 watts.

Also available are timers to automatically turn these outdoor lights on and off for you.

So, no longer should outside security lighting be a luxury. There are many styles available at Flagstaff Lighting Showroom at NORTH RIVER ELECTRIC, 433 Washington St., Norwell. We accept MC and VISA and are open 9-5 M-S; and 9-9 Th. Call us at 659-2272 or 749-5524 for help on your lighting needs.

CHS sports report

Girls soccer

Cohassets victory over Hanover 6-1 boosted confidence of the girls soccer team, for the upcoming week.

When Cohasset played on Hanover's turf earlier this season they tied 3-3. Coach Kennan Startzell said then that Cohasset was a stronger team. "We outshot them by a wide margin in both games," said Startzell.

Last weeks game at Cohasset proved him right. Startzell said, "Our defense was stabler this time, that was the key."

Cohasset jumped ahead 2-0. Hanover attempted a comeback by returning the goal. Cohasset was 3-1 by the half and they continued to score.

Sara Seave had a hat trick of three goals. Chris Pompeo scored two goals and had an assist. Amy Duncombe also scored a goal.

Cohasset will play Duxbury Monday.

Football

A loss of 6-0 against Hanover has not knocked down the Cohasset Football team's spirit.

Both teams played a tight defensive game. Cohasset was at the 10 yard line with 15 seconds remaining and they just could not score.

Coach John Leone said, "We have nothing to complain about that game. We played the game well."

Injuries have made Cohasset sacrifice valuable players. Quarterback David Barcomb could not play because he injured his ankle. But, Lee Wilson, who was signed off as injured for the season made a phenomenal comeback.

Wilson had not played since last year. But through hard work and desire he is playing. He came back when the team needed him last Saturday by playing quarterback for the first time. Wilson was a running back last year.

This week Cohasset will play the homecoming game against Norwell. Norwell beat Cohasset last year. Cohasset won the year before. Looks like Cohasset is due for a homecoming victory.

Boys soccer

Cohasset soccer Skippers have not rocked the boat too much with a 5-4-2 record and a 1-0 win and loss last week.

Senior John Replogle, assisted by junior David McDonald, scored the lone goal.

Norwell attempted a penalty kick in the fourth quarter but goalie Charlie Brady protected the goal.

Cohasset will face Duxbury this week. "We have to play defensively against them," said Coach John Anderson.

Rockland ties Scituate for second place in the league. Cohasset plays Rockland this week. "We expect a better game this time," said Anderson.

'Frugal Fannies' subs for Filene's Basement

By Lois Martin

"Frugal Fannies" is suburbia's answer to Filene's Basement.

And those owners are smart. Frugal Fannies is somewhere in Dedham or Norwood. I don't know which, I only know what exit I took off 128, Rte. 1, Norwood South.

They're savvy because they won't let women in except on three days. Nothing so stimulates a charge to a store than denial of easy access.

Saturday morning they open at 7. That's a.m., not after supper. I called the store at 6:30 for directions because I couldn't think of any friends who would forgive my calling them. The young woman who answered was articulate and helpful. "Hurry," she said. I couldn't get out the door quick enough.

PATCHES

By 7:20 I was being directed by a series of young people toward a particular parking spot. The main lot was full. They were filling the auxiliary spaces. I hustled out of the car and toward the encounter.

Inside the warehouse I saw an overwhelming amount of merchandise. In fact the almighty inventory rather than the people was what wore me down.

I seized slacks immediately, a good green, loading up to try on. Then I charged the blouse racks, first storming through the cottons before the dressy blouses. But I was distracted by the sweaters. So mentally I noted the location of blouses where I hadn't been thorough to do the thousands of sweaters before someone else got them.

I was keenly aware that I was unpracticed at the art of competitive warehouse shopping. I knew time was the element.

Speed, then counts a lot. But so does apt decision-making. Grabbing the wrong size by accident or uncertainty can cost you at least a half hour in finding it again and try-on time.

At first I made an honest effort at coordinating with what I already own. I abandoned that, not intentionally, but because once my right arm was overloaded, a great deal of attention was needed to maintain balance. At one point, three sweaters, a skirt and a jacket tangled hangars, slipped off my arm, beyond my knee's desperate grasp to halt them. I was thus stalled in action seven minutes as I put down my purse and restacked the haul.

Finally I made my way to the dressing room (seemingly a three day trip from the suit racks). And I made another error. I was overloaded. Ten was the limit and they wouldn't let you run half naked back to swap for more clothes. That cost me because they returned all the extra clothes I really wanted to try and I had to go through the whole route again to find them. I lost a nice blouse that way.

The dressing room was a myriad of unclothed women, partially clothed and fully dressed in outfits with tags flailing. Each was entirely absorbed in herself, taking no note of someone within inches of her peering over her shoulder into a piece of available mirror space.

I vaulted for a spot on which to establish my trying-on space. It was like the race for the west, squatting rights. Possession was nine-tenths of the law.

Try sharing a piece of that dressing room property without permission and see what happens. It was too late to let one's mind race trying to remember the quality of Saturday morning's underwear. And there was no need to worry.

Again decisiveness was everything. It had to be instinctive. Does it look good or not, hurry up, make up your mind, so you can get back out there to nab another 10. Choices made, I found another problem. There are no carts. You lug that which you choose to buy and you lug everything you wish to try. Put nothing down to chance loss. Competitive shoppers don't mean to be brutal. But consider it comparable to 300 starving women vying for the only available dish of food in the world. Survival of the fittest.

My discernment improved. I knew the layout and the fastest aisles to get there. I had learned to drape my chosen clothing with my purse over my left shoulder, leaving my right arm as the untried division.

The crowd crunch pressed closer as 9 a.m. came. Little space was passable though dispositions were still cheery, hopeful. I suspect serious depression takes over after three hours in there for the seasoned shopped.

Because at 9:05 I'd had it. I was weakened by hunger, the hangar marks on my right arm, and a sudden lack of interest in my wardrobe.

I made final choices, one of which was to take home untried clothes because I couldn't handle a riot in the dressing room if I tried to share a mirror.

I bought a few things, I think. All that interested me on the way out was the hot dog vendor's goods. There's the real businessman in the lot.

I may go to Frugal Fannie's again some time, once I get my strength back. I figure I could make enough to pay for what I bought if I came up with a map and a critique of their clothes. Not to mention a training session in shopping there.

First I've got to find a very small woman who'd like a dressy size 5 blouse that'll go with just about any shade of green.

Brain teasers

1. Without removing your trousers, how could you put your left hand all the way into your right-hand pants pocket?
2. This man was the only U.S. President to serve two terms that were not consecutive. Who was he?
3. This is kind of a toughie: What may go up a chimney down, or down a chimney down, but may not go up a chimney up or down a chimney up?
4. Your bed and your light switch are situated 12 feet apart. How could you switch off the light and get into bed before the room is dark?
5. Texas, which is the only state allowed its own navy, has been under six flags. Go ahead and name five.
6. Is it bad luck for a bride to kiss her husband just before the wedding ceremony?
7. When is the "d" in "hand" properly not pronounced?
8. Quickly now, is a duck a drake or a swan?
9. Who would be President of the United States if the Vice President died?
10. Sheila dipped a handkerchief into a liquid (well known) without wetting the handkerchief. What was the liquid?

Answers

1. Wear your trousers inside out.
2. Grover Cleveland.
3. An umbrella.
4. Go to bed in the daytime.
5. United States, Republic of Texas, France, Spain, Mexico and the Confederacy.
6. A bride has no husband just before the wedding.
7. Handkerchief.
8. A duck is the female of a drake.
9. The President.
10. Mercury.

Antiques Appraisal Day

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an Antiques Appraisal Day Saturday, Nov. 12, at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St., Cohasset.

The hours will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Expert appraisers from Robert W. Skinner, Inc., an auction and appraisal firm of Boston and Bolton, Mass., will be present to make a verbal appraisal of your antiques, collectibles and works of art.

Among items that can be appraised are: paintings, prints, glassware, pottery and chinaware, books, textiles and other works of art. Excluded will be stamps, coins and large furniture.

Verbal appraisals will be obtained at $5 per item or $10 for three items.

Written appraisals can be arranged at somewhat higher cost. The Lothrop House Antiques Appraisal Day is a benefit for the Cohasset Historical Society.

For further information, please call 383-0773 or 383-6930.

Writing a resume

"Your Resume: Write it Right" is the subject of the Oct. 24 meeting of South Shore NOW (National Organization for Women). Beginning at 8 p.m., the program will be held at the Cushing Room of the Rockland Trust Building, Rte. 3A, Cushing Plaza, Cohasset.

Pat Laidler, a professor at Massasoit Community College and an expert in women's career studies, will lead the meeting. Women in the community who are in the process of formulating a resume for the first time or who are rewriting their resumes during a change in their career paths are invited to the program. Discussion will range from writing resumes in the traditional format to resumes which incorporate competencies learned in non-career roles.

After earning her MBA from Northeastern University, Laidler spent 10 years in the marketing field before coming to the Business Department at Massasoit. She designed and presently teaches a course entitled, "Women at Work," which focuses on developing women students for managerial positions.

All NOW meetings are open to the public. For further information, write: South Shore NOW, Box 78, Accord Station, Hingham, MA 02018.

Alzheimer's support group

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore will meet at the Hersey House, 229 North St., Hingham.

Nov. 1 at 1:30 p.m., a discussion/support session will be held to discuss individual problems.

Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. will be the topic and John Spagnaglia will be the speaker.

For further information, call Mrs. J.K. Bryant, 383-9094 or Mrs. J.R. Mitchell, 749-5417.

United Nations Dinner

At its annual United Nations Dinner Oct. 29, the Cohasset League of Women Voters will have Dr. Saul Mendlovitz, a renowned expert on national security, as the featured speaker.

Dr. Mendlovitz, a former Cohasset resident, is currently Vice-President of the World Policy Institute in New York City.

He is also the Ira D. Wallach Professor of World Order Studies at Columbia University, co-editor of "Alternatives: A Journal of World Policy," a member of the Board of Directors of the Arms Control Association, and has edited numerous books and publications, including "On the Creation of a Just World Order."

The dinner will be held at the Unitarian First Parish House, and will cost $12.50 per person. Tickets are limited.

For reservations, please call Carol Martin at 383-6577 or Sherry Becker, 383-1971.

'Paco the Clown' at town hall

Friday, Oct. 28, the Cohasset Recreation Department will present Paco the Clown, at 7 p.m., Town Hall auditorium.

Paco will entertain and amuse both young and old alike with his juggling, magic, balloon sculpturing, clown spoofs, balancing, plate spinning and much more.

Admission will be $1.50. Cartoons will also be shown, and refreshments and magic kits will be on sale. Children who are dropped off should be picked up at about 8:45 p.m.

☐The new C.H.S. football program, put out by the Cohasset Gridiron Club, is back from the printers and was first "shown" at last week's football game. The club dedicated the book to Mr. William Ripley, "Teacher, Coach, Principal, Superintendent, and Friend," and did a super job. Watch for a team member to deliver your copy.

☐Joanna Fone is one of many freshman college students home for the week, preparing for her mid-term exams that are coming up. First thing on the list...to catch up on some much-needed sleep, a common malady among all freshmen.!

☐Rich Evans reports hockey season starts at St. A's this week, and that he is "ready."

☐This week is "Spirit Week" at C.H.S., a week meant to help build up school spirit for its teams. Every day something different is to be worn, with the whole school hopefully participating. Sunglasses, hats, T-shirts, etc., are to be part of the mode of dress. Hope it inspires the spirit it's supposed to!

☐This Saturday brings to a close "Spirit Week" with the Homecoming game, Cohasset vs. Norwell. There are 10 gals who are running for homecoming queen: Nina Atkinson, Hanna Chapin, Barbara Meers, Nancy Walls, Rachelle Sargent, Jennie Mitman, Kim Wittet, T. McArthur, Tammy Karcher and Ginger Ralff. By Saturday at game time, there will be four contestants left, each one will appear with her escort, and the queen will be chosen! When the girls are driven around the football field in the convertibles, it's so exciting for them!

☐Larry Ash has been a busy young man lately. It seems that he grew a pumpkin this fall that is a large one, indeed, and he has been entering contests with it all over the area. He has won some, too!

Larry is a sophomore at C.H.S.

☐Everyone joins in wishing our Town Clerk, Charles Marks, a speedy recovery after his recent heart attack.

Vegetables fresh from one's garden have been a boon to the food budget this summer and we'll surely miss their incomparable flavor. It's pretty dismal to face the prospect of next winter's anemic looking tomatoes, sad potatoes and limp lettuce. So now while roadside stands are so inviting, let's take advantage of this last chance to enjoy fresh, native vegetables.

There are potato dishes sufficiently interesting and nourishing to provide excellent meals. Crisp-skinned Green Mountain or Idaho baked potatoes accompanied by a vegetable, green salad and hearty dessert can be tempting. Usually the baked potatoes served in restaurants are wrapped in aluminum foil and kept warm in a large steamer until serving time. By then, they're pretty limp, but you can serve a crispy potato by putting as many as desired in a two-quart saucepan with about a cup of water. Bring to a boil on high, reduce to low and simmer 10 min. Preheat over to 450 degrees and place potatoes in oven until crisp and baked through. The presimmering cuts baking time and results in a perfectly baked potato. Halve the potatoes at once so the skin stays crisp. Scoop out the innards and butter the inside skin, seasoning with freshly ground black pepper. Mash with butter, salt and cheese. Sprinkle with paprika and warm in the oven just before serving — and don't forget to eat the skins!

One of the most obvious ways of lowering the food budget is by eliminating meat from your dinner menu once a week. Only in America do people consume so much meat and although protein is a necessary part of the diet, Betty Nangle's dish is nourishing and is called a

Tuna Loaf Special

1 can tuna, drained, 13 oz. size
2 c. fresh bread crumbs
1/2 c. milk
1 T lemon juice
1/4 tsp. dill weed
1/4 tsp. each of salt and hot pepper sauce
3 eggs, separated
lemon half-slices

About one hour before serving, mix first seven ingredients and egg yolks in bowl. Beat egg whites in a mixer until stiff. Fold into tuna mixture. Spoon into 8½" x 4½" greased loaf pan. Bake in 375 oven for 35 min., or until knife comes out clean. Garnish with lemon and dill. Serves five and may be served with this

Creamy Pea Sauce

In saucepan over medium heat, stir 2 T all-purpose flour into 2 T melted butter. Add 1/2 tsp. salt until blended. Slowly stir in 1½ c. milk, cooking until thickened. Stir in 1 c. frozen peas and heat through.

Funny thing about corn. In the midwest it's measured by the foot, in the south by the fifth and on television by the hour. (Just a random thought I garnered from the Reader's Digest and couldn't resist tucking in while we're talking vegetables.)

And while we're on the subject of vegetables, here's Mary Doheny's family favorite which calls for:
1 large can of sweet potatoes
1 medium-sized jar of applesauce
Sprinkle with a speck of nutmeg, brown sugar and dot with butter. Place in casserole dish and bake 15 min. at 350 degrees.

Cucumber patch: Dillies of the field. (Again not original, but appropos.)

Obituary

Richard Caristi

Dr. Richard J. Caristi, 40, died of a heart attack Sunday at South Shore Hospital.

He was a perfectionist in all respects. Invited to join the choir at the First Parish Church in Cohasset, he reneged, feeling he didn't have a great enough understanding of music. And yet, Richard had the ability to play almost any musical instrument presented to him, without explanation, without instruction, and beautifully. He could play the music because he could hear it.

His friends marvelled at his ability in all areas. He especially enjoyed attending church programs and recitals during which his son and daughter, Kenny and Julie would play the violin or piano. His love of and his ability in music, was reborn and nurtured through their talents.

As a young family man and orthodontist, he devoted most of his time to his family and his practice. Often when asked by his children to explain a certain homework problem, he would explain to the extent that Julie and Kenny would lose interest in the explanation. In that regard he was like most of us.

Early on, Richard could have chosen to devote his expertise and knowledge to various professions, among them history, music, theology, photography, the crafts. But he chose to be an orthodontist, much to the delight of his patients in Cohasset and Braintree.

He shared and saved his expertise in doll-house building and miniature furniture for Julie; his love of mechanics and technical ability he shared with Kenny; and with Mark, 3, he shared his love of adventure and nature.

In addition to being an orthodontist, Richard was a writer. He had many chapters written and researched for a historical novel, with military overtones. His wife, Marie, hopes to someday investigate the possibility of finishing the novel.

Richard's keen sense of history, wit and laughter, and love of people and friends, was well-evidenced during his lifetime. He had a concept of privacy as a precious right. Not unlike the founding fathers, when they wrote the First Amendement to the Constitution, he defended that privacy within his family, his neighborhood, and in the community at large.

He was a good friend, a good neighbor, an active church member. He attended to cultural affairs, and had a good deal to express. He contributed with his ideas and his understanding of both the world and the community, and to human potentiality. His community misses him in all these endeavors, and it will especially miss his sense of humor.

Dr. Caristi had orthodontic practices in both Braintree and Cohasset. His practices are presently being managed by Dr. Sharon Hayes, an orthodontist.

A native of South Boston, he graduated cum laude from Boston College in 1964 with a B.A. He then furthered his studies at Tuft's Dental School. After a two-year tour of duty with the U.S. Naval Dental Corps at Paris Island, South Carolina, he returned to Tufts Dental School to complete a two-year specialty program in orthodontics. Shortly afterwards he established practices in Braintree and Cohasset.

He is a member of the following dental societies: American Dental Association; Mass. Dental Society; American Association of Orthodontists, Tuft's Orthodontic Association; South Shore District Dental Society.

Dr. Caristi leaves his father, Charles Caristi of Scituate; a brother, Robert F. Caristi of Wakefield; and his wife, Marie (Flaherty) and children Kenneth and Julie, both 11; and Mark, 3.

Memorial services will be held Sunday, Oct. 23, at 5 p.m. at the First Parish Meeting House, Cohasset Common. Dr. Caristi will be buried privately at Cohasset Central Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, it is requested that donations be made to the First Parish Meeting House, Cohasset Common.

Choral Arts Society begins 26th year

After a year of celebrating its first quarter century, the Choral Art Society began its 26th season with over 60 members returning for the first rehearsal recently at the Scituate Public Library.

James McLeod-Warrick of Scituate, the Society's new chairman of the Board of Directors, introduced William C. Sano, returning as Music Director for his fifth year, and Jill Crafts, Cohasset, the accompanist, who is returning for her third year with the Society.

Sano said the program for the Christmas concert will be held Saturday evening, Dec. 3, at St. Luke's Church in Scituate.

The concert will include music by Purcell, Buxtehude, Berlioz, Mendelssohn, and will feature Saint-Sains' "Christmas Oratorio."

This program is supported, in part, by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council.

The Choral Art Society is beginning its annual fund drive, with Patricia Goin of Duxbury directing fund-raising from patrons and sponsors, and Henry Dunbar of Brant Rock is in charge of program advertising.

Other officers and members of the board of directors are Peter Keim, Cohasset; Gail Webster, Barbara Handy, Carol Miles and Judith Whittemore, Scituate; Paula Clough and Kurt Schneider, Marshfield; and Alice Humez, Brant Rock. "Non-singing" members are Pamela Wolfe, Norwell; Dorothy Bales, Weston; and Susan Bennett Bitzas, Leicester, formerly of Green Harbor.

The Choral Art Society attracts members and supporters from the entire South Shore region, and its performances have received many favorable reviews from Folio, the South Shore's monthly arts publication.

For further information call Diana Rousseau, 383-0872; Nancy White, 383-1411; Peter Keim, 383-1026; or Mr. Sano in Swampscott, 581-7937.

WHAT FIRE PREVENTION MEANS

Last week was Fire Prevention Week, observed to remind everyone of the terrible destructiveness of fire, and the importance of its prevention.

Fire Dept. Captain Mark Trask visited Mr. Deakin's sixth grade health classes Oct. 14 to talk about fire and safety. Capt. Trask is working with Health Education Coordinator Mike Gill and Deakin on a fire prevention project for students in grades Kindergarten through 12.

Students are invited to create a poster titled, "What Fire Prevention Means to Me," and hand it into their teachers or the Fire Dept. on or before November 1. Entries will be reviewed and outstanding efforts in each grade will receive a prize and will be published in the Mariner. Prizes include $50 savings bonds and smoke detectors donated by local banks and businesses.

FINE ARTS MUSEUM TRIP

As a follow-up of the "Great American paintings" exhibited in the corridors of CHS, the Art Major class visited the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston Oct. 18 to view the current exhibit of outstanding "Masterpieces of American Paintings." This exhibit offered the students a new appreciation of the importance of American art from the years 1760-1910. Some of the artists viewed were Copley, Bingham, Codle, Cassatt, Whistler, Homer, Eakins and Sargent. The students were guided through the exhibit by the explanatory recorded tour earphones.

PEN PAL

Grade 7 students in Geography will again be able to write to a penfriend in Asia or Africa. This program, which has been ongoing for 20 years, is organized by the Afro-Asian Center in Saugerties, New York.

The Afro-Asian Pen Pal Center "offers teachers and students an interesting and unique approach to the study of Africa and Asia by arranging a personal penfriend relationship between students of corresponding grade levels. This pen pal arrangement augments any approach used in class because it stimulates interest in the lands and peoples in direct real life contact."

FICTION/POETRY WORKSHOP

Here are some samples of the work being produced in Mrs. Wood's English elective, Fiction/Poetry Workshop.

Haiku by Chris Crowley, grade 11

Currents of the night
Whirling in front of my mind
Whisper of secrets

Fall by Peter Hobson, grade 11

Mornings getting colder
Nights getting clearer
Trees looking older
Winter's getting nearer.

Eric Karcher, grade 11

He sees the writing on the wall;
He's heard the ranks, one and all;
but still be comes to school every day.

He goes to class, and get all A's,
But when he goes home, sits in a daze, wondering if life will get worse
along the way.

JR. HIGH MAGAZINE DRIVE

Thank you to parents, students and the community for their support of the grade 7-8 magazine drive. Proceeds of the successful drive will support class activities which take place principally during their senior year. Fifty-five percent of the students participated.

U.S. SENATE YOUTH PROGRAM

Social Studies Dept. Chairman Edward Sheehan reports that four students recently took the qualifying exam for participation in the U.S. Senate Youth Program.

Those who took the test at the Southeast Regional Education Center in Lakeville were John Replogle (Pres. of the Student Council), Jackie Plante (Vice Pres. of the Student Council), Kurt Hochkeppel, (Secretary of the Student Council) and Jim Rooney (Treasurer of the Senior Class).

Sheehan is the local administrator of the program. Only currently elected high school juniors and seniors who are student body offficers are eligible to take the exam. Two students from every state in the country are chosen to spend a week in Washington, D.C. (all expenses paid) and receive a $2,000 college scholarsip.

The first stage of the selection process is the qualifying exam. The top scorers on the exam are then interviewed in Boston and choose an essay topic on which to write. Finally, two delegates and two alternates are chosen to represent Massachusetts.

According to the directors of the 22-year old program, the purpose of the contest is to "show students, first hand, how our national government works."

COMPUTER CLUB NEWS

The CHS Computer Club meets Wednesday afternoons. Contests are held at CHS through the Math Dept.'s affiliation with the following organizations: New England Math League - high school and junior high; Olympian Math Contest; American Computer Science League - senior and junior division; and Continental Math League - Grade 7, Grade 8 and Junior High Computer.

The Math Dept. is looking for volunteers to staff the computer room from 2:45 to 4 p.m., and color tv's for the Osgood School.

There are 10 students studying Advanced Placement Pascal Language; 56 students studying Computer Science; and 32 taking Computer Literacy.

Davis was selected by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges to participate in the evaluation of Newburyport High School Oct. 30-Nov.2.

Kearin Dunn and Paul Hogan are studying computer programming through the Plymouth County Association.

For more information on the Computer Club or other activities of the Math Dept., contact Charles Davis.

COMMUNITY HEALTH EDUCATION COMM.

The Community Health Education Advisory Committee has openings for a limited number of new members. This committee is the advisory committee to the comprehensive health education program in the schools. Health education involves students in Kindergarten through grade 12. Some subjects covered include nutrition, safety, CPR, drug and alcohol ed., dental health, emotional health, human sexuality, marriage and family living.

The Health Ed. Dept. sponsors special health seminars for students and adults on such topics as smoking, drugs and alcohol, child abuse, cancer early-detection techniques and anti-drinking/driving programs.

Currently, Health Ed. Coordinator Michael Gill is implementing the new Marriage and Family Living course for 12th grade students. A school-wide workshop is planned for November for all teachers to help them understand and meet the needs of children with divorced or separated families.

The Health Education Advisory Committee will spend the year working closely on new programs and reviewing curriculum for health education. They will also develop some support services or follow-up to the forum on teenage alcohol problems in the community.

Members meet approximately once a month in the evening. They review resources, programs and materials relating to the overall health education program. Volunteers should be committed to attending meetings and be willing to help with special programs and activities.

If you are interested, call Nancy Clapp, 383-0987; Carol Sandbolm, 383-1812; the Superintendent's office, 383-6111; or Michael Gill, 383-6107. Calls should be made by Oct. 24.

FINE ARTS PROGRAMS

Students should not overlook the opportunity to participate in the Fine Arts programs to the jr./sr. high. These programs offer students the chance to explore and develop other facets of living that satisfy "other needs," such as the ability to be a creative and expressive person, visibly, graphically and vocally.

Parents should assist the schools in providing their children with a well-balanced education by course selection from the following: Art, Photography, Foods of the World, Child Study, Mechanical Drawing, Guitar, Chorus, Electronic Music, Band, Jazz Ensemble, Music Horizons, and/or Woodworking.

COUNSELOR ASSIGNMENTS

Students will continue to be assigned to guidance counselors on an alphabetical basis. By arranging assignments in this manner, a counselor will be able to develop a relationship with the students and their families over a six year period.

Last names which fall alphabetically between A and F are assigned to Miss Babaian; G through O, Mrs. Porter and P through Z, Mr. leary.

If students wish to change their counselor assignments, they should see the counselor to whom they want to be reassigned for approval. Changes are discouraged after grade 10.

ENGINEERING SCHOLARSHIP

The National Society of Professional Engineers offers scholarships each year to qualified students who are planning a career in engineering. Students are selected on the basis of school grades, SAT scores, participation in school activities and a required essay.

Interested seniors may get an application form from the Guidance Dept.

COLLEGE VISITORS

The following college admissions counselors will visit CHS during October. Juniors and seniors should sign up in advance in the Guidance Office for appointments.

Tuesday, Oct. 25: 10 a.m., Chatham College; 11:30 a.m., Laboure School; 11:45 a.m., St. Anselm's College; Wednesday, Oct. 26: 10 a.m., Notre Dame Univ./New Hampshire; 11:30 a.m., Framingham State College; Thursday, Oct. 27: 8 a.m., Dartmouth College; 9:30 a.m., Massasoit Community College; 11 a.m., Wentworth Institute of Technology; Friday, Oct. 28: 9:30 a.m., Emmaneul College; 11 a.m., St. Michael's College/Vermont and 11:45 a.m., Macalester College; Monday, Oct. 31: 9:15 a.m, Carleton State College and 11:30 a.m., Stonehill College.

AMERICAN BALLET

A field trip to a performance of the American Ballet Theatre, which will be at the Wang Center Jan. 31 to Feb. 4, is being organized by Enrichment Teacher Dorothy Wondolowski. Students in grades 7-12 who are interested in attending, should submit their names to Wondolowski's mailbox; Deer Hill students should let their homeroom teachers know.

BOSTON SYMPHONY YOUTH CONCERTS

Students interested in attending the two-concert series, Thursday, Dec. 1 and Thursday, Feb. 9, should also contact Dorothy Wondolowski, or music teachers Mr. Marks or Mr. Dodge. The cost for both is $9.

PSO CALENDARS

Every household with a school student has received the PSO calendar.

The PSO provided the school calendar for the second year to inform parents, teachers, community leaders and others of school events.

The PSO asks that parents put something into the envelope that came with the calendar and mail it today to the PSO . . . they need your help, not only to pay for the calendar, but to help them provide solid, substantive support, advice and communications for Cohasset's school children, parents and teachers.

Please support your PSO - contributions are tax-deductible.

Annual Village Fair planned for Dec. 3

The holidays may still seem far away, but scores of workers for Cohasset's Annual Village Fair are already busy crafting the hundreds of gift items which will fill Town Hall and other buildings around Cohasset Common when the Fair is staged for the 43rd time Saturday, Dec. 3.

The Village Fair, which yearly turns the Common area into a giant benefit bazaar, is believed to be unique among church fundraisers, with five denominations, joining hands and hearts in working together.

Linked in the unusual common effort are St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, First Parish Unitarian, Greek Panagia and Second Congregational Churches.

Leadership of the Fair organization is on a rotating basis among the five groups and this year St. Stephen's is providing the top management. Ayn DuVoisin and Beca Lamb share leadership as Co-General Chairmen while Sue Mullett and Bill Broe, also of St. Stephen's, are secretary and treasurer respectively.

Each of the five churches provides representatives on the Central Committee and takes on responsibility for several segments and activities for the Fair. Representatives this year are as follows: St. Anthony's, Kathy Brennock and Angie Kelly with Denise Desmond as adviser; Greek Panagia, Jean Syrmopoulos and Barb Kiriakos; Unitarian, Jean Burgess and Judy Volungis; Congregational, Carol Sandblom and Marilyn Fessler; and St. Stephen's, Jean Broe and Betty Madden.

Invitations are out to all interested to join one of the workshops which are scheduled:

Boutique, Marsha Silvia, chairman. Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. and Thursdays at 9:15, at the Second Congregational Church. They are decorating with grapevines and pine cones.

Children's Table, Corrine Leung, chairman. Thursdays at 9:15 a.m. in the Desmond Conference Room, St. Anthony's Church.

Wreaths, Jean Manganaro, chairman. Beginning Nov. 2 and each Wednesday thereafter at 211 Fair Oaks Lane, 10 a.m. to noon to make bows and other decorations. Meantime gather acorns, pods, nuts, rose hips, pine cones, etc. and deliver to Jean Manganaro's barn, 67 No. Main St.

Firefighter grievances

Selectmen did not publicy release a decision regarding two firefighter grievances heard last week. The decision was sent to the firefighters' union and was termed by Executive Secretary Mark Lanzas as "executive session material. It's up to the union to release the information." Selectmen heard the two grievances in executive session after a request by the union.

One grievances concerned Fire Chief Martin Dooley's denial of Linwood Davis's request to switch shifts with another firefighter to attend town meeting. Dooley said the reason also included playing golf that day. He added Davis attended town meeting as a E.M.T. on duty.

The second grievance concerns two new firefighters Peter Trask and Robert Protulis. The union alleges they have been working 40-hour weeks while the rest of the department is working a 42-hour week. Dooley said the men are working longer because of their extra training duties.

Studds welcomed home with applause

By Melanie Mars

"I haven't read a poll since 1973," said Congressman Gerry E. Studds at a public forum at the Cohasset Town Hall Saturday.

Studds was asked his reaction to Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Y. Flynn's recent public opinion poll which asked of 600 registered voters their opinions in the 10th Congressional District.

The poll concluded a third of those surveyed would not vote for Studds.

Approximately 100 Cohasset residents attended the forum, several sporting Studds buttons and applauding a suggestion for Studds to run for re-election.

However Studds disclaimed any early campaigning and said he will discontinue any town forums 60 days before an election.

Among the topics discussed by Studds were former Interior Secretary James Watts' resignation, the deployment of Pershing Missiles in Western Europe, Central America, acid rain, the President's Commission on Hunger and the deployment of troops in Lebanon.

"I voted against the resolution to empower the War Powers Act (1973)," said Studds. "I see no justification for giving an essentially 18-month blank check to the president."

The deployment of troops in Lebanon was at the request of the government, to enable that country to broaden its base and bring a semblance of tranquility to it.

However, the situation in Lebanon is so volatile "to say to the President 'here are the Marines Mr. President, call us back in 1985' is an abdication of our constitutional responsibility," said Studds.

Studds also spoke about the Third Harbor Tunnel, AT&T, and student aid linked to registering with the Selective Service.

"The penalties are already stiff for not registering," said Studds. "It is a felony with a stiff fine and a jail sentence." Studds said he did not vote for the measure linking student aid with Selective Service.

Studds said that divestiture of AT&T is a fait accompli.

"There is legislation in the House dealing with the

Dooley changes training procedures

By Mike Berger

Fire Chief Martin Dooley is changing the in-house training procedures of new firefighters to a formal, month long training program, courtesy of the Boston Fire Dept.

The chief acknowledged he has never seen or been told of the training manual used by the former training officer Capt. Roger Lincoln.

Lincoln, said firefighters, would train each new firefighter. He refused to continue at that position when Dooley became chief. Lincoln commands two night and day shifts.

Dooley said he is interested in the Boston Fire Academy because it will cost the town very little in expenses and because the academy has better facilities to train new firefighters.

Dooley still plans to use the state Dept. of Public Works facility on Rte 3A for ladder and open burning drills. But because of the lack of a sufficient water supply and the salt content of the DPW sheds, continued pumping would cause damage to the fire trucks.

Dooley considered the Massachusetts Fire Academy in Shrewsbury but said a $400 cost per man, travel expenses to Shrewsbury (20 cents per mile) and the six-week program are prohibitive costs.

The Boston Fire Academy is located on Moon Island in Quincy and will cost the Fire Dept. mileage for the two new firefighters, Robert Protulis and Peter Trask.

The program, used by the Boston Fire Dept., was offered as a professional courtesy by Boston Fire Commissioner George Paul. In return Protulis and Trask will help assist the E.M.T (Emerency Trained Technicians) training there.

Trask and Protulis will be trained in basic training procedures, ladder work, hydraulics and pumping.

Completion of the program will mean Trask and Protulis will be assigned to two separate regular EMT shifts.

Trask and Protulis are both certified EMTs'

Protulis served three years on the call force and formerly worked for the Water Dept. Dooley said he is familiar with the town's water system, streets, and hydrant locations.

Trask also served at least two years on the call force and has a limited knowledge of computers. Dooley hopes when the department receives a computer, Trask will be able to operate it.

Both men have trained in the Fire Dept. since August. They have learned about the operation of the fire alarm office, radio communications and have trained with Fire Capt. James Lee Gurry, EMT coordinator.

Dooley hopes to send all men to a regular training program whether its the Boston Fire Academy or the Massachusetts Fire Academy. But that decision depends on personnel allowances.

"Our profession is life safety and training is a mandatory part of that existence. Techniques are changing constantly. In addition, Back to Basics never hurt," said Dooley.

Training is also an essential part of the 22-member call force. A Mass. Firefighter Academy instructor has already come to the fire station recently to offer a course in firefighter safety and ladder work. A second weekend is planned for tools, ventiliation, hose work, salvaging and overhauling.

The full-time firefighters are invited to the weekend courses but the courses are not mandatory. Dooley said they are voluntary because he does not have the money to pay overtime.

Dooley said Capt. Gurry has already started a training manual for callmen on an inventory breakdown of EMT apparatus. Dooley plans to write a formal department manual with the cooperation of the four captains.

A conversation with Harold Litchfield

By Cindi Bondi

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield starts at the Highway Dept. building at 7 a.m. but he always answers the late night and early mornings call for help.

He inspects all new subdivisions from initial ground breaking to the resurfacing. He also attends meetings at the State District Office in Taunton to ensure Cohasset projects are approved.

Harold knows all phases of the Highway Dept. because he worked as a laborer-truckdriver, a heavy equipment operator and a highway surveyor, for the last six years.

As a Cohasset natiave, Harold has always worked for the Cohasset Highway Dept. Pat, his wife, moved to Cohasset when and Harry were married 29 years ago.

"I conside myself a Cohassitite. When we ran 'The Coffee Shop' for four years I really got to know a lot of people here," said Pat "I really didn't miss Quincy, I like the town atmosphere."

Harold and Pat have two daughters. Peggy is a senior at Cohasset High and Julie is a sophomore.

Because Harold grew up in Cohasset he knows the streets and the residents well.

After 23 years at the Highway Dept. and six as a surveyor, Litchfield knows the job inside out. The especially dangerous roads like Jerusalem, Hillside, Sohier St. and Pond St. are sanded twice during a

Area elementary enrollment examined

Recently, area schools have been hit with larger than expected elementary grade enrollments.

Since all school committees will be examining school enrollments and the impact to school budgets, the Mariner researched area school enrollments.

Here is a comparison of area elementary school average class sizes and enrollments of Cohaset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate.

These statistics are graphed with total enrollment declines.

Area school superintendents were kind enough to share these statistics and philosophies. Some School Depts. gave whole number enrollments and others gave decimal figures.

In Scituate, the sixth grade is now part of the junior high grade reorganization plan and enrollment figures were not used.

Added to the average class size in Scituate was .5 pupil because Scituate has 21 ungraded special needs students and five students in bi-lingual classes not included in the K-5 system.

The graph shows the largest class size is Hull Grade 3 with 28 followed by Norwell's Grade 6 with 27.5 and Cohasset's Grade 3 with 27 pupils.

The largest percent decline in students over the previous year was Hull with 5.9 percent and the smallest was Marshfield with 2.5 percent.

Recently in Cohasset, the School Committee and school superintendent discussed the problem of the Grade 3 average of 27 pupils per teacher with parents.

The parents suggested hiring another teacher but School Supt. Eugene Crowell recommended hiring an instructional aide and his recommendation carried.

In Whitman where two kindergarten classes had 31 students and third grade classes avaraged 29 students, the School Committee there voted to hire four teaching aides.

In Cohasset, Osgood School Principal John Cream said Grade 3 has been moved to the former Grade 1 wing where the classrooms all have larger square foot areas.

Portions of Cedar St. closed

John Lanata, of C & L Realty, received selectmen's approval to temporarily close the part of Cedar Street that runs from North Main Street to the access road of the Cedar Street Landfill so that Cedar St. can be paved.

The Cedar Street access road will be closed from October 17 through December 17. Traffic will be rerouted.

The temporary street closing is granted under the following conditions: 1) Signs will be posted on both ends of the portion of the street closed, warning motorists that the road is closed. 2) An emergency access route be kept open at all times for public safety vehicles and Cedar Street residents. 3) Trenches will be covered and safe lighing will be provided in the work area.

4) All machinery will be kept off the road evenings and weekends. 5) A detailed police officer be hired at times by the Police Chief. 6) Detour signs shall be provided and posted in accordance with the specifications of the Police Chief and the Highway Surveyor.

To gain entrance to the landfill, motorists should detour to Hull Street, travel to Cedar Street from the Hingham side. The roadway will only be open to members of the Cohasset Tennis Club and street residents.

Eliopoulos elected to board

Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos was recently elected to the Executive Board of the Massachusetts Health Officers Association. This organization helps promote public health issues throughout the state.

The agency facilitates the establishment of closer relations among the official health agencies in Massachusetts and encourages the exchange of experience among health administrators.

The organization compiles information on recent trends in public health as well as newly adopted regulations/statutes and disseminates this information to Boards of Health so the board members efficiently perform their required duties.

Recycling required

Recycling newspapers is a requirement, according to the Board of Health.

Newspapers must not be disposed of in the red containers.

The recycling of newspapers saves money in two ways: first, the town receives payment based on the number of tons of papers recycled; secondly, if the newspapers are recycled, valuable space is saved in the landfill operating area.

This will lead to an increased lifespanof the Cedar Street site. Outside contracting for refuse disposal will create an enormous financial burden on the townspeople.

Please recycle newspaper. Glass (green, brown, and white) and aluminum also can be recycled for further saving space and money.

The board's Recycling Monitor works part time at the center and can answer questions and help residents to unload recyclable goods.

The board also is asking citizens to make every effort to utilize early weekday mornings for trash disposal. The volume of weekend traffic at the landfill creates a problem to the landfill employees. They sometimes are unable to adequately deal with the amount of trash disposed of on weekends.

The site is open 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Please try to make trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays as these are generally slow days.

Remember Daylight Savings

We change our clocks to Daylight Savings Time this weekend. Remember spring ahead, fall back.

So switch timepieces back one hour when retiring Saturday night. Sunday morning you'll be out of step with the East Coast if you show up for 10 a.m. church services at 11 a.m. when it's really only 9.

Back, back, one hour, Sunday at 2 a.m.

A benefit was recently held at the VFW on Rte. 3A for the Stover family. Attending were David Stover, daughters Bonnie and Teri, and husband Dave. (Rose Cundari photo)

Board reviews ambulance service

By Bill Hayward

The Cohasset Ambulance Study Committee has begun the task of evaluating the cost and efficiency of the Fire Department's ambulance service.

The committee will also study private ambulance services to determine whether it would benefit the town to replace or supplement the Fire Department's ambulance service with a private service.

Sunday night, Capt., Mark Trask of the Cohasset Fire Department showed the committee the department's ambulance, which is kept in top condition and very well equipped.

Another ambulance which is shared by the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Norwell was also displayed.

The committee also reviewed the qualifications of Cohasset fire fighters and found 15 of the men are Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT) who are qualified to go on ambulance calls.

The committee is concerned with the amount of overtime pay received by firefighters when the ambulance is in use. In cases where both the ambulance and one fire truck are out and committed to an emergency, a "Box Three" alarm is sounded which calls three off duty firefighters back to the station to man another truck if necessary.

These three men receive overtime pay. By comparing the ambulance record and the fire truck's log book, the committee will learn how frequently "Box Three" alarms occur and the amount of overtime being paid out.

Several nearby towns, such as Weymouth, Braintree, Plymouth and Quincy have adopted private ambulance services, but these towns are all larger than Cohasset, which makes comparisons with Cohasset difficult.

However, next week, Marshfield, which is closer in size to Cohasset, will begin a one year trial using a private ambulance service.

Serving on the Ambulance Study Committee are Capt. Mark Trask of the Fire Department, Roy Fitzimmons, Pamela Maclean Johansen and Arne Gjesteby.

Currently there is one vacancy on the committee. The committee's final recommendation is due February 15, with an interim report sheduled for Dec. 15.

A conversation with Harold Litchfield...

storm.

On snowy winter mornings the department workers start before dawn to make sure the roads are sanded by the time people go to work.

He recently made sure that the automatic sanders are painted and ready to use. "You never know when to expect snow," he said.

The department also maintains five four wheel drive trucks, to plow private ways, three sand spreaders and several loaders, to remove snow.

Someone has to be on call on Sunday's and holidays. Harold still takes calls at home. "I'll bet he has not taken two full weeks of vacation in six years," said Pat.

She also dedicates much of her time to the office. Pat does all the bookkeeping and all other office work as a volunteer.

Five men help the town of Cohasset through emergencies on the road. Foreman Anthony Sestito has worked for the highway department for 14 years. Dale Sestito, James Curley, Thomas Hernan and Brian Cogill are the other dependables in the Highway Department.

Sandbagging flooded driveways or salting and sanding roads describes one aspect of the department work. Every year the town allots $50,000 to resurface most needed areas and to complete other projects. Last year, the state aided with $21,059.

Over the past year, the department resurfaced Beechwood St., Church St. and Beach St. Putting in a 25 foot 21 inch concrete pipe under Doane and Beechwood streets was a major accomplishment.

Currently the department is working to upgrade the Mill Bridge on Border St.

Replacing street signs ties up the department's time and money. In one weekend four signs were stolen. Two dozen are stolen every year. Harold said he dreads Halloween because many signs are painted.

It costs $75 to replace a sign and $35 to repaint one. Harold purchased a vandal resistant sign kit which has worked well on 80 per cent of the signs.

His job is to oversee work on: signs, fences, maintenance on all roads (including private ways), street drains, snow and ice problems.

The Perfumer's Collection

The old adage "Imitation is the highest form of flattery" is best applied to perfumes.

The Perfumer's Collection is our compliment to some very famous fragrances.

Perfumes have been treasured for centuries. Kings and queens have been held hostage for a ransom of a few ounces of these mysterious scents.

Our perfumers have blended hundreds of the same exotic oil, spices, florals, gums and resins into their interpretation of these elegant perfumes. The creations in the Perfumer's Collection are so faithful that the most sophisticated customer cannot find a difference. The significant difference is in your cost.

Let us prove it - order your favorites at once.

Travelers to the islands of Hawaii are getting an extra benefit these days with the eruptions of Kilauea at Hawaii Volcanoes National Park. A reservation at Volcano House offers you one of the great treats of the Pacific, the opportunity to wake up in a room overlooking the display of dawn fog and light over awesome Kilauea Crater. The uncrowded park offers solitary crafer-rim walks for unequalled views of Kilauea's landscape. One trail even leads to an overlook at Halemaumau, the firepit said to be the home of Pele, Hawaii's fire goddess. At night, cool off by sipping a cocktail beside a volcano house fireplace.

Comments from Studds in his weekly letter to residents

U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds included the following comments with his weekly letter to District 10 residents.

Q.: When is a secret not a secret?

A.: When the government spends a million dollars on it.

Sometimes the federal government sets up procedures to help people get constructive answers to specific questions. And sometimes the government establishes such a program, only to then keep it carefully hidden from those who could benefit most from it.

I was very pleased recently to note a $1 million Department of Energy initiative to offer a free nationwide telephone service to answer questions about conservation techniques and the entire range of renewable energy technologies — everything from solar to hydroelectric to bio-conversion. Individuals who call the toll-free number can expect to receive a written response within a few days, frequently accompanied by a free, high-quality, technical publication or a referral to the organization most knowledgeable in the subject area.

I was, however, less pleased to then learn that the Reagan Administration has forbidden the Energy Department to publicize this telephone number. Although funded by its own agency — and obviously designed to inform consumers of the very latest scientific developments in the energy field — this service has remained more or less a secret since its inception in 1981.

This kind of myopic policy not only squanders tax dollars but also slows our nations' progress toward energy independence. It is my hope that the public can be made aware of this fine service, so that people can put new scientific advances in their own homes.

To that end — and in the hope that 10th District residents will feel free to use it — the service is known as the Conservation and Renewable Energy Inquiry and Referral Service, or CAREIRS. Its toll-free number for Massachusetts residents is: (800) 523-2929.

On a related subject, I would like to draw attention to another new publication, entitled "Drying Wood With the Sun," which may be of particular interest to New Englanders who use wood for fuel. This handsome booklet details various methods, complete with easy-to-read building specifications, to efficiently store and use firewood. Free copies of this publication — and other such publications produced by the National Center for Appropriate Technology, located in Montana — are available on a first-come, first-served basis through the Massachusetts State Energy Office by calling (800) 632-8026, or by writing to the Executive Office of Energy Resources, Fifteenth Floor, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston 02202. If these limited supplies are exhausted, additional copies will be available at a slight charge.

Studds welcomed home...

consequences of it. For some the telephone is a necesity and there is a lot of concern as to what will happen to the rates of the elderly and those who live in rural areas."

Studds does not feel that the question of funding for a Third Harbor Tunnel would come through Congress.

However Studds said he also has an intense interest in cutting down his driving time in the tunnel. He said, "Presupposing there would not be a disruption in service due to construction; I know of no other argument against it other than the niggardly disinclination of the Federal Government to give us another billion or two."

The meeting was the 17th held in Cohasset during Studds' 11 years in office and the third in a series of six held over the Oct. 22-23 weekend throughout the 10th District, which covers Hingham to Cape Cod, the Islands and New Bedford.

Community Center news

The Cohasset Community Center offers several workshops through November to challenge creativity.

Call 383-0088 weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., to register for the workshops. Pre-registration is required.

The Center kitchen may never be the same after Tuesday, Nov. 1 when Carol Walls and Anna Abbruzzese teach Pizza for Children.

From 3:30 to 5 p.m. youths will create their own pizza pie, and will probably eagerly consume the results. The fee is $3.

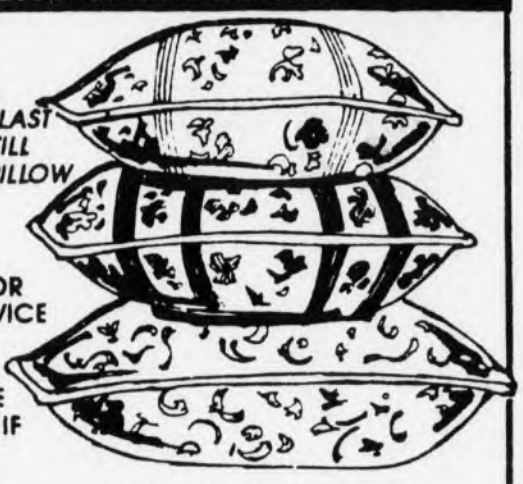
Donna Kelly conducts a basket workshop Wednesdays, Nov. 2 and 9 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The cost is $16 with materials included.

Later in the month, Donna will lead a Garden Basket Workshop. This is a functional flat reed, rectangular shallow basket. Sessions will meet Wednesdays, Nov. 30 and Dec. 7 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The cost is $16 and includes materials.

Marilyn Adams' Pinata Workshops for Children was a success last spring. She will repeat that three-session series for adults. This craft combines papier-mache, painting, and crepe paper collage techniques, culminating in a completed Pinata.



Adult sessions are held Wednesdays Nov. 9, 16 and Nov. 30 from 8 to 9 p.m. The cost is $7. Children's classes will be held Monday, Nov. 7 from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. The cost is $7.

Life saving techniques are taught in CPR, by certified instructors Linda Farrog, R.N. and Dr. Michael Equi. Emergency resuscitation for cardiac and respiratory arrest, as well as procedures to alleviate choking. This eight hour course will be held Wednesday evenings, Nov. 9 and Nov. 16, from 7 to 11 p.m. The cost is $7.

Area enrollment outlook...

In Hull and Cohasset, all the students in a grade are housed in the same schoo! building rather than "neighborhood schools."

However in Hingham there are neighborhood elementary schools and a few parents at the South Elementary School have questioned the size of two sixth grade classes with 27 and 29 students.

Norwell Supt. Robert Bunnell and Hull Supt. Richard Charlton feel the issue of different class sizes is more difficult in neighborhood schools.

"Redistricting is very complicated although we did it about five years ago," said Bunnell.

"Fortunately we no longer have neighborhood schools," said Charlton at a recent school board meeting.

Hingham School Supt. Lewis Ernst said he does not feel there are automatically more discipline problems with larger class sizes. In general, he said, the pupil-teacher ratio in Hingham has dropped over the last six years.

"We have one class of 29 students but we have one of 15 students," he said.

Marshfield Supt. Daniel Bresnahan said since school started no additional staffing has been necessary. Four additional kindergarten aides were already budgeted.

Norwell Supt. Bunnell says his committee has a policy that he must bring to the board's attention any class of 30 or more students.

In the Sparrell School, he said, it might not be possible to add another teacher in a classroom because all the rooms are occupied.

Bunnell also has to let the school board know of any class with ten or fewer students, including high school classes.

"In practice I let them know of classes of 15 or less. My school committee does not like surprises."

The smallest class size average at Hull High School in the major subject areas is Foreign Language with an average of 15 students.

The Hull School Committee will soon discuss a Grade 3 class size of 28 students.

School Supt. Charlton suggested two alternatives. The first and the least disruptive is to hire aides. The second is to create a combination class with 10 upper level second graders and 10 lower level third graders who will be promoted to third and fourth grades respectively.

A third alternative mentioned, by one school board member, is to transfer a second grade teacher since that is the grade with an average class size of 21 students.

Scituate School Sutpt. John Kulevich refused to release any high school statistics until he presents them to the Scituate School Committe in mid-November.

Electives

Bunnell said Norwell stopped teaching German two years ago because of small class sizes but the system retained Latin, French and Spanish.

Like Cohasset, Norwell also stopped offering a great assortment of electives. "We used to offer both junior and senior class electives. Now we only offer senior class electives," Bunnell said.

Enrollment on the rise

The issue of decreasing enrollments may soon cease. The state Dept. of Education recently issued a bulletin saying public school enrollment will begin to increase in the next few years, reversing a decade of decline.

Births have increased in the state since 1977.

Although K-12 totals enrollments are expected to fall through the 1986-87 school year last years's Kindergarten enrollments statewide increased from 56,908 in 1981 to 57,404 in the fall of 1982.

State Education Commissioner John Lawson recently said by 1985 the impact should be large enough so the entire K-6 grade cluster will begin to climb.

"Nationally, it is expected the overall enrollment decline will bottom out by 1985-86," Lawson said.

Disability talk

The PSO Special Needs Committee will present Dr. Jean Mooney, administrator of the masters' program on Special Needs at Boston College. She will speak about "Learning Disability: Is it for Life?" Wednesday, Nov. 2 in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Coffee will be served at 7 p.m. and the program will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Be cautious on Halloween

Halloween trick or treaters would be bright to add white to their costumes, the ALA Auto and Travel Club advised recently.

"Youngsters wearing dark Halloween costumes present a danger to motorists, particularly on dark side streets," David Thibodeau, ALA president, said.

"By adding a little white to their getups, perhaps some reflective tape or a pillow case, the youngsters would be more visible and safer," Thibodeau said.

"If possible," he added, "the little trick or treaters should carry a flashlight. They'll be able to see their way more clearly and motorists will be able to see them."

The ALA official also urged parents to warn their youngsters not to dart back and forth across streets.

"Tell them to trick or treat on one side of a street at a time, then cross the street at a corner, after stopping and making sure it's safe," Thibodeau said.

BE CAUTIOUS

Jordan Hospital vice president of Nursing Maureen Banks Gould recently urged parents throughout the South Shore and Upper Cape to be especially cautious for their children on Halloween.

"The Jordan urges parents to join with us in advocating for the safety of our children this Halloween by taking several safety precautions for area youngsters who will be celebrating Halloween on the streets of our communities," Gould said.

"Safety should alway be a factor when choosing your child's costume," she said. "Avoid fabrics like fake fur or polyester which are not flame proof, and avoid cloth masks or masks that cover the entire head. They may slip and block a child's breathing or vision."

Gould noted the Jordan advises alternatives such as theatrical or over-the-counter make-up to improperly fitting face masks, but added that marking pens should not be used as a substitute for make-up since some brands are permanent.

A clever alternative to potentially dangerous masks entails gluing construction paper to make a mask and attaching it to an old pair of sunglasses (with the dark lenses removed). "This is also a good solution for children who must wear glasses to see adequately, but who also want a mask for their Halloween costume," she said.

"Parents should be sure that costumes are not too long so that children won't trip on them, and should avoid choosing dark costume colors that are difficult for motorists to see," Gould said. "Make sure your child carries a flashlight, and carefully inspect all edibles before your child eats them.

"Motorists should be extremely cautious when driving through residential neighborhoods on Halloween night," she said. "I advise every driver to drive slowly, and to be on guard for excited children who may dart from between parked cars or cross the street without looking."

Gould said that homeowners should ensure that their property is well-lit, and that obstacles like lawn furniture or garbage cans are stored in safe places. She added that pets should be kept indoors.

KIDS MUST SEE AND BE SEEN

Parents outfitting Halloween trick-or-treaters should remember the words "see" and "be seen."

Costumes and masks shouldn't obstruct vision and should be easy for motorists to see, says the Insurance Information Institute in its Halloween Safety Tips for drivers, parents and youngsters.

Nighttime visibility will be especially important this year with Halloween falling on a weekday (Monday, Oct. 31) instead of a weekend.

As if witches and goblins weren't enough, most motorists will be contending with the first weekday of Standard Time along with the switch to driving home from work after dark in many parts of the country.

The Institute reminds drivers that youngsters may be distracted by the Halloween excitement and suggests extra care behind the wheel and slower speeds, especially in residential areas.

Nancy Golonka, the Institute's Director of Consumer Affairs, said, "Parents can guarantee the safety of their children while trick-or-treating by going with them. But if this isn't possible, reflective tapes should be placed on costumes and trick-or-treat bags, and youngsters should be allowed to go out only in groups."

She adds, "Children should be instructed to stay on the sidewalk and to cross streets carefully."

The Institute offers these additional Halloween Safety Tips:

Make sure costumes aren't loose-fitting garments that could cause the child to trip and fall.

Use make up instead of masks, which can obstruct the child's vision.

Make sure all costumes are made of non-flammable material.

Keep lighted jack-o'-lanterns or candles away from children or flammable materials.

Inspect all treats before allowing children to eat them.

☐Gordon Ricketts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ricketts of 39 Hill Street, left Tuesday morning for Grenada aboard the U.S.S. Independence. The Independence is part of a 10-ship U.S. task force that had been headed for duty off Lebanon and was diverted to Grenada as a precautionary measure. Gordon is a mechanic that takes care of the planes on the Independence, an aircraft carrier. The mechanics spent three days and nights readying the planes before they started their journey.

☐Dawn Meehan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Meehan of Howe Road, has won first prize in a coloring contest which was held at the McDonald's in Hanover. Dawn is in Mrs. Fink's class and she says that her art teacher, Mrs. O'Malley, is the one that got her interested in drawing.

☐Walt and Nanci Sweeney left last week, after spending the week in Cohasset. He is truly an inspiration to all, it was wonderful to see him. The Good Morning America show that he appeared on with the First Lady, Nancy Reagan, was so popular many viewers wrote asking that it be shown again at night so that all school-aged children can see it.

Walter reports that it was wonderful to see all of his friends again, mentioning one lady in particular. He was delighted to see long-time fan and family friend, Mary Leavitt. Mary has always kept in touch with Walt and his family, and can tell you about every play that Walter made all during his career. It was a nice reunion.

☐Nancy Walls was elected Homecoming Queen last weekend, much to everyone's delight. Nancy and her King, Peter Caruso, made a handsome couple as they rode around Milliken Field in Pat McCarthy's antique car!

☐There was a nice article in last Sunday's Boston Globe about a "Local boy making good." They were talking about Chris Keating and his outstanding playing on the Buffalo Bills football team. Chris will be in town in a few weeks for a rematch with the Patriots. Watch for No. 52.

☐Gino DiGirolamo reports that he "almost" won the Megabucks again a few weeks ago...hopefully the next time the report will be that he won! Meanwhile, his field hockey team is setting records on its own, with the amount of ties they have scored in the South Shore League.

☐Be sure to remember to watch the Common Sunday, Oct. 30, at 2 p.m. It's annual Halloween Parade time, with Horribles and Beautifuls marching to show off their costumes. There will be a pumpkin contest, too, with many prizes awarded.

☐Cohasset made the news recently, for its recycling paper, glass and aluminum in record amounts. More and more people are going to the town disposal area with their products. In 1982, 200 tons of paper were picked up, crushed glass totaling 60 tons and over one ton of aluminum were collected. All of the efforts of sorting bottles, aluminum and paper are certainly worth your time and efforts!

☐It is nice to see the Reardon household all lit up, with Susie and Tom's three children having a ballgame or riding their bikes in the front yard. They are thoroughly enjoying their new home, and living life in Cohasset.

☐Paco the Clown and cartoons will highlight the beginning of Halloween weekend Friday night at the Town Hall at 7 p.m.

☐This weekend is also reunion weekend for the football teams of Hull and Cohasset. The two teams that played each other 25 years ago will meet with the current teams for a breakfast in Hull before the Varsity game, scheduled at 1:30 in Hull. Any member of the 1958 C.H.S. football team should get in touch with Clark Chatterton for more details. Should be a great day of reminiscing with a great game to follow...don't miss it!

☐The Codman Company, Inc., one of New England's largest full service real estate companies, has added Brian T. Hines, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Robey of Cohasset, to their commercial division. His primary responsibilities will be to expand the company's office brokerage activity in the Rtes. 128 and 495 marketplace.

☐It's time to remind everyone to "keep those cards, letters and phone calls coming," to report events in your household that you would like reported. Saw a lot of college students over the weekend and they said they love reading about fellow classmates. Let your news be known to all, it's fun!

Republican Club concerned about legislative reform

By Cindi Bondi

South Shore Women's Republican Club members showed concern when state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's legislative aide, Nancy O'Toole mentioned legislative reform.

Republican Club members from Norwell, Hanover and Scituate spoke about legislative reform during a recent meeting, at the First Parish Church, in Norwell.

Audience discussion began when O'Toole said, "Mary Jeanette is in the middle of this issue. She feels that if there is no control by the House Speaker, there will be bedlam. However, she has gone against her own beliefs if her constituents let her know that they have an opposing view."

Legislative reform aims to cut legislator leadership salaries which are the highest in the nation. The salaries are up 117% more than rank and file legislators. The Senate President and the House Speaker receive $65,000 per year.

The average Senate President and House Speaker's salaries, in the other 10 largest states are $31,887, according to the Citizens of Limited Taxation(CLT).

Lydia Tilden, of Scituate, said, "Proposition 2½ was a difficult thing to face. But we had to wake people up in our towns. Now it is time to wake up the Legislature."

She added, "Citizens have cut back now it is time for Legislature to cut back, on salaries."

CLT member Phyllis McCullough, of Hanover said, "A coalition of many groups has formed to try and put legislative reform on the ballot in 1984. We need 62,000 registered voters to sign these petitions."

She gave petitions to different town representatives. Lydia Tilden volunteered from Scituate. McCullough needs a Cohasset volunteer. Volunteers can call her at 826-4366.

McCullogh urged volunteers to tell non-partisans (people who are not committed to any group) to petition. The coalition consists of various groups such as the Republican State Committee, Mass Action and Democrats for Rules and Reforms.

Other concerns

O'Toole briefly discussed some of Murray's other concerns. O'Toole said, "Murray's most important item to Republicans is get out the vote but first get out the candidates. Republicans have gained quite a bit nationally and locally."

O'Toole reported that Murray filed tax alternative bills for veterans and tax abatements for 70 years and older citizens.

Murray also believes in the "Right to Know" bill, which requires employers to inform workers of any job health hazards.

O'Toole revealed some possible solutions to the upcoming Southeast Expressway construction. The added commuter boats will lighten the traffic. There may be busses or vans which will take people into the city from parking lots off of the Expressway. This will lessen the number of cars on the road.

O'Toole stressed that Mary Jeanette wants to hear about problems or ideas from her constituents.

"How To Take Slides of Your Artwork," will be held by Paul Fortin, Thursday, Oct. 27 at 7:30 p.m.

The course will discuss "do's and don'ts" of photographing artwork for presentation and a two-hour lecture-demonstration. Bring examples of your slides for discussion.

Advanced registation is required.

The fee is $4 for members, and $6 for non-members.

VIDEO WORKSHOP

Intro to Video is a two-day workshop in video production work. Students will learn to plan, shoot, sound record and assemble a short video piece using portable color cameras and recorders.

The workshop will be held Saturday, Nov. 5 and 12 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The first session will concentrate on equipment use and project planning. Final session will be devoted to editing. Workshop is taught by Dr. John Packard, English teacher and director of audio-visual department, Cohasset Public Schools.

The fee is $35 for members and $40 for non-members. Advanced registration is required.

HOLIDAY WORKSHOP

The Fall and Holiday Workshop will be held Saturday, Oct. 29 from 10 a.m. to noon, by Marion Bush.

This course will create new ideas for wreaths, fall and Christmas gifts, ornaments and house gifts. Basic materials will be available for sale. A $5 fee will be charged. Advanced registration is required.

BARN SALE

The Great Barn Sale and Art Sale will be held Saturday, Oct. 29 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. This is a sale of unclaimed art, lost and found items, children's art and unframed art by Gallery artists.

The unframed art will be in the Center; the remainder of the items will be for sale in the barn.

Art includes paintings, drawings, photos, landscapes, still life and abstracts, in all price categories. This is a fundraiser to benefit the South Shore Art Center.

GREEN GROWS THE MEADOWS
The first phase of The Meadows in Hingham is nearly sold out, so The Green Company has started the final group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes. Five of the six new buildings are on gracefully sloping land so most of these homes have large private decks, rather than courtyards, and walk-out basements with walls of glass which can easily be converted. Many offer lovely distant views across the open fields and woods. The clubhouse, swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and the beautifully furnished models are open, so plan a visit soon — any day between 9 and 5 — and see the landscaping... the flower-strewn meadows... and all the other reasons owners love their new condominium homes at The Meadows. Prices range from about $159,000 to $235,000. Take exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street, one mile to our entrance on the left. Call (617) 740-1500.

Close to home

How desirable it would be, when we sweep the borders of our town, to push away the dust of devastating news that penetrates the small communities of our nation.

But equality is never so apparent in America as it is during a crisis which snuffs the lives of our young men and stifles our cry for their freedom from death.

Beirut, Lebanon ought to be a long way from here. It is not. It is a neighbor whose family members are so disparate and so violent that peace-keepers risk lives in being on their property.

To utter anguished cries of outrage serves as nothing more than emotional release. Violence is a lifestyle in parts of this world. And the times and tensions brought U.S. Marines to the place of their death in a four-story compound on a Sunday morning. It is the more gruesome that their murders were effected by a person who chose to kill himself. Such lack of value on life we simply cannot understand.

In speaking with several spokesmen for the Marines this week we were touched at the catch in their voices when we tried to explain that we had to know if any of our boys were in that compound. We met, the media and the Marines, on common ground of caring, searching in our own ways among the rubble of cruel consequence, for one of our own. And when we spoke, not knowing if it was of stranger or of fellow resident, it was by emotional concensus that we committed to share the grief of any young man from here to Kentucky, from Topeka to Bar Harbor.

We all lost family in Sunday's bombing. We are indeed equal. None of us was spared.

Our resources seem scant in calling up personal power to meet national mourning and ward off international crises. Surely those given to prayer are employing that energy on behalf of the advisers and leaders of this nation.

We mention Beirut here in the Mariner, not because we wish to include it as the town's news this week. We record it because this awful event is part of our week, like it or not. Cohasset men and women pause regretfully with every other American to express sorrow at our loss.

We have lost much more than a few good men.

Negotiations continue

A final agreement has not been signed as of Wednesday morning concerning the Cox Estate. Still in negotiations are attorneys for the Planning Board, Appeals Board, selectmen, Yankee Oil and Gas and Cox Estate abutter Richard Tibbets.

What's in those barrels

Town officials still don't know what's in a dozen steel drums stored behind the fire station. Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said an analysis will be conducted by Briggs Engineering. Some of the drums could contain antifreeze,old motor oil and kerosene. Other barrels are unmarked and the lids are rusted shut. The barrels have been there since Martin Dooley was appointed Fire Chief.

Recalling the 'joys' of Halloween

By Claire McDonough

"I love Halloween," I told the Dragon. "The scent of woodsmoke drfiting through the crisp autumn air, an orange moon hanging on the horizon, childish voices raised in joyful laughter as the little ones travel from house to house in their colorful costumes..."

"Kids coming home and throwing up on the carpet," he interjected, "little ones going into hysterics because they're scared out of their wits; dogs having nervous breakdowns because the doorbell keeps ringing..."

"I'd forgotten those parts," I admitted.

"Eggs splattered against houses," he continued, "trees, their scarlet, russet and golden leaves gaily bedecked with Cottonelle and Charmin..."

"Stop," I told him. "It's all coming back. Remember how we always insisted that the kids bring home their loot before they ate any of it? We'd go through it for foreign objects, wrap it in snack-sized packages, and tell them that it was their dessert for school for the next three months. Then we'd hide it before we went to bed."

"Yeah," he reminisced, "and they'd outwait us. After we went to sleep they'd get up, find the candy, and eat it all that night."

I shuddered. "Remember how the sticky candy would get all over the sofa and the rug in the living room?"

"I don't have to remember it," he said gently. "It's still there."

"Only partly," I sniffed. "And remember," I continued hurriedly, "how sick they used to get? I never could decide whether it was the candy or the late-late horror movies they watched while they were eating it."

"Probably both. And remember how at least one kid always had a cavity? Candy would get stuck in it, and the kid would start screaming."

"I remember," I said. "I never could decide who to run to first — the kid with the toothache or the one who needed the basin."

Skipper entered the conversation. "Remember the time you told me to get my own bucket when I was sick?"

"I certainly do. And I never dreamed you'd get a strainer."

"Remember how someone always smashed our pumpkin in the middle of the street? Thank heaven that's over," the Dragon smiled.

"Yes," I nodded. "One year we even put it on the roof. They got it the first night."

"Right," Patrick said, "and someone always rubbed soap on our windshield, too."

"Well," I sighed, "that's one of the advantages of having grown children. Halloween can consist of the scent of woodsmoke drifting through the crisp autumn air; an orange moon hanging on the horizon; childish voices raised in joyful laughter as the little ones travel from house to house in their colorful costumes."

Breida came in the door. "Our pumpkin is smashed in the street," she announced. "Someone put soap on Dad's windshield; the trees out front have toilet paper all over them, and there are eggs splattered on the driveway."

Larry came in behind her. "Did you know that Flip took a trick-or-treat bag away from some little kid? She ate all the candy, and right now she's throwing up on our front steps."

The Dragon raised his glass of cider. "Happy Halloween," he said.

Marshfield prepares for ambulance service

(The following letter was published in the Marshfield Mariner but its contents are applicable to the Cohasset study. Ed.)

To the Editor:

I am very disappointed as well as surprised that there has been no response from any of our residents to the publicity in the Mariner and other newspapers as far back as June 28th regarding the private ambulance service which will take effect this coming Nov. 1st.

My guess is, and I hope I am wrong, the reason there has been no response about this is that the residents and taxpayers of Marshfield think that this private ambulance service is going to be free, which is absolutely wrong. There is no such thing as free service from private ambulance firms. They are in business just like any other business to make a profit. They are not at all interested in the emergency runs to the nearest hospital. They are primarily concerned with the non-emergency transportation trips to the furthest hospital, nursing homes and V.A. hospitals at a "Base Rate" of $100 to $125, plus $4 to $6 per mile, perhaps more, plus additional charges for oxygen and other extras. For example, presently the Town of Plymouth is locked into a five year contract with a private firm to the tune of $100,000 per year just for the service to the town. In addition, anyone having to use the ambulance is being charged a base rate of $10 plus $5 per mile. Two other

Report from the State House

By Mary Jeanette Murray

The Mass. Arts Lottery Council received the largest distribution of funds since its inception.

The $1.5 million will be provided to 330 local and regional Arts Lottery Councils for grants awards to artists and cultural organizations. I was most appreciative to the council for the ditrubtion of funds for Cohasset, $894, Hingham, $2,812 and Hull, $2,496.

As a result of recent legislation, communities which in the past received minimal funding are now guaranteed at least $500 in each semi-annual distibution.

Through the efforts of dedicated people and the Lottery Commission the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council should be commended for all of their service throughout the Commonwealth.

Local and Regional Arts Lottery Councils are now accepting applications for Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council grants. Interested artists and organizations should contact their local council for information. The next deadline for local councils to submit their approved applications to the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council is Nov. 1.

"RIGHT TO KNOW" LEGISLATION...

Throughout the summer, legislators and administration officials have worked with representatives of labor and industry to hammer out a workable and responsible "Right to Know" bill. Recently the product of these efforts was announced.

The issue of "Right to Know" is a complex one. At its most basic level, it involves a worker's right to know about any toxic or hazardous chemicals in the workplace.

Complexities emerge, however, when one attempts to determine what is a toxic or hazardous chemical; how many substances should be considered in such legislation; how to effectively carry out provisions of a "Right to Know" law; how to protect trade secrets in industry and if, under the provisions of such a law, the location of storage places must be revealed to the public in general, how to prevent theft of such substances.

All of this, and more, was subject to considerable discussion over these past summer months.

Among the several original "Right to Know" bills filed this year, one was part of the Republican Legislative Package. We are pleased to see the kind of cooperation among the various interested parties that enabled this solid compromise to be drafted. Major components of the "Right to Know" bill include:

A requirement to label 2,500 toxic and hazardous chemicals if they are used in Massachusetts workplaces.

The right of workers and community residents to further information on the health and safety risks associated with those substances.

Establishing workable procedures enforced by the Commissioner of Labor to insure employees get prompt access to information on hazardous substances.

Discipline of a worker who exercises a right under this bill is a violation.

Employers must train all workers in non-technical language how to handle all hazardous substances to which they are exposed.

Ensuring that physicians treating sick employees or community residents can get prompt access to information on hazardous substances and use it in providing medical care.

Protecting business against frivolous or harassing claims for information.

Protecting valid trade secrets and exempting qualified research laboratories from coverage.

Avoiding excessive record keeping and other burdensome provisions.

Delineating responsibilities for enforcement among appropriate government agencies and avoiding duplication of existing laws.

Providing for prompt and fair resolution of disputes among employers, employees, community residents and government agencies.

Ambulance...

examples that I must mention are the two most recent occasions that I have had to call upon a private service:

On 10/26/82 I had to be transported from the Jordan Hospital to the Cape Cod Hospital. The round trip bill came to $478, of which I had to pay $95.60 "out-of-pocket" after my insurance paid the rest. On 7/12/83 I had to be taken to the Brockton Veterans Hospital by the same service and the one-way trip bill was $220, of which I had to pay $44 "out-of-pocket." I am not complaining about this for myself but I am very concerned about those who do not have insurance benefits and especially our senior citizens who may have Medicare but in most cases cannot afford the "out-of-pocket" charges. It is bad enough that most of our senior citizens who are existing on very limited income and are more likely to need the ambulance service are striving to pay for their clothing, food and heating costs, but now they are going to be subjected to significant "out-of-pocket" charges for ambulance service.

Personally, I am very much opposed to a private ambulance service for the reasons I have already mentioned and because of some unpleasant experiences I have encountered with them over the past 10 years. But realistically I have to admit that we have no alternative due to the budgetary and manpower cutbacks we are experiencing. Marshfield is very fortunate to have had a most outstanding Police Dept. ambulance service for more than 50 years but unfortunately the time has come for a change. The Police Dept. can no longer continue to provide this service and still maintain adequate police protection, and our Fire Dept. cannot take over this service for the same reasons.

Another concern of mine is what is going to happen to the ambulance that our entire community joined together in 1979 and worked so hard to raise more than $39,000 in order to provide the town with a modern, brand new ambulance. Thanks to our present Board of Selectmen and Town Administrator, they have decided to bring this private service into Marshfield on a "one year trial basis" before any contract is awarded. I am optimistic they they will make a similar wise decision as to what will be done with the "Gift to our Town from the Citizens of Marshfield."

Finally, I have a financial proposal in mind, similar to a "subscriber plan" that exits in Wareham and is working out very well, that hopefully the Board of Selectmen will approve. This plan is designed to eliminate the "out-of-pocket" expense to any resident who has to use the private ambulance service, and is also designed to offset the very expensive contractual expense to the taxpayers of Marshfield. I would like to postpone going into detail about this plan at this time as I would prefer to have some idea as to how many of our residents would be interested in subscribing to this plan. Therefore I would welcome any and all correspondence from the residents of Marshfield regarding this matter. I hope I will be hearing from many, many residents because the more response I receive will make it much easier to implement this plan, which I can assure you will benefit the whole town.

Youth's fingers reattached

Surgeons at Massachusetts General Hospital reattached two fingers on a 15-year old Cohasset youth's hand after a log splitter severed them; Saturday morning.

Reported in good condition was David Stover of 533 Beechwood Street. The youth was brought to the fire station Saturday at 8:50 a.m. EMT's Edward Struzik and Eric Wenzlow administered first aid, packed the middle and ring fingers in ice and transported him to South Shore Hospital where he was stabilized and taken to Mass. General Hospital.

Art Center Video Workshop begins

A "hands on" workshop to introduce people to the fun, versatility and practical techniques of using video equipment comes to the South Shore.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, is taking the lead on the South Shore in offering an intensive two-session Introduction to Video workshop, Saturday, Nov. 5 and 12, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Advanced registration with fee payment is required.

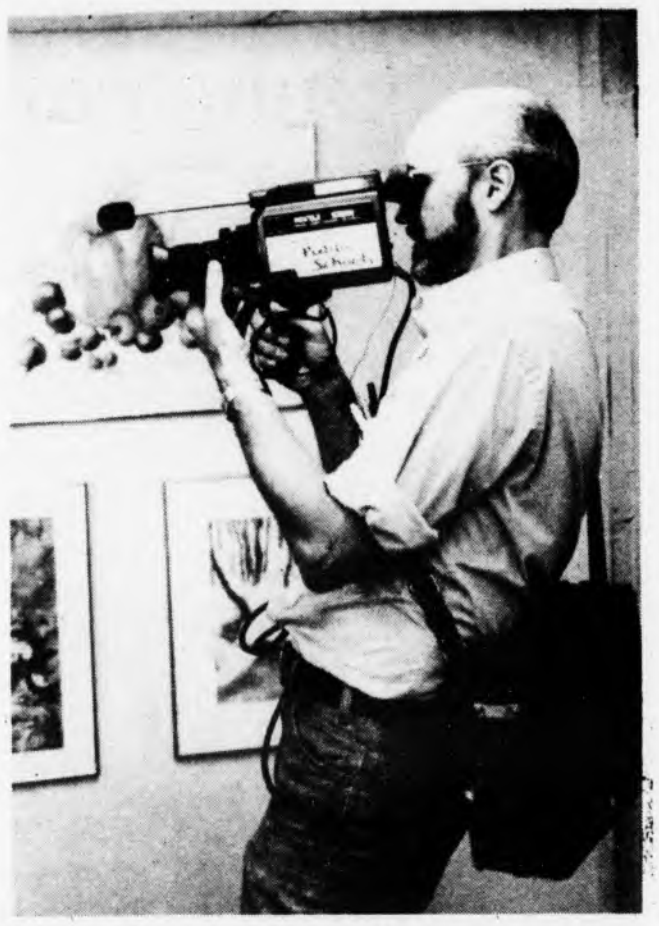
Taught by Dr. John Packard, head of audio visual for the Cohasset Public Schools, the workshop comes at the forefront of cable technology on the South Shore. As many of the towns are about to embark upon cable television technology, the center's workshop offers an opportunity for people to become familiar with video equipment and to try some actual "hands on" production with the cameras.

Cable television allows for production of local programming which is then aired over a local access channel. Dr. Packard sees the center's workshop as a first opportunity for people to be introduced to the whole concept of video production and as a good start to prepare people for the next phase of video training which deals with the use of and programming for a local access channel.

A local access channel allows a community and its organizations unlimited opportunities for producing quality video programs for its viewer audience. The center's workshop is a superb opportunity to try video production work.

Students will learn how to plan, shoot, sound record and assemble a short video piece using portable color cameras and recorders. Dr. Packard will start with the basic of how to pick up and operate equipment, locating the on/off switch, how to focus, care of the equipment and practical tips on other aspects of the equipment. The students will also work on setting goals for producing tapes.

There are three directions students may go in producing a video tape. One direction may be to produce a tape for home use — for example, a family celebration or vacation; another direction is to do an artistic tape, using the equipment to its limits of visual design; and a third is to develop informational material or cover a specific project or event for public viewing.



These are the three approaches Dr. Packard will cover and students may choose one area in which to produce a tape. Students will work on their tapes during the last half of the first session and may chose to do additional work during the week. Students may also go into the process of putting music to their tapes.

The second week will be devoted to assembly and editing of tapes and Dr. Packard may also teach the students how to use a titler machine. For the additional cost of a tape, a student can keep a copy of his or her work. Video tapes are shot on one-half inch VHS cassette tapes.

Dr. Packard was in the doctoral program for film making and video at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He is also participating in a post doctorate fellowship in expressive therapies at the University of Massachusetts.

His video production work is well recognized in Cohasset and he has served as a liaison for the community of Cohasset as it embarks on its venture into cable television.

For additional information pertaining to this workshop or any of the Center's programs, call 383-9548. Full fee payment is required for registration. Registration may be taken over the phone if a person has Visa or Mastercard.

Dr. John Packard will explain video production and cable television's impact to the schools Monday night at Cohasset High School.

Only real spooks like to be scared!!

By Lois Martin

People who like to be scared to death have always amazed me, especially if I happened to be a passenger in their car at the time.

I don't like to be scared. I truly dislike terror. And I've never had trouble discerning between what for me is excitement or horror. Brow-breaking perspiration, I think, is one of the differentials.

Thus, with Halloween, and our good-natured chuckling about little children dressed as spooks, I'm mindful that the true flavor of the holiday is scary.

PATCHES

I know people who I believe have confused terror and adventure. In fact one man's adventure is a frightening experience to someone else.

You take Kent White, for example, the night he scared the devil out of me. I ought to preface this by saying I've always been a good scare. Sneak up on me and whoop in my ear and you've got yourself a swell laugh becaue I'll shoot right up through the ceiling.

Anyway I was baybsitting, sweeping the floor even, the night Kent put his face flat against the window of the kitchen wherein I was sweeping. I was petrified when I glanced up to see Kent's deformed face on the pane. I screamed, frightening the children who were in my care, and then I recouped. I took the broom to Kent White once my senses had sallied forth in my behalf.

Then there was Clint Sadler who was an accessory to my dropping a lot of dishes on the floor of the Lobster House kitchen where we worked. Until...brightening with age I'm sure, he let me have it in both ribs one day with an accompanying shriek when I had a trayful of hot boiled lobsters. That surpeme moment I'd seen him coming out of the corner of my eye.

I placed the tray calmly on a table and whomped him a shot he never forgot. If I lost my glow of gentle feminity, it was well worth it. Clint faced me front-to from then on.

But I've never developed a yearning to be frightened. Those people who shriek and squeal on the roller coaster get off and buy another ticket.

When I was on the coaster, I was mute with terror, unable to scream, desparate when my weakened hands were all that kept me in contact with that little seat section. I don't do roller coasters anymore.

I don't like to do anything fast except work. But I'm intrigued by people who find excitement where I find terror, or maybe they find excitement in terror.

After all, one could say there's a peerless thrill in a plane that goes from 30,000 feet to the ground at high speed. And there have been a few thrills and chills in rides where the motorist dropped through a crumbling bridge.

My problem is I'm never quite convinced those carnival rides aren't the real thing.

At Disney World I was a brief sport when I went down the water slide. But on the way down, whipping around those corners up on the edges of the 'slide' I kept envisioning my body looping up and over the side and sailing right over Space Mountain while others hollered, "Look-at-er-go."

I just don't do fear for fun, haven't seen a horror movie since I grabbed an unsuspecting man next to me during "Jaws." He was clearly frightened and it wasn't because of the movie. He had started to wonder if I'd shinny up strangers if there were no trees around from which to escape the shark. By the time the movie was over he had learned the difference between celluloid excitement and real terror.

It boils down to some of us being more susceptible to emotions than other people. And fear is an emotion to which I prefer joy.

So this Halloween I won't be dressed as a spook anything. I won't dally around cemeteries or tell ghost stories. Instead I'd rather throw a little Harvest Bull...I'm sure I meant Ball.

Brain teasers

1. Phil and Tilly had four married daughters, and each of these had four children. No one in the three generations had died. Question: How many people were there in the family?

2. Tallyrand once described a substance first used by the Arabs this way: "It must be pure as an angel, strong as love, black as the devil, and hot as hell." What was it?

3. A fence separates my property from Hector's. My pet peacock flies over said fence and lays an egg on Hector's property. Who owns the egg, Hector or I?

4. What state in the U.S. is named for a famed Indian scout?

5. What is the world's largest living creature?

6. What food, very common that is eaten by most people every day, contains two deadly poisons?

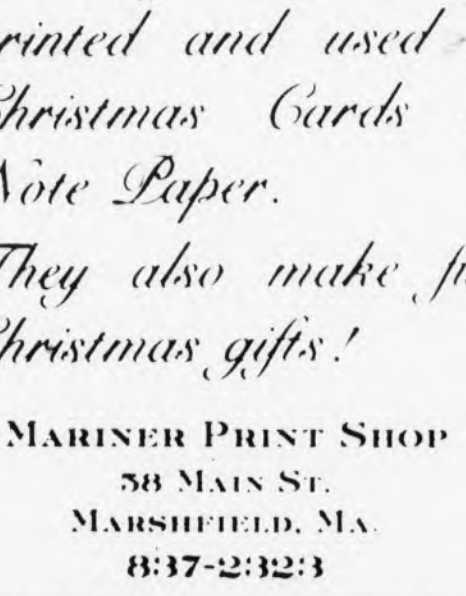
7. Most people think the capital of South Dakota is Pierre. Do you know what the capital of this state is?

8. Name five European countries which end in the letter "Y."

9. This U.S. president was a former newspaper publisher, a state senator and a U.S. Senator. A Republican, he was a compromise choice for the nomination and died in office. Who was he?

10. Are young or old turtles used to make mock turtle soup?

Answers



1. Twenty-six.
2. Coffee.
3. Neither. Peacocks don't lay eggs, peahens do.
4. Carson City, Nevada...for Kit Carson.
5. The blue whale.
6. Salt which contains sodium and chloride.
7. Pierre.
8. Germany, Italy, Hungary, Turkey and Norway.
9. Warren Harding.
10. Turtles aren't usually used to make mock turtle soup.

New Music: Blinded by Big Science

By J. Kuntz

The new music of today is a confusing business. Those top ten hits by Duran Duran and Culture Club go stale in about a week, only to be played even more by that sad excuse for a radio station—HTT. After a month, these songs are replaced by "newer" songs that sound exactly the same as the old batch. The lyrics to such songs range from boring to stupid but are always, in any case, repetitious. Remember Debbie Harry croaking, "The Tide Is High" over and over and over . . . ? Or the Go-Go's (who couldn't sing if their lives depended on it) saying "We got the beat!" Whoosh! What talent! Finally, the B-52's com along with the idea that being stupid is better than trying to be serious. After all, the only thing America wants is something to dance to, right?

Stepping into this mess is new comer Laurie Anderson, with a record—"Big Science," and a single "O Superman." It had all the physical facade of a typical, new-wave gimmicky brand of music. Anderson, with her large, silver, eyeglasses and scraggy haircut, fits the role of any new-wave star. The only problem is, Anderson's music fails to fit any category of "new music." Instead of singing, Anderson "talks" to the listener through a voice-activated synthesizer, called a Vocoder. This instrument, one of Anderson's many computerized toys, alters a voice's tone and character. Thus, at any moment, Anderson can change her voice from a child-like whine to the low bass of a middle-aged man. Another bizarre instrument Anderson uses is a Synclavier, an organ-like keyboard in which voices and sounds are assigned to various keys on the board. Her silver glasses aren't a gimmick, but another tool for her music. Wired for sound, these "electronic eyeglasses" magnify the sound she produces when she knocks her head or jaw. All these musical tools introduce a new "new" music. Not a synthesized mess, but clear, definite tones. rhythms and melodies. The wide variety of instruments includes bagpipes, horns, Rototoms, OBXA's, Glass harmonicas, Farfisa's, and other electronics.

Student Council on Trial

By Michael Greiner

One of the most important things in maintaining a successful democracy is an educated electorate. Yet, in Cohasset High School, where we claim to have a democratic student government, such an electorate does not seem to exist. I have come to this conclusion after asking at random twenty six students how much they knew about the student council. Only three of them knew enough about it to cast an educated vote. If this is representative of the student body, just over ten percent of the students who voted made an educated choice.

In addition, we have the influence of a group of students who experiment with drugs and alcohol on a regular basis. This clique exerts considerable influence on the student council "in a roundabout way, and a very negative way . . .", as was said by English teacher and ex-student council advisor, Mr. Reade. These disruptive elements, which make up the foundation of the council, lead to a popularity struggle and a figurehead kind of government. Mr. Reade said that probably as much as fifty percent of the student council consists of students not interested in student government.

The other fifty percent of the council is made up of individuals who are involved in almost anything. This kind of person would be willing to devote the work and time to student government if only he or she had some free time. Just as Mr. Reade said so well, "They can't stretch themselves far enough . . ." Thus we are left with a student council made up half of winners of a popularity contest, and half of intelligent representatives who can't devote the necessary time.

These are not the only problems faced by the student government. At least two other problems are apparent. First is the fact that the student representatives to the school committee are also the least effective members of the student council.

Finally, in my opinion, the biggest disappointment with the student council is missed expectations. Everyone whom I interviewed said something to the effect that the student council is important since it represents the students and protects their rights. This could be true, yet when I interviewed Phil Mahoney, a member of the student council who is in his second year in office, he said that the best thing the student council had done during his two years in office was to sell raffle tickets when the windows were broken last year.

Are there any solutions to these massive problems? Disbanding the student council is out of the question: public opinion opposes it strenuously. Although at this point the student council exerts practically no influence, teachers and students alike see the mechanism of what could be a topnotch student government. In this article I will offer no other solutions, so I invite your comments.

The New Kid in Town

By Vicki Spooner and Staci Stobart

This July, Cohasset welcomed Alison Griffiths from her native Prestwood, England. The immediate difference Ali noted was the change in climate. The moderate climate of England compared to the heat of last July shocked Ali. Her hometown of Prestwood, located north of London, is smaller than Cohasset and surrounded by open countryside. In contrast with the colonial atmosphere of Cohasset, Prestwood appears more rural than it did before. Not only did she mention the difference in towns, but also the differences in schools.

In England, she was required to pass an admissions test called the Twelfth Plus. The English call this grammar school. Two things she likes about C.H.S. is that she no longer has to wear a uniform and that the school includes both girls and boys. As far as her courses are concerned, she has to get used to having the same classes each day. For, in her school in England, her schedule changed every day. So, she would only have her A-level classes three or four times

Anderson's songs tackle some tough topics, such as the fear of flying, society's hold on the future, male chauvinism, machines that talk back, walking and falling simultaneously, sweater colors, and the old problem of being born without being asked first. Her single, "O Superman" involves Anderson talking to a voice on her phone answering-service: "Hi, I'm not home right now, but if you want to leave a message, just start talking at the sound of the tone . . . /Hello? Is anyone home? Well, you don't know me, but I know you/And I've got a message to give you . . . Here come the planes/So you better get ready/Ready to go/Come as you are/But pay as you go . . ."

"O Superman" reached the top of the British pop charts and many music critics' ten-best lists. To many, Laurie Anderson is a symbol of technology and the future; two things, ironically, she warns her listeners about:

You know, it could be you/It's a sky-blue sky/Satellites are out tonight/Let X equal X

Anderon's lyrics, believe it or not, are even weirder than her music. The spoken lines seem like verbal abstract art: seemingly meaningless, yet with a definite underlying meaning. Some appear as absolute nonsense. For example, the song: "Let X Equal X."

"I met this guy/And he looked like he might have been a hat-check clerk—at an ice rink/Which, in fact/He turned out to be/And I said: Oh boy/Right-/Again/

Let X Equal X/

Meaningless? It depends on the listener. Some people might sit down for hours trying to piece the whole thing together. Others say it's an intellectual put-on. Either way, "Big Science" is great new music that will stand the test of time (being in a class all its own)—A definite parent freaker.

a week. (By the way, their A-level classes are equal to our honors here. And we thought we had it bad!!)

Ali admits that when she first arrived here she "felt insecure and out of place," but she credits Cohasset students with helping her to adjust to the new school. She praises Cohasset kids for their friendliness, saying they were "more willing to say 'Hi' and join in conversations with me."

About C.H.S she claims that, "Everyone is the same," unlike England, which "is comprised of individuals." Similarly, she finds American music and comedy boring and unimaginative, saying "It's just the same old stuff." She also disagreed with the drinking in Mass. because she feels that the law encourages people to abuse alcohol. In England, the age for entering a pub is fourteen, the age for drinking liquor is sixteen, and the age to purchase liquor is eighteen. Even though the ages are younger in England, very few kids abuse it. Maybe that's a lesson we could all benefit from.

Ali often praises the people of Cohasset and the town itself for its eagerness to accept new students. Ali says, "Everyone has been really nice to me and no one's turned their backs on me, just because I am what I am." Well, Ali Griffiths, welcome to Cohasset and we hope you stay!

Don't Say "Down Under"

By John Kuntz

In case you're wondering what "Down Under" refers to, it's Australia, New Zealand and other countries in the Northern Pacific. To someone from New Zealand, this phrase (made popular by the group Men At Work) seems demeaning. Tui McArther, an exchange student from New Zealand, shudders at the thought of this label. "It's like a brand," she says, "It makes you feel lower than everyone else, mentally and physically."

Of her country she says, "New Zealand feels isolated, in a way, from the rest of the world." Her town in New Zealand, with a school of about two thousand pupils, seems quieter than Cohasset. (Is it possible, a town quieter than Cohasset?) "Everyone goes a lot faster here," Tui remarks. "The thirty minutes that it takes us to eat dinner here, takes two hours in New Zealand." Two hours you say? "Oh yes," Tui remarks. "The family meal usually consists of three courses." They also have afternoon coffee or tea, much like England. Unlike the typical quick American breakfast, in New Zealand, their breakfast usually is a large plate of bacon and eggs, toast and vegemite. "The food here is very sweet," Tui remarked. When asked what exactly vegemite is, she answered, "Vegemite? It's a yeast extract. It's a lot like peanut butter."

Having stayed with the Atkinsons for the past two months, she has had her first taste of America. She says of Cohasset, "I've never seen so many trees all around, and two story houses, and of course, highways with the cars on the right side instead of the left."

She is enjoying her AFS experience and is thankful there is no language barrier to go through. Often mistaken for an English accent, her New Zealand accent gives her away.

Tui, we hope you have a wonderful stay in Cohasset, and may C.H.S. always stay in your memory. For now, welcome and have fun!

P.S. Tui has a boyfriend in New Zealand. Sorry, guys!!!

New Faces

By Dawn Johnston and Cynthia Conklin

This summer Cohasset welcomed Hannamaija Helander and Tove Osterling. Hannamaija is staying with the Crockers, and Tove is staying with the Gilmours. Both enjoy being with their new families and like their new brothers and sisters. Tove especially likes having a sister her own age.

Both girls are from large towns, so coming to Cohasset is quite an experience for them. As Tove puts it, "The town is very small, but very beautiful." Both were impressed by the big houses and the courtesy of the people. Hannamaija's favorite part of the scenery is the ocean. She says, "Where I live, there are many islands on the coast, but here you can see far out into the ocean."

Both commented on the schools. Tove was surprised at the way the girls dress up. In her school, one would feel slightly out of place wearing the silk shirts and wool suits some of the students wear here. Hannamaija was shocked at the little time we have between classes. She says, "In my school, we have fifteen minutes between classes and a whole hour for lunch." She goes onto say, "Here it's just rush, rush, rush, from one class to the next."

Hannamaija and Tove both found the students of C.H.S. easygoing and fun to talk with. Although both think their year visit will go by fast, their only regret right now is that there aren't enough hours in the day to do all that they want to. Tove and Hannamaija, the C.H.S. Lamplight welcomes you to Cohasset and hopes that your stay is full of sunny days and warm smiles. Have fun!

Rent-A-Pilgrim

"If the mountain won't come to Mohammed, Mohammed must go to the mountain." Such was the case on Tuesday, October 4, when the 10th grade American Studies classes at CHS hosted Troy Creane, a guest lecturer from Plimoth Plantation. Because budgetary limitations prevented a scheduled field trip in which students were to interview Pilgrim craftspersons, arrangements were made to bring a part of the experience to Cohasset.

Dressed in the period costume and speaking the 17th Century dialect, Ms. Creane assumed the role "Elizabeth Hopkins," a housewife from 1627. Included in the presentation were a discussion of a typical day in her life, a revelation that baths are unhealthy and to be avoided, an explanation of foods available to the colonists, and many other aspects of life in the 17th Century colony. Such delicacies as dried pigs' feet, salted fish, and a smoked ham were passed around for the audience's examination. Volunteers were given a chance to dress in the heavy woolen clothing of the era.

The program was intended to supplement the study of colonial American history and literature in the 10th grade team-taught program. As a follow-up, students are researching skills necessary in early American times and will be demonstrating such activities as candlemaking, soapmaking, and food preserving to their classmates.

Attention Cohasset

The infamous Class of 1984 is finally leaving! In appreciation of our departure we would like you (yes you!) to buy a yearbook and celebrate this illustrious event.

Our beautiful book can be yours for the trifling sum of $20.00, if you pay now! Or payments can be made in two easy installments of $11.00 each.

By Joan Pinkham

All-Hallow-Eve, when ghosts and witches, goblins and clowns steal out at twilight to haunt the neighborhood, finds grown-ups taking up their post at the front door, ready to greet the little monsters who come trick or treating. Karen Sullivan gets as much fun out of the evening as the kids do, giving credit to the moms for the creative costumes worn by her callers. Last year there were about 75 ringing her doorbell, a lot less since the hateful poisoned candy scares of the past few years. Now it's mostly neighborhood kids, not strangers being chauffered from all over town who come scurrying up her path in little groups. Karen buys pre-packaged candy for treats, but for those who have the time, Judy Welch recommends these no-bake, energy-saving recipes, easy to make, but hard to resist.

Honey-Candied Apples

1/2 c. honey per apple
Ground walnuts
Sticks

Pour honey into mixing bowl. Spread ground nuts on flat plate. Insert sticks into apples. Dip each apple in honey, making sure honey covers every part of it. Hold over bowl to catch excess drips. Roll apple in ground nuts to cover. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Pat Yohn tells of a neighbor who dressed up as a scarecrow and draped himself on his front step in a shadowy spot. Intent on their trick or treating, it was not until the kids turned to go that they were startled to hear a voice softly murmur goodbye and see the scarecrow stir to wave them on their way. They're probably still running. Now that there are about 80 callers at Pat's, she no longer makes candy for Hallowe'en, but has fun making chocolate lollipops for treats for Richie and Melissa and their pals. Melting chocolate that comes in all colors, molds that are flower-shaped, or pumpkin, or holidayish, can be had at Lorraine's at Hanover Four Corners. I, for one, can't wait to get over there with all the holidays that are coming up. In the meantime, back to Halloween and another of Judy Welch's recipes for

Natural Candy

1 c. natural peanut butter
1/4 c. carob powder
1/4 c. mashed bananas
2 tsp. vanilla
Cinnamon

Mix together peanut butter, carob powder, bananas and vanilla. Shape into balls and roll in cinnamon. Store in refrigerator.

Sue Sulc doesn't know quite how many little callers to expect, this being her family's first Halloween in their new home. To be on the safe side, she will have a big bowl full of pre-packaged candy and let the little hobgoblins choose from sugar-free gum, bags of Fritos or boxes of raisins. There are an awful lot of grownups who love nothing better than a Halloween party and it's an occasion that lends itself prettily to decorating what with gourds, bittersweet, bayberry, hardy mums and, of course, the pumpkin. For a colorful table centerpiece, scoop out the pulp and place a plastic container inside the jack-o-lantern. In this way it becomes a container for an arrangement of mums, bayberry and grasses. Ever on the lookout for company dishes that can be made ahead of time, Community League members delighted in Eleanor Cuff's

No-Name Casserole

1 can cream of mushroom soup, 1/2 c. milk (combined)
1½ c. grated cheddar cheese
1½ c. UNCOOKED macaroni
2 pkg. Buddig smoked beef (cut up)
1 T minced onion

Mix together, turn into a 2-quart casserole, cover and refrigerate overnight. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 min., uncover, sprinkle with cornflake or cracker crumbs and return to oven for 30 min. more. Serves eight.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐Did you ever notice how proverbs contradict each other? Examples: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" and "Out of sight, out of mind."

☐Come to think of it, does absinthe make the heart grow fonder?

☐Immortal lines by Dorothy Parker: I would rather flunk a Wasserman test, than read a poem by Edgar A. Guest.

☐If I were editor of The New Yorker, once in awhile I would insert a cartoon that had absolutely no point.

☐Some parts of the Sahara Desert hide underground streams. People digging to reach fresh water sometimes catch fish.

☐The greatest mountain range lies under the sea. It is known as the Dolphin Rise and it expands from the Arctic to the Antarctic through the Pacific.

☐A verse from Ogden Nash: I'd expect to be robbed in Chicago,/But not in the home of the cod./So I hope that the Cabots and Lowells/Will mention the matter to God.

☐Want to change your appearance? Diet or dye it.

☐People usually quarrel because they cannot debate.

☐A politician is a man who stands for what he thinks other people will fall for.

☐Some anonymous sage noted that it isn't what a novelist says, but what he whispers. And, as you know, some folks will believe anything you tell them if you whisper it.

☐When he got tired of dancing, he led her to the bar. "Let's sip this one out," he said.

☐Have you heard about the Tammany maxim? "Claim everything, concede nothing and if defeated, allege fraud."

☐Engineer William Mulholland, who made possible the growth of Los Angeles with a master water plan was asked to run for mayor. "I'd rather give birth to a porcupine backwards than be mayor of Los Angeles," he said.

☐A bachelor has been called a man who never makes the same mistake once. He has also been called a man who is sometimes right.

CHS sports for the week . . .

Skippers lose homecoming to Norwell

The football team lost 27-12 to Norwell but that did not discourage the many dedicated fans who took out warm winter coats to watch the game and the homecoming festivities.

The big event at halftime was the parade of the homecoming king and queen. Football player Peter Caruso had earlier been chosen king, by his classmates.

Homecoming queen had been narrowed down from 10 candidates to four finalists: Ginger Ralff, Nancy Walls, Barbara Meers and Tammy Karcher.

Nancy Walls is the 1983 homecoming queen. Nancy is active in sports: field hockey, tennis and gymnastics. She is also in the drama club and will perform in Godspell.

During the homecoming week, every day had a different dress code theme. Sunglasses day made the black boards, blacker, fifty's day blended some old and new styles, hat day and tee shirt day were more fun and blue and white day sparked more school spirit.

At Friday's rally every team captain gave team updates. The cheerleaders kept the rally lively.

Saturday's turn out showed an overflow of spirit even though Norwell won.

Hull and Cohasset 25th anniversary

For years Hull and Cohasset have traded victories at their annual football game. This year they are going to sit down and pass coffee and scrambled eggs at a Hull-Cohasset 25th football game anniversary breakfast.

Twenty-five years ago Hull played their first game at Cohasset because Hull's football field was not ready.

Hull invited Cohasset players, the 25th year alumni and their Gridiron Club to the 9:30, before game breakfast at Hull High School..

Players on the 1957-58 Cohasset football team were: Bernie Mulcahy, Tony Emanuello, Rich Sylvia, Clark Chatterton, Patrick McCarthy, Hap Pompeo, Roger Pompeo, Richard Sylvia, Ray Vanderweil, Eddie Figueiredo, Greg Koval, Jim (Whitey) Campbell, Frank Carey, David Lincoln, Wally McCleary and Mike Hevey.

Cohasset Gridiron Club members are: George Wetzell, Pat McCarthy, Bob Walls, Ken Ekberg, Bob Ciciottee, Peter O'Laughlin, Bruce Cameron, Phil Cuff, Peter Conway, and Bob Meers.

Both 1983 football teams and coaches will attend. Also, Jim Wheeler, Hull's 1957 coach and Everett Dorr, Cohasset's 1957 head coach are invited. Dorr retired, last year as a physical education teacher after 33 years at Cohasset High.

Boys soccer

Boys soccer moved up to fourth place, in the South Shore League after a 5-3 game against Middleboro.

Middleboro bolted ahead with three goals in the first quarter of the game. Cohasset caught them in the second quarter with goals by Micheal DeSantis, assisted by Dave McDonald, John Replogle, assisted by Bobby Schultz and David Rice assisted by Mike DeSantis.

Cohasset picked up two more goals in the fourth quarter from Jim Rooney and David McDonald.

Duxbury will be the big challengers for the week. "The first time we played them this year we only lost 2-1. Noone else has come that close," said Coach John Anderson.

Cross Country conquers

The Cohasset cross country team charged ahead of Hull 31-26, to win their first meet.

Despite that Hull runner Bill McLeon crossed the finish line first at 15:46, Cohasset's Jim Reilly was not far behind at 15:53.

Cohasset consistency of Scott Fitzsimmons at 16:07 and Mike Bergenheim at 16:36 put Cohasset ahead.

Julie Hoogeveen was the only girl to run. She came across the line at 19:58, ahead of two runners.

Girls soccer

The girls soccer team had the toughest victory of the season in a 1-0 game against Rockland.

Janet DiGirolamo placed a lift kick right over the Rockland goalie's head and into the net. With 14 seconds left in the game a Rockland player kicked the ball from 20 yards but Cohasset goalie Tracy Fitzpatrick saved the game and the ball.

Cohasset earlier beat Norwell 3-0.

Coach Kennan Startzell attributes the success to "Solidifying the defense by moving players." Amy Duncombe moved from center halfback to sweeper back. Janet Bagouy took center halfback. Tara Stanford went to right halfback and Sara Seave to left halfback.

Amy Duncombe and Joan Chisholm's versatility are an asset to the team.

With a 5-5-2 record the team moved from sixth place in the league to fourth.

Winter soccer league planned

The November start-up date for the Winter Indoor Soccer League including male and female teams in the Under 10 to 30 and over divisions will begin at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham.

The Hingham facility now features a new soccer system—an Astro Turf field with hockey-type dasher boards.

"Over 75 teams from the South Shore, Boston and Middlesex County competed last winter during our first season. I expect over 100 teams this November so I hope the coaches register today," said General Manager Stanley Startzel, a former pro player with the New York Cosmos and Boston Minutemen.

"There is a division for every age group, Under 10, 12, 14, 16, 19, Adult and Over 30. Plus, it's cheap, only about $3 per player per game."

The South Shore Sports Center is a family oriented multi-use indoor sports and recreation facility in New England, featuring an indoor soccer surface.

Indoor soccer, spreading feverishly across the country, is attractive to everyone—boys and girls, junior players, women's leagues, company teams and the over 30 crowd. Clinics, leagues, camps and practice time are available. The Sports Center is located just off Rte. 3, at 100 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham.

Now you can teach your old phone some new tricks.

When the Bell System breaks up on January 1, 1984, a whole new range of possibilities will open up.

That makes it a perfect time for you to re-evaluate your phone service. Because the same old service you've always had isn't necessarily the best for you now.

Choosing a different local calling plan could save you money. Buying phones may be more economical in the long run. And you may be able to save with the new long-distance options, too.

There are a lot of new tricks you can teach your old phone. We'll be sending you more information in upcoming bill inserts, but here's a brief rundown of some of your options now.

Local service

New England Telephone will still be your phone company for local service. But that doesn't mean your local calling plan has to be the same as everyone else's.

If you make a lot of local calls, your best bet is probably Unlimited Service, where a flat monthly fee buys you unlimited calls within your local exchange area.

However, if you don't make many local calls, Measured Service could save you money. We offer different Measured Service plans in different areas, but they all give you the same benefit: the less you call, the less you pay.

Toll calls within your own area code

New England Telephone will still provide you with this service. And give you options to help you cut your calling costs.

We offer options for people who make a lot of toll calls to the same few nearby towns. Choices for people who call a wide variety of toll exchanges. Even plans that let you make two or more hours of toll calls all around your own area code. Different options for different needs. All designed to help you save.

Long-distance calls outside your area code

After the break-up, New England Telephone will continue to give you access to long-distance service. So you can still make and receive long-distance calls. Your present long distance service will continue after January 1. Or you can choose a new long-distance company if you wish. Just check your Yellow Pages for a complete listing, compare rates and services, and make your choice.

Equipment

When it comes to choosing telephones, you have more choices than ever!

If you prefer to lease your phones, simply keep the ones we've provided. After January 1 you'll automatically be leasing them from AT&T.

Want to buy the phone you now have? Contact your New England Telephone business office and they'll tell you how.

What if you'd rather buy your telephone equipment elsewhere? Just check your Yellow Pages for a list of telephone retailers.

To change—or not to change?

The choice is yours. You don't have to make any changes if you don't want to—and you'll barely notice the break-up after January 1.

But now that you have so many different options to help you control your calling costs, it could benefit you to re-think your phone service. Because teaching old phones new tricks could mean your phone bill will take a smaller bite out of your budget.

If you have questions about the changes outlined here, call our special toll-free "Let's Talk" number. It's 1 800 555-5000. Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Or watch for more detailed information in your bill inserts.

Cohasset beaten by Norwell for Homecoming

Cohasset was far behind Norwell, 21-6 for most of the homecoming game but they scored and intercepted the ball with five minutes left for a final score of 27-12.

John O'Connell scored with a pass from David Barcomb with almost six minutes left in the game. Cohasset used a passing strategy in the game.

With five minutes left, Mark Lahive completed a pass on the twenty yard line. Cohasset tried four times to complete a pass from the 20 yard line to the goal line. Every time a Norwell player knocked down the pass.

Jay Contis scored the first Cohasset touch down. But Cohasset could not score again until the end of the fourth quarter. Had Cohasset's comeback started earlier, they might have overthrown Norwell.

Joanne Chisholm dribbles a ball during a recent soccer match played against Norwell. (Rose Cundari photo)

Field hockey girls continue tying streak

Cohasset continues in their tying streak, at 1-3-10, as they tied Hanover 1-1 and Abington 0-0 last week.

Nancy Walls assisted Vickie Spooner's only goal against Hanover.

Middleboro defeated Cohasset 1-0. "They scored as soon as the game began. We really dominated that game but we just couldn't score." said Coach Gino DiGirolamo.

The Middleboro loss knocked Cohasset out of the states.

Full backs Jenny Mitman and Julie Atkins played excellent defense in all three games. Goalie Lisa Schumaker has been outstanding with over 100 saves this season.

This week, Cohasset will play East Bridgewater and Scituate, the only team they beat this season.

☐The freshman Cohasset contingent at Colby College are reported to be contented and contributing to the college community. Krissie Ralff is on the varsity tennis team and has played in every intercollegiate match so far, with a record that matches the team's. Susan Douglas is in the Powder and Wig, the dramatic society, and is in the cast for the first production of the current season. The title of the play is "The Butler Did It," a murder mystery. Elaine Mullen had a successful audition for the Colby Dancers and is now an apprentice member of the troupe. Elaine has also been selected as a football cheerleader. Susan and Elaine have a Japanese lesson every morning right after their breakfast.

OSGOOD
SPECIAL NEEDS FIELD TRIP

The Early Special Needs class and Primary Language Program students made a trip to Boston last week to visit the Children's Museum during Special Needs Awareness Month. The children enjoyed all the "Kid Oriented" exhibits. They smiled a lot for the Evening Magazine cameras on location for a show on the "What If You Couldn't . . . " exhibit now on display at the Museum.

GREAT BOOKS

Delia DiBenedetto (Grade 2), Shirley Tewksbury (Grade 2), Marie Price (Kindergarten), and Dorothy Montouri (Grade 3) are the Osgood teachers who teach Great Books training and could use some volunteer help in implementing the program.

SNAPPER SNEAKERS SHAPE-UP DAY

More than 200 joggers and cheerers were attracted to the Snapper Sneaker Shape-Up Day at Osgood Oct. 20. With the usual theme of "We finish what we start," the task took on new proportions this year. One father jogged with his baby in his arms; a mother pushed her pre-scholer around the track in a stroller; many pre-schoolers walked/jogged with their brothers and sisters. The turnout of mother joggers was the best ever!

The opening ceremony included a welcome by Principal Jack Creamer and two songs by the children led by Jean Fink. Snapper Sneakers, in his bright green costume, and Auntie Litter (Letitia Jordan), who brought children awareness of the importance of keeping the playground free of litter, joined the event.

Mary-Ann Hansen was official starter for the children as they began their laps of the quarter mile jog trail. Kindergarten runners went around once; first graders, one or two laps; second graders, two or three laps; and third graders, three or four laps. Other fitness fun included tug-of-war demonstrations by the third grade and recess fitness activities.

DEER HILL
PEN PALS

Mrs. McDonald's fifth graders are "getting involved" with Cohasset's senior citizens. The children eagerly await the mailman's stop at school each day for letters from their pen pals at "Harborview." The senior citizens have responded enthusiastically to the children's letters.

SPELLING BEES

Sixth grade spelling bee teams have been established and will compete six times this year at six week intervals. Individual and team winners will be announced next week.

Mr. Becker's room—Royal Bolling, Juliana Chittick, Nora McCathy and Hilary Proodian.

DOUG MOE

Doug Moe is the present fifth grade spelling bee winner—congratulations, Doug!

JR/SR HIGH "THE CHEMICAL PEOPLE"

Michael Gill, health education coordinator, the Cohasset Community Health Education Advisory Committee, and the PSO support this two-part program, to be aired on WGBH-TV Channel 2 at 8 p.m., Wednesdays, Nov. 2 and 9, and urge parents and students to watch. This program has the participation of over 25 national organizations and over 200 local PBS stations across the country.

Program one offers hard information about alcohol and drug problems and the second program will show how other parents, schools and neighbors are fighting drugs and alcohol and what a task force does.

LAW CONFERENCE

Edward Sheehan, chairman of the social studies department, recently attended an all-day law conference at the Mass. Bar Assoc. in Boston. The conference was organized to bring junior high and high school teachers together with practicing attorneys. Ronny Sidney, law teacher at Brookline H.S., explained the lawyer-teacher partnership program sponsored by the Mass. Bar Assoc.; 25 schools now participate. Other speakers were Prof. Arlene Gallagher on new curriculum materials in school law, Atty. E. Steven Coren on trial procedures and Atty. Ernest Dodson on a reenactment of the Boston Massacre Trial of three British soldiers in 1770. Sheehan teaches a course offered to seniors on an elective basis on the American judicial process.

WINTER SPORTS

All winter sports start the Monday after Thanksgiving weekend, Nov. 28. All students in grades 7-12 are eligible for the gymnastics, wrestling, boys and girls basketball, and ice hockey programs. If a student does not make the varsity program in hockey or basketball, there is a junior varsity program. There also is a separate junior high program for boys and girls in basketball.

Announcements for sign-ups and team meetings will be made around the second or third week in November.

Since four out of five of varsity coaching positions are held by non-staff members, it is difficult to reach them during the day. Please direct questions to Athletic Director Clark Chatterton at school (383-6103) or home (383-0560).

DUNKIN' DONUTS ADDRESS

Francis Kane, administrative director for Dunkin' Donuts, spoke to Joan Wool's Business Management classes Oct. 6.

Kane traced the development of Dunkin' Donuts from a coffee truck to a corporation now boasting stores in such exotic places as San Paulo, Brazil and Egypt.

Kane explained the main structure of franchising. The parent corporation supplies the research and development and gives ideas and the license to individuals who work under the name of Dunkin' Donuts.

The company's distribution process is new and unique. They have moved to a central buying program which aids self-distribution. He explained the lengthy process of examining a geographical location for a distribution center and the necessary demographic studies.

The key to the success of Dunkin' Donuts may lie in its education programs. Dunkin' Donuts University trains managers in effective, proven marketing and management techniques, and all managers must successfully pass this program.

The responsibilities of the district sales managers include checking the product in individual stores to be certain that quality control is being kept up, and making comparison studies among the district stores.

Kane emphasized the job possibilities with the corporation in areas such as auditing, marketing, economics, and research. They look for good educational transcripts, especially a specific degree in the aforementioned. The corporation chooses individuals who are educated in New England because they seem to have the qualification and identity with a specific geographical area that the corporation prefers.

Kane also presented Mrs. Wool with certificates for donuts that the students will be getting soon.

PSO SCHOOL CALENDARS

Many thanks to parents who sent in a donation for their PSO school calendars . . . Won't those of you who haven't, please send a check today? Your contributions are tax-deductible.

SPECIAL NEEDS PROGRAM

Wednesday, Nov. 2 the PSO Special Needs Committee will present Dr. Jean Mooney speaking on the topic: "Learning Disability: Is it for Life?" Dr. Mooney is currently directing the Special Needs Masters' Program at Boston College. Dr. Mooney is reknown in the field of Special Needs Education. Her presentation promises to be both enlightening and informative. Plan to attend.

PSO AND BOOKPORT AGREEMENT

Bookport of Hingham has offered the Cohasset schools and the PSO a "WIN-WIN" opportunity. Bookport is a book-gift store, located in Lincoln Plaza (next to Marshall's), boasting the South Shore's largest children's section. From Oct. 31 through Nov. 24, Bookport will donate 15 percent of the sales to the Cohasset Parent School Organization.

This agreement presents an opportunity for Cohasset residents to get a headstart on holiday shopping and also help the local PSO.

During the next few weeks the PSO will be offering gift suggestions in the school's weekly menus. Hopefully, some of the ideas will be appealing and will generate both business for Bookport and much-needed funds for the PSO.

PSO YARD SALE SUCCESSFUL

Despite cool temperatures and blustery winds, spirits were high at last Saturday's PSO Homecoming yard sale. The event was a shopper's paradise.

The yard sale was climaxed by a raffle drawing. The PSO fund raising committee sold raffle tickets for items donated by generous Cohasset merchants. The prizes and the lucky winners are as follows: Dinner for two at Hugo's Lighthouse, Dan Volungis; Cohasset baked goods from the Bread Shop, Paul Hiltz, Hull and Robin Lawrence, Cohasset; silk flower arrangement from the Silkworm, Ann Parsons, Scituate; knit hat from Lucy's Lids, Linda Farrag, Cohasset; breakfast for two at Kimball's by the Sea, Megan Connolly, Cohasset; hair cut and blow dry from Hair Imports, Letitia Jordan, Cohasset.

Tax bills prediction comes true

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza is turning out to be the great prognosticator as his August prediction of estimated tax bills is coming true.

Estimated tax bills based on last year's tax rate will be mailed out to property owners by mid-November.

These bills, due to the town within 30 days of receipt, will be one half of last year's total tax bill. Last year's assessment and tax rate of $55.50 per $1,000 valuation will be used.

A few weeks ago Assessor Chairman Brian Wilkin said 100 percent revaluation was nearing an end and a new tax rate of nearly $20 per $1,000 valuation would be set by Dec. 1.

However the state Dept. of Revenue has notified asssessors it would take 12 weeks before the town's revaluation could be checked for accuracy and certified.

Recently, Town Treasurer Gordon Flint borrowed $2.5 million to carry the town until mid-December. Interest rates ranged from 4.33 to 4.86 percent. This means borrowing will cost the town $29,025.

In August, Lanza said he has been through the problems of reassessment five times during past work experiences. He was to recommend to selectmen the town send out tax bills at the end of September based on estimates from the previous revaluation.

However, the decision to send out estimated tax bills is under the jurisdiction of assessors.

When 100 percent revaluation is completed and certified, assessors must hold public meetings and send out impact notices to all homeowners.

Wilkin said few homes in Cohasset will be valued at less than $60,000.

He also said some people's bills will go up and some will go down but they won't be going up or down that much. Those homeowners who have not had their homes on the market for decades will see a sharp increse in their assessments.

Sewer Commission forms Committee

Sewer Commissioners are forming a citizens committee to act as a liaison between Ward Engineering Associates, the Commission and Cohasset residents.

Charles DeSantis, Sewer Commission Chairman said the citizens committee will "aid in the implementation of the Ward report and to provide input to the Board on behalf of various town interests with the objective of facilitating a plan which will be acceptable to a very substantial majority of citizens of the town."

Ward Engineering Associates prepared a report for Cohasset last spring which describes the various options available to the town for remedying its sewage problems.

To accurately represent the opinions of Cohasset's citizens, committee members will be chosen from a wide range of interest groups.

The Sewer Commissioners would like to recruit a fisherman, a member of the local business community, a person from the public school system, a town official and a resident from each of six geographical areas in Cohasset.

Selectman Chairman Mary Jane McArthur has volunteered to serve on the committee.

The first citizens committee meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 9 at 8 p.m. at the Rotary Hall, 43 Elm St. Sewer Commissioners will attend this meeting and choose a temporary chairman for the committee. The committee will choose a permanent chairman at a later date.

The committee will meet at least once a month. Members will receive copies of the Ward Engineering monthly progress reports and will make on-going recommendations to sewer commissioners and Ward Engineering.

Meetings of the Waste Water Advisory Committee will be posted and will be open to the public.

Members of the Waste Water Advisory Committee include the following to date: Richard Avery, William Baird, Stephen Bartow, Arthur Clark, Jean Cotton, Jackie Dormitzer, Galt Grant, Herbert Jason, Fred Johansen, Chartis Langmaid, Mary Jane McArthur, Henry Rattenbury, Rita Strong, Diane Sullivan and Gary Vanderweil.

School board takes a peak at cable

By Theresa Sullivan

The School Committee had a sneak preview Halloween night of the $17,000 worth of video equipment which now belongs to the school department.

The equipment was given to the schools by American Cablesystems as part of the contract with the town.

John Packard, audio visual specialist for the schools, said the the equipment would be used as an educational aid, rather than as a separate mode of study.

"It's a step above what we have normally had in the schools,"Packard said. "Putting this into their hands might even be as much fun as a computer."

Packard said the equipment will not be greared to the few students who plan to develop a career in television and cable, but rather as an educational aid for all students.

"It has no value unless it meets educational goals," he said.

Supt. Eugene Crowell said Cohasset will be able to offer specialized classes, via the television screen, which may be impossible to keep otherwise.

A teacher instructing a Latin 4 class could do so before the video camera and it could be transmitted to other towns, Crowell said.

"Are we planning to teach our basics--literature, mathematics, science--with cable? We feel the answer is yes," he said.

The television studio will include an editing room, a filming room, a production board and a storage area for the two camera units, two television monitors, video recording devises, tripods, microphones and broadcast equipment.

The equipment will be housed in rooms 106 and 107, which is near the central office. Committee Chairman Jack Langmaid said the school would have to improve security given the video equipment and the microcomputers which are now in the school.

Most of the filming apparatus is designed to be portable, allowing sports and artistic events to be filmed.

Board meetings and church services have been filmed and aired live in other towns, said Wendy Forman, local program director.

Forman said high school students could start a radio station, broadcast in stereo. Students could broadcast music, talk shows and sporting events. Forman said Arlington, one of American's customers, has a high school radio station which is on the air 30 hours a week.

Paçkard said the equipment is sophisticated enough to satisfy the needs of the few students who will most likely take a strong interest in video and in producing shows. Forman said other communities have local programming which is produced soley by the community.

The school department will provide in-service training for teachers. Faculty members may also participate in workshops run by American Cablesystems. Forman directed a workshop to teachers in Scituate.

If American receives its final cable TV license from the selectmen, the company plans to wire the town for cable in the spring. By that time, said Packard, students will be trained and ready to begin broadcasting local events.

Peer Counseling is CHS training success

By Moira McCarthy

Students helping students. That's the theme at Cohasset High School, where the Peer Counseling program is well into it's second year of service.

The program, initiated last year by the guidance department, trains juniors and seniors to counsel, tutor, and just befriend seventh graders as well as any new students at the high school.

According to guidance counselor Mary Babaian, the program has been an exciting one right from the start.

Babaian came across the idea of peer counseling when she heard about it from a Sherborne counselor. The idea sparked some interest in her, so she went up to Sherborne to watch the process in action.

Just that look was enough to convince her that it was a worthy project, and she' along with guidance counselor Anne Porter attended a special peer counseling course at Northeastern University that summer. In the fall, they were ready to begin.

That first year, the guidance department started with a list of students reccomended by teachers and guidance counselors.Babaian and Porter interviewed each of them, narrowing the list down to 14 students, some boys, some girls, some juniors, and some seniors.

"We purposely kept the group small," Babaian said, "We wanted a handle on it, because it's important to train and to train well."

Those students then began their training.

"We don't give exams. We learn by doing. Anything we have to know, we do.

"For their first contact with students, we wanted to bring them in slowly, so we brought them in with us while we (the guidance department) met with seventh

Cohasset's week . . .

John Roy resigns

John Roy's resignation as alternate member of the Zoning Board of Appeals was accepted "with regret" by selectmen at a Wed. Oct. 12 meeting.

Cohasset volunteers honored

Four Cohasset volunteers were recently honored for donating their free time to the Brockton Hospital this summer.

From Cohaset were: Lindsey Berents, Mary Leonard, Dona Tehranian and Sussanne Tehranian.

Public landfill closed Nov. 24

The public landfill will be closed Thursday, Nov. 24, Thanksgiving Day. Please plan ahead because this means a closure of the landfill for two consecutive days since Wednesdays are the normal closing days.

Please save all those holiday papers, cans and bottles for recycling.

Cook to serve on committee

Debra Cook will serve on the solid waste and disposal sub-committee of the Tri-town commission.

Donald DiMicheal was previously appointed.

TH observes Veterans Day

Selectmen voted to close Town Hall at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 10, and not open it during the evening that day.

The early closing recognizes Nov. 11, Veteran's Day, is an observed holiday and a Friday.

By observing a holiday on a Friday, the employees receive only 4½ work hours off. The 2½ hours gained by closing earlier than normal on Thursday evenings gives the employees the seven hours they are entitled to when a holiday falls on any other work day.

Following the same principle, the observance of Thanksgiving Day on a Thursday gives the employees 9½ hours off; 2½ of which must be made up.

The make up of the 2½ hours will be accomplished by treating Friday, Nov. 25, as though it were a regular work day

Per order of selectmen, Town Hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Nov. 25, and each employee will be entitled to the customary one hour lunch break.

Board of Health workshop

Nov. 2 and Nov. 3, the Board of Health will be holding a free food service workshop and Ron Herzberg, Federal Food & Drug Administration, will be conducting the seminar from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. both days to accomodate scheduling of employees.

Both days' seminar content will be the same so the same employees don't have to attend both days. This will enable a greater number of employees from each establishment to attend. A slide presentation will be held.

The Board of Health urges businesses with one to five employees to send one employee each day; businesses with six to 12 employees should send two employees each day; and businesses with over 12 employees should send three employees each day.

Please call the Board of Health at 383-1664 to register. All are invited to attend. It's free of charge!

Lee Andres, secretary of the Cohasset Fireman's Benefit Association, and Bernard Salvador, the president, presented Chief Martin Dooley with two cold water suits recently.

Fuel assistance applications

Fuel Assistance applications will be accepted at the Cohasset Town Hall Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., until further notice.

Representative from the South Shore Community Action Council will assist fuel applicants in filling out applications.

Volunteers from the Council on Aging and other organizations will assist.

Applicants are required to have necessary "Documentation of Income" for the previous 90 days, Social Security verification and "Primary Source of Heat" bills for after Oct. 1, 1983.

Volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed in January or February to help with the "Handicap Awareness Program" at the elementary school level.

Units to be presented will teach children about blindness, deafness, physical handicaps, learning disabilities and mental retardation.

In addition, aids, appliances and equipment are needed.

For further information and details, please call: Norma Grassey, 383-6857; Taffy Nothnagle, 383-0895, and Maria Plante, 383-9263.

Lunch program regulations

The Federal Government has issued new regulations which affect the school children who seek to participate in the school lunch program through free and reduced price meals.

Under these regulations, school administrators of the lunch programs must require a randomly selected number of parents to provide evidence verifying the income stated on children's lunch application forms.

Three percent of all applicants who have been approved by their schools as being qualified recipients of a free or reduced price meal will be selected and asked to provide documentation of income. Such documentation can include wage stubs, award letters, letters from employees, or current participation in the Food Stamp Program.

If the verification process does not confirm eligibility or if the parents refuse to provide documentation, the school administration will give a 10 day notice of termination or change of benefits and will provide a mechanism for appeal.

Police Chief grievance

Selectmen heard a police officer union grievance against Chief Joseph Kealey for failure to post a police prosecutor's position.

Kealey said, "An opening of shifts is required for a uniform shift. The prosecutors job is not a uniform position. On that basis the grievance should be rejected."

Sgt. Richard Barrows said that the chief should post a position as police prosecutor once the position is established with a new work schedule.

Kealey said, "A particular assignment as a safety officer, or prosecutor is an assignment, not an opening in the shift. We just changed the prosecutors days off so the prosecuting schedule will meet with the court schedule."

Sewer letter is coming

Within the next few days residents will receive a letter and questionnaire from Cohasset's engineers, Ward Engineering Associates.

The information provided by residents on the questionnaire will be a vital tool for identifying the most cost effective and affordable combination of solutions for the town's sewage disposal problems.

The Sewer Commission asks that residents be on the lookout for the letter, read it carefully and provide as much information as they can on the questionnaire.

Cooperation is vital for the community's future use.

A resident's reply will be held in complete confidence by Ward Engineering and will be used for statistical purposes only.

Cohasset Chamber interest is growing

By Mike Berger

The interest in the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is growing.

The chamber has met twice and 120 business representatives attended both meetings, according to chamber president Dan Leahy of Hugo's Restaurant.

New officers besides Leahy are Joseph Quinn of Cushing Plaza, vice-president; Ed Goff of Goff Construction, first vice president; and Jim Kearney, second vice-president in charge of budget and finance.

Other officers are Cynthia Peters, secretary; Wayne Sawchuck, community development; Brian Noble, business development; John Hegarty, public relations and Linda Peters, new membership.

Atty.Richard Henderson will file the organization's legal papers to make the chamber official.

Leahy said before any events are planned, the chamber board must decide a fiscal structure and membership dues.

The chamber, as a whole, will strive for better communication between community and residents and also help to fill the empty stores on Cohasset Village and Rte. 3A.

Leahy told those interested in the chamber recently, "We're not going to work for you. You will have to work with us and we're all going to do something together."

Leahy is pleased that a good complement of all business and professional representatives have demonstrated interest in the chamber.

But he added the chamber won't survive and shouldn't over-extend itself without a strong financial organization.

back a business when it goes before a town government board.

A recent meeting of the chamber was hosted by John and Mary Roy who opened the dining room of the Cohasset-By-The Sea motel for the meeting.

Regarding dues, Leahy said there hasn't been a hard and fast policy and an executive board meeting Nov. 3 should help to form a fiscal structure.

A long range goal for the chamber would be to hire a staff with office space. In addition, the chamber could

BASKETBALL LEAGUE REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for Youth Basketball League Saturday, Nov. 5, from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Town Hall.

The fee is $6 per person and a 50 percent discount fee will be offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family.
